FIRE ENGINEERS END STRIKE

U. S. FLAG AND GOBS ATTACKED BY MEXICANS

Sailors Robbed Near Tampico; Wilson to Act at Once.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—The Mexican situation, already a grave one with its series of unpunished murders of American citizens, assumed still graver proportions today, when news of the robbery of American sailors by armed Mexicans near Tampico reached Washington.

Sailors from the U. S. S. Cheyenne were held up by armed men while in a small boat fishing on the Tamesi river and robbed of their personal effects. The date of the outrage was July 6, but the state department was not advised until today.

Urgent representations, the state department admitted tonight, have been made to the Carranza government and the Tampico authorities, and announcement is made that the Mexican authorities have promised to investigate at once.

Promise to Look It Up.

Nothing is said in the official announcements about any promises from Mexico to do more than investigate. Naval officials are incensed and Secretary Daniels has wired for fuller particulars of the incident, which bids fair to bring the strained relations between Mexico and the United States to a climax that may forge a new American policy with respect to the troublesome republic.

Official announcement of the incident was made by the state department tonight, as follows:

"The department of state has just been advised that on July 6 a boat from the U. S. S. Cheyenne and occupied by enlisted men of that vessel who were on a fishing trip was held up on the Tamesi river, near Tampico, by armed men. The sailors were robbed of their personal effects."

The statement also announced that an explanation had been asked.

Further meager advices received here are to the effect that the stars and stripes were flying from the launch when the attack was made, but this had no effect upon the Mexicans.

Under the edict of the Carranza government soldiers and police are permitted to carry firearms and it is assumed that the American sailors were unarmed. The territory is under full control of the Carranza government.

Wilson Approves Statement.

Before the state department issued its formal announcement concerning the assault, it is understood the text was submitted to President Wilson and that he gave his full approval to its publication.

Official Washington generally was aroused and Assistant Secretary of State Phillips admitted that it was one of the gravest of many grave occurrences which have been staged in Mexico within recent months. There was an immediate resumption of predictions that intervention in some form might be the outcome; but prominent officials refused to make any comment.

Naval officers were the most stirred by what they termed another gross insult to the service and to the flag. To some it appeared as a repetition of the Tampico incident of April 10, 1914, which led up to the occupation of Vera Cruz.

U. S. Consuls Gets Busy.

American consuls in the Tampico district have been instructed to make a thorough investigation and forward a complete report. When this information is at hand, a definite announcement of some kind is expected either from President Wilson or the state department.

Just when the state department dispatch was received is not known, but as soon as it was made public, information was sought from Secretary Daniels. He intimated the state department announcement was the first he had heard of the incident. He got into communication with Admiral Benson and soon afterward produced the dispatch, dated July 7, from Commander Earl P. Finney, senior naval officer in charge of vessels in the Tampico district:

"U. S. S. Cheyenne's motor sailing launch with a fishing party held up

MARSHALL FIELD SEEKS TO ALTER FAMOUS WILL

Prepares Suit to Get Possession of Bulk of Big Estate.

Capt. Marshall Field, III, grandson of the founder of the Field estate and business, is about to ask for a new and more favorable court interpretation of the famous Field will, which disposed of an estate valued at about $125,000,000, and yet tied it up by intricate legal means to hold it together for a generation or two.

Capt. Field's intention to seek a modification of the drastic terms of the will became known yesterday as his attorneys, the firm of Miller, Starr, Brown, Packard, and Peckham, were preparing to file a lengthy cross bill this week in the suit filed in the Superior cours in February, 1918, to construe the will of the late multi-millionaire.

A Two-fold Purpose.

While members of the law firm would not comment upon the proposed action in advance of the actual filing of the cross bill, it is said that its purpose is two-fold:

To obtain complete possession of the bulk of the estate which was left to Marshall Field III. and Henry Field, the second and younger grandson, who died in New York June 17, 1918. Under the will the estate was to be divided in the proportion of 60 to 40 between the two sons, but not until they had attained the age of 50 years.

To set aside the drastic trusteeship which the terms of his grandfather's will provided for and which has practically limited his benefits to a portion of the income therefrom.

"Purpose Only to Clarify."

It is also understood that young Mr. Field and his attorneys take the stand that the action is not intended to "break" the Field will, but simply to clarify and modify its complicated terms as the grandson interprets them, breaking only the clauses which hold it in trust for so many years.

He is also declared to believe that Marshall Field Sr. had decided to alter the complicated and restricting trusteeship, but died before accomplishing this. Mr. Field died in New York in January 1906 after a week's illness from pneumonia.

There is a third grandchild, Gwendolen Field, who, under the will, receives the income on a trust fund. That fund is to be $1,000,000 when she is 35. She does not participate largely in the estate except under the condition that both her brothers should die, in which case she would be heir to one-fourth of the vast fortune, the other three-fourths under those circumstances to go to heirs of Marshall Field Sr.'s brothers.

Contemplated for Some Time.

The suit by Capt. Field is said to have been in contemplation since young Henry Field's death and before the filing of the bill by Mrs. Peggy Marsh, asking for an annuity for her child under an agreement made by Henry Field, who acknowledged parentage of the boy, born in London.

Mrs. Marsh's claim was settled on behalf of his dead brother by Marshall Field III. for $100,000 cash. The new suit, it is pointed out, may be intended also to forestall a second claim that the child is entitled to a portion of the great share left to the late Henry Field. However, that claim is understood to have been amicably settled by the $100,000 payment.

Elihu Root in Case.

Elihu Root and John B. Stanchfield of New York and John S. Miller of Chicago have drawn the cross bill after months of preparation. It has been printed and held pending the filing of the accounting of the trustees of the estate.

FIELD MARSHAL HAIG STRICKEN AT BIG PARADE

LONDON, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig was taken ill and had to be removed to his home in Kingston in a motor car after the victory parade today. Many had noticed that Field Marshal Haig looked ill while riding at the head of his men.

OLD H. C. L. GETS BUMPING ON SOUTH SIDE

Thousands of residents of the south side grabbed old Hi Cost of Living by the leg yesterday and held him for at least five hours. That's just how long fourteen truckloads of produce lasted at the marketing sheds erected by the Harper Street Improvement association for the producer-to-consumer system of selling food.

Cabbages sold at five cents a head, potatoes at fifty cents a peck. Onions, five cents a bunch, beets, two bunches for a nickel. Watermelons of about the size of the R-34 were rolled away for thirty-five cents. And women came from all over the city to the sheds at Fifty-fourth court and Halsted street.

According to William Molony, president of the association, sales will be held daily, excepting Saturday and Monday.

BOOTLEGGING HIT IN NEW DRY BILL

Search of Home Authorized in Certain Circumstances.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—The drys in the house voted into the prohibition enforcement bill tonight a search and seizure provision which will operate against any private home where it is charged that liquor is sold.

The provision was adopted as an amendment to the original search and seizure action, which the wets sought to strike from the bill and failed by a vote of 70 to 73.

Immediately after the drys had outvoted the opposition on this point they jammed through an amendment which struck out the limitation in the original provision directing that search warrants should only be issued against a private house where it was charged liquor was sold when the house was partly used for some business purpose.

Carried by 78 to 61.

The amendment making the search provision more drastic was carried by a vote of 78 to 61.

In the bill as it came to the house the provision read as follows:

"No search warrant shall issue to search any private dwelling occupied as such unless it is partly used for some business purpose, such as a store, shop, saloon, restaurant, hotel, or boarding house."

When the drys who rode roughshod over the liberals all day got through with the provision all reference to connection with a store, shop, etc., was stricken from it. As the bill now stands a search warrant may be issued against any private dwelling where it is charged liquor is sold.

Representative Barkley's amendment, adopted 71 to 51, strikes at blind tigers and is designed to make it impossible for bootleggers to operate from private residences.

Rounding out a week of bitter debate, the opposing factions argued to a late hour tonight.

John Barleycorn's little brothers—hard cider and elderberry wine—were strenuously fought over, with "Uncle Joe" Cannon scrapping with a flash of his old time fire. He warned the house it could not enforce a law which said a man could not make a barrel of cider at his own home or drink it.

"Never Needed as Medicine."

The attitude of the dry forces was indicated by Chairman Volstead during consideration of the section relating to liquor drinking on trains and boats. Representative Gard, Democrat, of Ohio, insisted that the word "publicly" should be added because as the section stood it would be a crime for a sick or dying person to be given a drink on a train.

"No occasion ever arises when liquor is really needed as a medicine," said [illegible] Volstead.

LABOR TROUBLES AT A GLANCE

Eighty thousand stockyards workers will demand a 30 per cent increase in wages on Tuesday from the packers under threat of a general strike. Ten thousand are now out. A massmeeting is to be held this afternoon at Forty-seventh and Robey streets.

Gov. Lowden, realizing the seriousness of the impending street car strike, ordered Chairman Thomas E. Dempcy of the public utilities commission to inquire into the facts and avert a strike if possible. Mayor Thompson named a committee also to investigate it. Both committees meet tomorrow.

The striking engineers of the fire department agreed at midnight to return to work and leave their wage dispute to arbitration.

The carpenters are standing pat on their demands for $1 an hour, the contractors making the lockout tighter and the other building trades "cussing" under their breath.

BACK ON JOB; LEAVE WAGES TO ARBITRATION

J. F. Cullerton Given Credit for Compromise.

The strike of the fire engineers and their assistants, which began at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, ended at midnight this morning, and the men went back to work with cheers.

John F. Cullerton, manager of the properties of the fire department, who "wrastled" with the strikers all day long, is given full credit by the men for the settlement of the strike.

The grievances of the 250 strikers will be laid before a board of arbitration to consist of five members, two to be appointed by the strikers, two to be members of the city council finance committee, the other to be the fire marshal.

Statement of Engineers.

The engineers issued this statement:

"We, the undersigned grievance committee, representing the fire engineers and assistant fire engineers in the wage controversy with the city of Chicago, have agreed to submit all differences to an arbitration board and to return to work on the word of the fire marshal.

"This arrangement has been brought about by John F. Cullerton, manager of properties of the fire department, after twelve hours' deliberation with this committee.

"We earnestly request that you mention to the public that our grievances did not rest with the fire marshal, but were a matter of wages which required adjustment by the parties responsible for the financial affairs of the city.

"We are quite sure his honor the mayor and the city council will deal fairly with us in this controversy and during the time this question is under discussion we shall return to work on the order of the fire marshal.

"We also wish to state that at no time during the period we were out of the service would we have refused a request of the fire marshal to participate in our duties were we called upon to do so."

Day of Controversy.

The men spent most of the day in their office in the Masonic Temple, but late in the evening they sent messengers to the city hall and to the home of the fire marshal. They had refused an offer of the finance committee which would give the engineers all they asked save $50, and the assistants all but $154. They said they would listen to no compromise.

Plan Greeted with Cheers.

When the men who had been to the chief's home reported back to headquarters, just before midnight, they were greeted with wild cheers and frenzied chords upon the overworked piano.

Then the grievance committee, President James Hanna, Thomas J. Madigan, J. C. Sarter, J. C. Spankenbell, W. M. Herchenroder, M. J. Buckley, and W. C. Reeder, issued a statement to the press. The meeting adjourned to the office of the chief to await his order telling them to go back to work—and many loitered on the way and phoned home to "the little woman."

Glad to Go Back to Work.

The strikers were undeniably glad to go back to work; they, too, knew of the danger to Chicago which their absence meant. Chief O'Connor had filled half their places with substitutes, but admitted that in case of a big fire the department would be "seriously handicapped."

The strikers formed a committee which was to stay in headquarters all night if the strike were not settled, and respond to any appeal the fire marshal might make to them in case of a serious conflagration.

They took the strike good naturedly, but stated they could stand it as long as the city could. They weren't of the opinion that the firemen would go on a sympathetic strike, but they knew also their fellow firemen wouldn't try to substitute for them.

This was demonstrated at station No. 104, Fourteenth street and Michigan avenue. Firemen told to take the places of the strikers refused to obey. Thirteen were suspended. This order was changed, however, after Battalion Chief Patrick Rogers had talked with Chief O'Connor, and only two of the

COOL HEADS, NOT COLD FEET

(An Editorial.)

Some of the employers whose workmen are walking out, with stated or undefined grievances, are getting mad. That will not help the situation any. It will make it worse. A good many of the employes are mad now. If anger becomes the dominating factor, there will be more and needless trouble in reaching adjustments.

Adjustments will be reached. A suspension of industry and traffic will hurt everybody. These strikes are not political. The strikers are not trying to establish soviets or to take over the control of resources and production for the proletariat. They are trying to get more money to meet their expenses and pay their bills.

Prices have kited until a man's wages will not pay the grocer, the butcher, the milkman, and the landlord. The man is after more money. We are in a period of inflated prices and depreciated currency, and men who are trying to raise families on wages which were sufficient five years ago and are insufficient now are impatient and restless and determined to better their conditions and to get more money.

They are employing or threatening to employ the most powerful weapon they have, which is the strike. The strikes are affecting the processes needed for the security and sustenance of all the people.

One strike—disguised in the form of a general resignation from service—affects the fire protection. The engineers have quit because the city will not or can not meet their demands. The fire chief says he can continue to give protection except in the case of a great fire. Then there might be trouble.

This strike again illustrates the insufficiency of the city's methods in dealing with public servants whose service cannot permit, or ought not to permit, the use of the strike to accomplish objects. We tell the men that they must not strike, but the city does not tell itself that they must not be compelled to strike. The lack of a proper body to make adjustments is again made manifest.

The street car employes are ready for a strike. It may be avoided. We are not so sure that the street car companies are wholly unwilling to have the question of fares and wages brought to an issue in a strike. There has been a great deal of political four flushing with the whole traction question. There probably will be more. The public, which has suffered from political deception in the past, may suffer some more.

Meat production is affected by the walkout of packing house employes. Dissatisfaction permeates nearly all branches of industry. It would be foolish to try to minimize the temporary gravity of the controversies which are stopping construction, stopping production, and which may stop traffic.

These issues are all susceptible to adjustment, and even if there is trouble there will be an adjustment. The red elements cannot use the situation if there is any kind of common sense in handling it.

Neither anger nor excitement will be worth anything. Just at present there is a mass contagion. That is shown in the fact that many workmen quit work without presenting any demands to their employers.

We have not made our post-war readjustments very intelligently, but just now the place to keep cool is directly under the hat and not immediately above the sole leather.

JACK THE CLIPPER GETS 310 "GOBS"

Girls, if your favorite "gob" from the Great Lakes Naval Training station shows up these days with nothing under his seagoing white hat but a bald pate you will know he has done time in the brig.

Provost Marshal Raymond MacDuffie issued an order yesterday that all present and future inmates of the "hoosegow" will undergo the ordeal of having their locks shorn. This includes the habitual "hard boiled" salts, and the dry land sailors in the A. W. O. L. class.

Three hundred and ten brig boarders were taken to the station tonsorial parlor yesterday and after 3,167,290 movements of the anti-hair machine 310 blue garbed youths were featuring "bandhouse" hair cuts.

The provost marshal thinks the new system of branding the men will serve to reduce the court martial line.

LOWDEN ACTS TO AVERT CAR STRIKE TIEUP

Orders Utility Body Inquiry as City Names Arbiters.

Gov. Lowden intervened yesterday to avert the threatened strike of 15,000 surface and elevated railway employés unless a 77 per cent wage increase is granted.

The governor directed the Illinois public utilities commission to investigate all phases of the controversy and report personally to him how the state best could act to avert a transportation tie-up.

In a letter to Thomas E. Dempcy, chairman of the commission, the governor asserts such a suspension, in view of the present disturbed industrial conditions, would constitute not only a menace to Chicago, but to the entire state.

Double Inquiry Monday.

Earlier in the day the mayor had named a commission of nine, under authority of the city council, to attempt mediation. The mayor's commission will convene Monday noon.

Two hours before that time, however, the public utilities board will open its investigation. William Mylan, president of the elevated employés' union, and William Quinlan, president of the surface car men's organization, have been requested to be present.

After the union officials have been heard, Chairman Dempcy announced, the exact scope of the inquiry will be determined.

Here's Lowden Letter.

The governor's letter—dispatched when the unions had announced that of 12,960 car men who balloted Friday only 107 had opposed a walkout—read as follows:

"Chairman of the State Public Utilities Commission—Sir:

"My attention has been directed to the serious danger of a strike of the employés of the Chicago surface lines and elevated railways on account of a controversy about wages. The situation is one which concerns not only the people of Chicago, but, under the present disturbed industrial conditions, the people of the entire state.

"I am advised the mayor of the city has appointed a committee pursuant to a resolution of the city council to consider the questions involved in this dispute.

Asks Commission to Act.

"The public utilities act provides the public utilities commission shall, at such times as the governor shall direct, examine any particular subject connected with the condition and management of public utilities, and report to him in writing its opinions thereon and the reasons therefor.

"I request, therefore, that the public utilities commission examine the facts relative to the present controversy as to wages attending the operation of the surface lines and elevated roads, and report the same to me, together with its opinion as to the manner in which the state may best coöperate with local authorities in averting, if possible, a public injury which will result from this threatened strike."

Seek Justice to All.

"It has been apparent," he told newspaper men later, "that the street car wage dispute ultimately would have to be submitted to the commission. Since that is a fact, the governor and the commission both believe action should be taken now, before the situation assumes a more critical aspect.

"We will not permit ourselves to be hurried, however. All the commissioners feel our recommendations to the governor must do justice alike to the employers, employés, and public.

Fares Vital Issue.

"The last should not—and will not, as far as we are concerned—be burdened by a manifestly unjust fare, which might lead to demonstrations and other serious disorder.

"There should be an equitable basis of settlement somewhere; and all interested persons, including the municipal authorities and doubtless civic organizations, will be invited to present their views.

"The two union heads were asked to state their side of the case first only because the commissioners thought they might more quickly arrive at a basis of discussion."

Mr. Dempcy was asked what the commission would do if the men refused to recede from their demand for 85 cents an hour, and it appeared the roads could not avoid receiverships unless an unusually high fare were to be charged. He refused to discuss that aspect of the situation.

He said, however, he saw no reason why the utilities commission and the commission appointed by the mayor could not act in harmony.

"We will invite help from all sources," he declared, "because we desire the fullest possible information."

Pay Up to Disputants.

Strictly, Mr. Dempcy asserted, the commission's intervention in the Chicago controversy does not constitute a violation of its principle not to interfere in wage disputes.

"We shall not attempt to decide what pay the men shall receive," he said. "That is something the companies and their employé must determine. But, of course, we shall be ready at all times to safeguard the interests of the public."

Britton I. Budd, president of the elevated lines, expressed himself as pleased at the governor's action. Though he was named as one of the mayor's commissioners, he professed fear that that body would not be able to accomplish much.

Thinks Crisis Averted.

"As constituted by the council, its powers were purely recommendatory," he explained. "The case of the public utilities commission is different; it can increase fares to any extent the situation demands. I believe the governor has averted a serious crisis in the city's affairs."

Leonard A. Busby, president of the surface lines, was out of town and could not be communicated with. Mr. Quinlan sought an interview with him yesterday, but was obliged to arrange for a conference Monday morning.

Mr. Mylan met Mr. Budd at the latter's office, but according to the latter no progress toward a compromise was made. He denied Mylan had suggested the men would accept less than the 85 cent scale demanded. The report persisted, notwithstanding, that a figure nearer 60 cents ultimately would be agreed upon.

Mayor on Motor Trip.

Besides Messrs. Busby and Budd, the mayor's commission comprises himself as chairman; Quinlan, Mylan, and Alds. Scott M. Hogan, Edward R. Armitage, Thomas Byrne, and S. W. Govier.

Immediately he had selected its personnel under sanction which the council gave last Monday, the mayor left the city on a motor tour, so his views as to its authority and scope of his inquiry could not be ascertained.

Look for Settlement.

Persons close to the city executive anticipated that, in conjunction with the public utilities commission, his commission would adjust the dispute.

"There is no reason," said one city official, who refused to permit his name to be used, "why the two bodies should not act in concert. The mayor's board is representative of the companies, the car men, and the public, but its powers are limited to investigation and recommendation.

"On the other hand, the public utilities commission may enter an order increasing fares and thus give effect to whatever decision is arrived at."

Act in Concert, His Plea.

Ald. Hogan believed the two boards might profitably meet simultaneously.

"Whatever decision the city's mediators arrive at," he said, "should have great moral effect, and they should be able also to assist the public utilities commission in revealing the true situation."

Three of the four aldermen named by the mayor as mediators hold union cards and were employed as union workmen before entering the council. Ald. Byrne was a street car employé and has been regarded as the spokesman of street car employés in the council; Ald. Armitage is a member of the typographical union, and Ald. Govier of the brass molders' union.

All Views Represented.

As outlined yesterday, the various parties to the conferences will present the following views:

THE EMPLOYES—The 77 per cent increase—which will establish a scale of wages approximating 85 cents an hour—is not more than the cost of living requires.

THE COMPANIES—To grant the 10,800 surface employés 85 cents an hour will add from $13,000,000 to $14,000,000 a year to operating expenses; a similar scale for 4,000 elevated employés will swell the expenditures of those lines $5,000,000 per annum. On the surface roads a fare of 9 or 10 cents will be necessary.

No similar estimate has been made respecting the elevated properties, although before the utilities commission an application for an increase in the present 6 cent fare is pending.

THE CITY—Comment in the aldermanic chamber on Monday made it plain the council, at least, favors a reasonable increase in pay for the car men. No alderman, however, championed the proposed 85 cents rate.

Ask Strike Sanction.

That there will be recessions from all these positions seemed certain last night, although the representatives of all sides spoke guardedly.

President Quinlan of the surface employés said he and Mr. Mylan would call at city hall at about noon tomorrow and see "what the commission is doing." Meanwhile he announced Assistant Secretary Maurice Lynch has been directed to send telegrams to the president and executive board of the international union, informing them officially of the strike ballot and asking their sanction of a walkout.

HYLAN ATTACKS TWO CENTS FOR CAR TRANSFERS

New York, July 19.—Mayor Hylan announced today that he had instructed the corporation counsel of the city to start proceedings in the state courts to nullify the order of Public Service Commissioner Nixon granting the New York Railways company and the surface lines of Brooklyn Rapid Transit company the right to charge 2 cents for transfers. The case will be carried to the United States supreme court, if necessary, he said.

The mayor declared that the rental paid the Eighth avenue railroad gives a return of 26.1 per cent on a capitalization of $1,000,000; The Twenty-third street railroad, 23.13 per cent on its capital stock; the Forty-second and Grand street lines, 22.4 per cent, and the other lines a proportionately large return. All these lines are component parts of the New York railways.

CARPENTERS TO VOTE AS 115,000 FACE IDLENESS

Referendum on Benefits to Strikers and $1 Demand Ordered.

While 115,000 workmen in the building crafts will be idle tomorrow, "locked out" because the carpenters struck, that craft will busy itself with a referendum. All members of the building trades unions are on "enforced" strike.

The carpenters are taking a vote on a 20 cents per hour benefit for each member now out. "The balloting concludes Saturday, and if it carries it shows the men willing and eager to fight for the $1 an hour asked," said William Brims, president of the Carpenters' District council.

The council deliberated last night on strike plans. At the conclusion Brims declared the opinions of the members differed from Simon O'Donnell, president of the building trades, who has characterized the carpenters' walkout as "an impulse of the mob."

No Mediators Chosen.

O'Donnell, who was authorized at Friday night's trades council meeting to name five mediators to approach the employers' associations and attempt to arrange some basis of settlement, announced he had not made the selections.

"I probably will not get the men named before Monday," he said.

The employers declared they were content to allow the situation to mend itself. "Our meeting today was merely one to make sure that all employers keep the men off the job Monday," declared E. M. Craig, secretary of the Carpenters - Contractors' association. Brims declared that 70 per cent of the carpenters remained at work yesterday and Craig commented on this by claiming the entire lockout would be complete Monday.

At least 1,300 firms, according to Craig, suspended building work yesterday, including 600 members of the Masons and Builders' association, thus forcing 15,000 more out.

Claims 700 Firms Yielded.

Brims, however, claimed that independent contractors are hastily signing the $1 an hour agreement. He claims more than 700 have signed.

"They signed all day," he declared, "and we hurried the men out, for almost all the contractors have a time clause in their contracts and are willing enough to grant the wage scale asked." He asserted there were only 4,000 carpenters out of work now.

During Friday night's session of the council members of other allied crafts expressed their wrath freely against the carpenters, who, they declared, were seeking "to gouge the public." The employers, after their decision for a lockout, have found their hope of coercion from the other crafts a vain one, according to the carpenters' council.

The referendum the carpenters are taking brought one suggestion from Craig. "Let them vote on whether they are willing to accept the 92½ cents per hour offered," he suggested, adding that the employers have claimed the men are not in earnest in their strike for the higher wage.

The question of hours, too, was discussed by the council, the members declaring that the wage agreements would not alter their desire for shorter days. "Ten, twelve, and even longer hours are not to be resumed," said one member afterwards.

U. S. READY TO ACT.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—The agitated Chicago labor situation with the Harvester workers' strike and lockout, the building trades strike, threatened upheaval on the electric railroads, and numerous small strikes, has not been brought officially to the attention of the bureau of mediation and conciliation of the department of labor, which stands ready to offer its services to bring about settlement of all the difficulties.

STRIKING FIREMEN WHO "RESIGNED" FACE DISMISSAL

All fire department engineers, who tendered "resignations" as a subterfuge for going on strike, face dismissal by the civil service commission, it was revealed at the city hall yesterday. And the same thing applies to other members of the department who may elect to follow a similar course.

Section 8 of rule VIII., promulgated by the commission, which the courts have construed to have the same force as a statute, requires that the resignation of a city employé must be filed with the commission by the department head receiving it, and shall not be effective until it has the commission's approval.

As yet the commission has approved no resignations by fire fighters.

"There are several charges under which the men may be called to face a trial board," a high city official explained. "They are all liable under section 5 of rule VII., which among other things specifies the folowing as cause for dismissal: Disobedience of orders, or refusal to comply with orders; absence from duty without leave; insubordination; careless or willful conduct which results in damage to city property; any conduct that substantially impairs the efficiency or usefulness of their service."

In addition, the same section specifies: "Nothing herein shall be held to prevent removal upon any other act or offense not specifically set forth herein."

thirteen, Pipemen Frank Gorman and James Murphy, were ordered under suspension.

Attitude of Aldermen.

In the afternoon the council finance committe erejected the demands of the engineers and issued a statement in part as follows:

"In the year 1917, the pay of fire engineers as fixed by the budget of that year, was $1,668, and that of assistant fire engineers, $1,392. In 1918 these amounts were increased respectively to $1,788 and $1,524.

"The budget, as passed June 30, 1919, allows an increase of $300 for each grade, making the rates $2,088 for fire engineers and $1,820 for assistant fire engineers.

"The original demand by fire engineers as presented to the city council and transmitted by it to the committee on finance, was for fire engineers, $2,300, and for assistant fire engineers, $2,250, being an increase over the 1918 allowance of $512 for fire engineers, and $726 for assistant fire engineers.

Two Grades Offered Increase.

"The committee on finance offered these two grades in the fire department, $2,138, and $1,870 respectively—an increase in one year of $450 and $346 respectively.

"The amount of increase allowed by the committee on finance for these two ranks in the fire department was in excess of that offered and accepted by pipemen and truckmen.

"The final demand of these two ranks was $2,188 for fire engineers and $2,024 for assistant fire engineers, a difference of $50 and $154 per annum, respectively, over that offered by the committee on finance.

"This demand was not met by reason of the inability of granting it without seriously crippling the activities of the department, and upon the belief that the demand made by these branches of the service was unfair, unreasonable and out of proportion to the amounts paid to other members of the fire department."

80,000 Packing Workers Demand 30 Per Cent Raise

Trouble is brewing among 80,000 stockyards workers. Tuesday they are going to demand wage increases of approximately 30 per cent from the packers and assert they will strike to enforce their demands.

Nearly ten thousand already are on a strike, having gone out Friday, charging there were too many policemen around the plants. A mass meeting of the workers is to be held on the prairies at West Forty-seventh and South Robey streets this afternoon. It will be decided if the strikers are to resume work tomorrow or stay out and wait the reply of the packers.

Plan to Tie Up Yards.

If the packers refuse the increases it is said that the Stockyards Labor council, backed by the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, will call a strike of every worker. From the series of strikes staged by the individual unions in the last two months, it may not be a hard matter for all to join in one.

Martin Murphy, president of the council; J. W. Johnstone, secretary, and John Kikulski, chief organizer, held a conference with Federal Judge Alschuler yesterday afternoon. They said they had told Judge Alschuler about a large number of policemen who have been detailed in the stockyards. The judge declined to talk.

New Scale Arranged.

The stock yards workers still receive a wage award made by Judge Alschuler, as it recently was renewed for one year and signed by Dennis Lane on behalf of the workers. The council leaders are said to have denied being responsible for the strike of the 10,000 now out. Representatives of the packers also conferred with Judge Alschuler.

Murphy and Johnstone yesterday completed a scale of wage increases for all workers. It will be delivered to the packers on Tuesday, who probably will be given a time limit to accept or reject it.

"It looks as though the whole yards will be in a strike soon," said a business agent of one of the butcher unions. "The new scale calling for about 30 per cent increase will be handed to the packers on Tuesday and they are only going to be given a short time to accept it.

"Can't Hold Workers Back."

"We can hardly hold the workers back. They just want to strike on any excuse and they all are going to get the increases or they will pull a big strike. We are pretty well organized, 100 per cent in the small plants, 98 per cent in Wilson and Hammond, and 85 per cent in the other big plants."

Police reserves have been sent to the New City and Stockyards police stations in view of the impending trouble and a large number of policemen and detectives have been sent direct to the plants. A rumor was out last night that a large number of Mexicans have been employed and are living in the plants, but it could not be verified.

Organizers Keep Busy.

For the last six months the Stockyards Labor council has been making strenuous efforts to organize the workers who do not belong to the unions. They have sent trucks around to the various plants to pick up the men and take them to union headquarters for "signing up." A big parade for the benefit of the colored workers was staged several weeks ago and a large number of applications were secured. Murphy, Johnstone, and Kikulski will be the chief speakers at the meeting today. Police reserves will be present.

13 CHILDREN DIE IN FLOODS NEAR WHEELING, W. VA.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 19.—Between nine and thirteen persons are reported to have been drowned tonight when a residence was swept away by the waters during a heavy rainstorm at Wegee Creek, on the Ohio side, ten miles south of here.

The home of Steve Moxie, according to reports, was washed from its foundation and demolished against a bridge. Rescue parties have been unable to reach the scene, as the roads are impassable.

All telephone wires are down. Three bodies, recovered from the wrecked house, were brought to Bellaire, O. Later a report was received that ten additional bodies had been recovered. Most of the dead are children.

Steal Shoes from Cop Napping in Grant Park

They say shoes are going up. They are high enough today, but Edward Coughlin, a South park policeman detailed on Boul Mich, is the one to worry.

Early Saturday morning during his lunch hour, Edward rambled over to Grant park, where the grass invited a nap, and removed his new shoes, which had set him back quite a number of ducats.

Old Man Morpheus soon had Edward in his power, but when he awoke his shoes were gone. He searched the park, but they couldn't be found.

Edward did a marathon across Boul Mich to the Auditorium hotel, where he borrowed a pair of rubbers. He says he hopes the thief who stole his shoes gets corns on every toe.

TROOPS CHECK RACE RIOTING AT WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., July 19.—The threatened race riot here tonight, incited by the several recent attacks on white women by Negroes, was apparently broken up by quick action on the part of the army provost guard and the police.

By midnight the 200 soldiers, sailors, and marines who had gathered in a Negro quarter of the city, had been dispersed. Two Negroes were attacked by the mob. They were severely but not seriously beaten before being rescued by military and civilian police. Several shots were fired, but no other report of injuries reached the police.

The mob, which formed at a Liberty Y. M. C. A. hut here, started out with the intention of lynching Joe Colle, Negro, held for several days by the police as a suspect, but released yesterday. This was prevented by throwing a cordon of police around his home.

Several stones were thrown from houses of Negroes, but no one was hurt. The Negroes remained in their homes, nearly all of which were darkened.

The crowd gathered in a Negro quarter not far from the state, war, and navy buildings, and the White House. Riot calls were sent out for soldiers stationed near Washington and police reserves. Ambulances were called out and for a short time there was much excitement.

State to Give Away Fish to Argo Residents

Fish, about a ton of it, is going to be distributed free, FREE on the banks of the Desplaines river, to the residents of Argo tomorrow. Ten employés of the state fish and game warden are going into the river with nets and bring all the carp, pickerel, sunfish, redeye, and other rough fish the net will hold to shore and distribute it to the waiting population. It all is to come about because of the illegal net fishing done by idle workmen out on strike from the Corn Products Refining company plant there for the last two weeks. With fine meshed nets they have caught the smaller fish the law bans. The game warden's nets will catch only the larger fish the law allows.

69 Firms Refuse Closed Shop Ultimatum; 250 Vessels Idle.

New York, July 19.—Prospects of a settlement of the strike of seamen and engineers which has crippled shipping along the Atlantic and gulf seaboard and has brought an embargo on coastwise freight traffic received a fresh setback today when the American Steamship association unanimously rejected an agreement proposed to them last night by the union leaders.

The decision was made by representatives of the sixty-nine companies included in the association. The principal stumbling block is the question of a closed shop.

250 Ships Believed Idle.

Steamship owners asserted that a census of the port taken by the shipping agents Thursday showed 183 ships idle, but it was admitted that this total probably had been increased now to 250.

One man was shot and probably will die and another seriously injured in a clash early today between striking marine workers and strike breakers on the Brooklyn water front. Revolvers and knives were freely used. Police reserves stopped it. A number of strike breakers were arrested.

Boston Mediators Fail.

Boston, Mass., July 19.—Efforts by state and city officials to end the strike of car men employed by the Boston Elevated railway company failed today despite many conferences, and patrons of the road were caused further discomfort. No cars have been operated since the strike commenced Thursday morning.

Lockout in Michigan City.

Michigan City, Ind., July 19.—Announcement was made here today that the Haskell & Barker Car company had shut down its local plants pending adjustment of labor difficulties. About 2,500 men are affected. The foundries are excepted.

RIOT CALLS FROM 2 PLANTS LEAD TO ARREST OF 14

Two riot calls hurried the police yesterday to two strike-bound factories. At one two men were arrested and at the other twelve were booked for disorderly conduct.

The first call was from the Ajax Forge company, 2503 Blue Island avenue. When Capt. Patrick Hogan and Lieut. William Ambrose arrived they say they found Richard Griffin, 6547 St. Lawrence avenue, kicking Eldore Bermingham, 6856 Ingleside avenue, in the face. Thomas McMahon, 2858 South Hoyne avenue, was arrested on a charge of shooting within the city limits. He was exploding torpedoes, according to the police.

The second call was received an hour later from the McCormick Harvester company, Blue Island and Oakley avenues. The police were told the strikers were marching on the plant. When the strikers saw the patrol wagon approaching they dispersed., but as the policemen were climbing into the wagon, it is charged, began bombarding them with stones and shouting that they were "bolsheviks" and in the employ of the company.

The police arrested twelve men, said to have led the crowd.

LABOR NOTES

John Kikulski, chief organizer for the Crane company strikers, said yesterday the demands of the workers would be delivered to the officials tomorrow. They include more pay, shorter hours, abolition of piece work, and recognition of the union.

The Bunte Brothers' Candy company obtained an injunction yesterday restraining members of Candy Workers' union, local No. 156, from picketing or interfering with its business. Judge Denis E. Sullivan, Superior court, granted it.

Local No. 429, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders, met yesterday and voted not to strike at present for more money against the Chicago Shipbuilding company. A letter from the Emergency Fleet Corporation was read, which said the yards would close down if the men would not wait until the demands could be considered.

Five thousand butcher and grocery clerks are expected to attend the thirty-fourth annual picinc and field day given by the Butcher and Grocery Clerks' Association of Illinois today at Riverview park.

The striking carpenters will meet this afternoon at Wicker Park hall, 2040 West North avenue.

American Boy, Six Years in Germany, Repatriated

PARIS, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—After six years of isolation in Germany, 13 year old Herbert Seidel reached Paris today on his way to Fort Bliss, Texas, where he will rejoin his mother and sister.

The boy had been living with his grandmother in Saxony. He has completely forgotten the English language, but is still a loyal American and anxious to go to the United States.

Herbert is the son of Color Sergeant Carl Seidel, who is with the 14th American brigade in France. Sergt. Seidel asked the American Red Cross to repatriate his son, and after months of negotiations the German government consented to permit the child to leave, after the surrender of all his food cards and the presentation of papers establishing the fact that he was born in the United States.

GRAND JURY TO GET ARGO RIOT CASES MONDAY

Hoyne Acts After Wire from Lowden Asks Order Preserved.

Characterizing the first shootings of strikers at the Argo plant of the Corn Products Refining company, and of company guards, as "wanton murder," State's Attorney Hoyne yesterday announced the case would be presented to the grand jury Monday.

"The other shootings, too, were without justification, were unwarranted, as nearly as I can ascertain," he added.

Announcement of his intention followed receipt of a telegram from Gov. Lowden directing him to take the necessary steps to prevent life and property loss and preserve order.

Suburb Now Quiet.

There has been no rioting at the suburb since Monday, when one woman was shot, three were beaten badly, and seven men beaten. Four were killed and about twenty wounded, six severely, in the first day's outbreak on July 3.

Mr. Hoyne said in his reply to the governor's telegram he would state his attention had been called to the fact the Corn Products Refining company had barred off portions of the main street of Argo and had guards stationed to prevent its use by the public; that he had informed the management of the company it had no control over the public highway and that the guards must be withdrawn and placed inside the plant limits.

Warns of Near Riot.

Warning that the strikers contemplated a demonstration yesterday afternoon, that he had been informed they intended marching to the Corn Products plant in force, was sent to the company by Mr. Hoyne during the day. The parade failed to materialize.

H. C. OF L. FOUND HUGE FACTOR IN LABOR'S UNREST

Peace Transition Period, Radical Demands, Also Are Blamed.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Here are a few conclusions on the industrial situation, drawn from a week of "mixing" with up-to-date employers and conservative labor leaders:

High cost of living is the largest factor. A feeling is prevalent the government is too backward in moving against food "profiteers"; that, although the era of high prices is here to stay, the cost of living is inflated by the operations of superfluous middlemen, and that the "spread" between what the grower gets and the consumer pays for foodstuffs is beyond all rhyme or reason. The middleman is a necessary institution, but too many hands are grabbing toll between farm and kitchen. Thus the problem of distribution is the basic one.

The unrest is a natural accompaniment of the transition period. In striking for raises, the workers, generally speaking, are trying to make the purchasing power of a day's pay keep pace with the declining purchasing power of the dollar.

Adjustments Too High?

One trouble is some striking groups appear to be setting the adjustments too high. When cost of living goes down and the purchasing value of the dollar again increases, the demanded wage would then be up in the air, throwing things out of adjustment again.

Trade unions just now are witnessing a struggle for control between conservative leaders and a new crop of radicals, whose promises have hoisted them into the saddle.

In the building shutdown, which has closed 115,000 workers out of employment, the great bulk of the trades are showing more displeasure than sympathy with the demands of the 15,000 carpenters, whose refusal to accept a dollar a day raise and whose insistence upon an increase of $1.60 a day would throw the wage schedules of the other groups out of line.

Leaders Give Views.

Three men of long experience in industrial affairs in Chicago yesterday analyzed the situation. All play a part in the building shutdown or the street car controversy, so each asked not to be identified.

Analyst No. 1 is a public official who had twenty years experience as a trades union organizer and sat on the inside during many a labor controversy. No. 2 is a conservative labor leader; No. 3 is an official of an employers' organization who is well known to leaders of the internationals as well as the locals. One interesting phase of their utterances was that they reflected opinions voiced during the week by scores of other men on both sides of the industrial disputes.

H. C. of L. Vital Trouble.

"I'll tell you the vital trouble," said No. 1, the public official, "the cost of living has gone up until a dollar today does only fifty cents of work.

"Basically, these strikers are just trying to shove up their earning power so that it will get an even break with the purchasing power of the dollar. Eggs and bacon cost the laborer just as much as they do the bird on the Gold Coast.

"The armistice was signed eight months ago, but in all that time the government doesn't seem to have done anything to chop down the cost of necessities. We all know high prices are not going to tumble, and nobody wants them to, but the high cost of living, so the people are thinking, is not due to natural high costs, but to artificially boosted prices.

"A friend of mine has a farm in Michigan. He sent a consignment of fruit to Chicago. Some middleman allowed it to spoil and my friend, instead of getting any profits on his shipment, got instead a bill for the freight, which was a loss to him.

The Crimp in the Roll.

"Yet you go to the grocery store and the price you pay for fruit and vegetables puts a crimp in the old roll. How much does the farmer get for his tomatoes? Yet the other day my missus picked up a fine tomato in a store and asked the price—'Thirty-five cents,' said the clerk. So we went without tomatoes that night.

"That shows how it goes. Chicago is in the midst of a great kitchen garden section and near a great fruit belt, but look at the prices—and the farmer isn't making all that profit. Instead of one or two middle men acting between farmer and eater, we've got five or six hands, each grabbing a commission or profit, and that's what sends the price up. The spot to battle with the industrial unrest is in the cold storage plants and in South Water street.

"Everybody is trying to boost his day's pay, but the trouble with some of these demands is they are too great. Cost of living is going to fall, once governmental agencies start after food profiteers. That will mean the workers' pay automatically increases, because his dollar will expand in purchasing power. If they set too high a wage adjustment now, and living cost falls, it will mean the business has been loaded down with more of a wage cost than the traffic will bear. Then, when the fight for the world's markets really starts, that would tend to injure American industry, for we're going to have stiff competition."

Blames the Radicals.

"One vital trouble," said Analyst No. 2, the labor leader, "is the effort of the radicals to play politics. The new labor party was grabbed by the radicals soon after its launching. The Socialists, seeing their party had been knocked gallywest by its anti-war attitude, climbed into the labor party, and that's where they are trying to exert their pressure now.

"In some of the unions the radicals have got control by making great promises to the workers, but the bulk of labor is sound and rational—it wants to get all the share of the profits it can, but you can bet your neck it doesn't want to break industry by loading it down too hard.

"Why, say, this country is all set for a prodigious era of activity. The good old U. S. A. has the world by the tail—we've got the food; we've got the crops; we've got the raw supplies; we've got the industrial plants; we've got the dough; we've got the rest of the world as debtor; a gigantic balance of trade is in our favor, and when things do move, O, boy, watch them hum!

"These radicals and 'boudoir bolsheviks,' as Sam Gompers named them, why, they won't know what's struck them.

Some Strikes Unjustified.

"Wage adjustments have the natural call just now. Some wise employers have seen the need and have taken the initiative; on others the workers have had to exert the pressure of the strike. And some strikes are not justified, and you find, as in the case of the carpenters' demands, other allied crafts frown upon them.

"But the general tension won't be relaxed until there is a slump in the cost of living. That's the place to hand the unrest its hardest wallop.

"Wages are delative and the wage question, as in all times, simmers down to this: 'What will a day's pay get you and how much can you put by for the rainy day?' A bird who is getting $40 a week and is being stuck $40 for living expenses isn't as well off as when he was getting $30 a week and paying only $20 for living cost.

"Of course, a good many workers drew big wages on war work—and it's hard to get accustomed to lower pay after a man has been dragging down $80 or $100 a week in the little old envelope. But it's a pipe the cost of living is coming down, if the government gets busy, and then the dollar will do more than 50 cents' work for its owner."

Jolts "Fossil Bosses."

Expounder No. 3—the employers' expert—said:

"The bulk of the employers are advanced. They are for increased wages, so long as the new schedules are not unreasonable. Some hard-boiled fossils think they are still back in 1914, a year which, measured by economic and industrial developments, is nearly an epoch ago. It's hard to drill it into their heads the world will never go back to the old order of things as they were before the war. They ought to be muzzled, because they certainly don't represent the trend of thought and attitude among the bulk of the employers.

"Any thinking employer knows the best thing that can happen to him is prosperity among the workers. Welfare work is fine, but too much of it has an odor of paternalism, and that gets the independent American worker sore. What he wants is to get his share in the little old pay envelope, and then he'll buy his own theater tickets if he wants to go. Too much of this 'Let a little sunshine in' stuff gets the worker's goat, because he is suspicious something is being pinched out of his pay envelope to pay for it.

Wise Split the Profits.

"The 'democracy of industry' is more than a phrase these days, and the wise employer is recognizing it by giving the employé a split in the profits and then making him share the responsibility by giving him a voice in management, so far as working conditions, welfare, wage schedules, etc., go.

"I think high cost of living is the basic trouble."

From garden to roadside to buyer.

There's the triple play tiny husbandmen of Cook county schools are using this year in their battle to keep old Gen. H. Costofliving from walking away with the whole community.

The youthful venders of farm truck on the highway are enlisted in the garden game at the Mount Prospect school. They had established themselves at the side of a well traveled auto road yesterday and had dispensed $25 worth of beets and lettuce, string beans, sweet corn, eggs, and other wholesome food to eager buyers when Superintendent of Schools E. J. Tobin came along on an inspection and photographed them in the act. They worked under the direction and management of Miss Blanche Rickard, their school teacher, and Seth Shepherd, country life director of the district.

This is just one of the seventy-five roadside markets established by school folks of the county schools. They are all booming, according to Supt. Tobin, and knocking garden combine prices into a cocked hat.

"I didn't check up on the prices very close yesterday," said the inspector, "but know they all are about 50 per cent under Chicago market prices and about the same that the produce would bring at wholesale. I bought beets, for instance, at 6 cents for a big bunch. The kids get school credits for this work."

DUKE OF ORLEANS URGES ROYALISTS TO HELP FRANCE

PARIS, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—Prince Louis Philippe, duke of Orleans, and pretender to the throne in France, has written a letter to his supporters, it was learned today, asking them to "maintain their sacred union" in the work of reconstruction and oppose any revolutionary attempts.

The Duke of Orleans refers to the refusal of the French government and the allies to allow him to fight for France and says that he does not confide to his people the profound sorrow caused to him by this exile from the battle front, after his hard exile from France, in order that no rancor may develop therefrom, adding: "One more hatred in the bruised heart of France will cure nothing in my heart.

"My first instructions to rally to the sacred union must be continued. I ask you to remain in the front rank of the good servants of the country and serve as Royalists. But first of all serve France."

The latter trio arrested Lange and his wife, claiming they found the trunks in the Lange home.

TALK WILSON NOMINATION FOR 3D TERM

New York, July 19.—A Times dispatch from Washington says:

"The question whether President Wilson will accept a nomination for a third term is now often raised in Washington. The situation as it stands seems to be about as follows:

"The president can have the nomination even without the asking. The nomination by his party is conceded. Many politicians are anxious to have him run. The circumstances are exceptional, they say. If the senate fails to ratify the treaty it will make the league of nations the issue in 1920, and for Wilson to refuse to lead such a fight would be more culpable than breaking the third term tradition. On the other hand, if the treaty is ratified, Wilson, as president, and only he, would and could put it into successful operation.

"Among those of President Wilson's friends who have no ax to grind, the sentiment seems pretty solidly against his permitting himself to be drawn into a third term fight. He will have had two very strenuous terms. It is doubtful if his physical strength would be equal to a third.

"It can be pretty safely stated that he now has not the remotest notion of running for a third term. The probability may also be stated that he will keep hands off in the choice of a Democratic nominee and the certainty that he will do nothing to aid Mr. McAdoo. His sense of propriety would prevent his using any influence in behalf of his son-in-law.

"The field seems to be open in both parties and it is likely that neither of the men who will represent the two parties has yet engaged."

DRAGS ILL MAN FROM HIS BED; KILLS WITH FILE

Cleveland, O., July 19.—[Special.]—Police today are gathering together a few uncertain clews to the mysterious murder of Daniel Kaber, wealthy advertising man, dragged from his bed as he lay ill in his Lake avenue home about midnight Friday, and stabbed fifteen times. A crude knife fashioned from a file was found in the bedroom.

Four persons in the house at the time were unable to reach Mr. Kaber in time to help him or to see his assailant. Mr. Kaber, in a dying statement at Lakewood hospital, gave the names of persons whom he suspected of being implicated in the crime, but was unable to name the person who attacked him, but said he had bitten one of the man's fingers nearly off and the police seek a man so injured.

A relative of the murdered man was questioned by the police this morning. He told P. S. Christensen, chief of the Lakewood police, he was in and about a poolroom at 1253 Prospect avenue all of Friday evening and that he did not go to Lakewood until the 1 o'clock car. He produced several witnesses to substantiate this story.

The room in which the sick man lay was at the northwest corner of the house on the second floor. In an adjoining room slept his stepdaughter, Miss Mariam McArdle, and her guest, Miss Anna Baehr, whose home is at 12520 Lake avenue.

Across the hall slept his mother-in-law, Mrs. J. A. Breckel. On the third floor, just above, slept F. W. Uterback, a male nurse, who was attending Mr. Kaber.

It was about 11:30 when all the persons in the house were awakened by noises. The women say they heard Mr. Kaber screaming and Uterback heard himself called by name.

Uterback first responded to the calls. He told the police he partially dressed and went downstairs to investigate.

He found the door to Mr. Kaber's room open and Mr. Kaber lying on the floor in a pool of blood. Uterback brought water from the bathroom to wash Mr. Kaber's wounds. He had meantime telephoned for the Lakewood police.

BOY SCOUT GIVES LIFE IN EFFORT TO SAVE FRIEND

Dies of Weak Heart in Lake; Drowning at Beach.

Gail Prim kept the Boy Scout oath of loyalty, and gave his life to do it.

He tried to save David Cameron, a fellow Scout, from drowning, and died of heart disease before he could reach his friend.

It happened yesterday afternoon just off the north limit of Wilmette. A group of Scouts, in charge of Scoutmaster A. B. Smith, 1615 Washington boulevard, was having an outing there.

The Cameron boy, who was 14 years old and lived at 3121 Congress street, was in the water. Prim, 17 years old, 1329 Randolph street, heard him cry for help.

No One Else, So He Tackles It.

Prim ran into Sheridan road and called for help. He realized that he had heart disease, that the excitement and the strain of going after Cameron might prove serious to him. But when no one answered his call he turned and hurried into the lake, bent on rescue.

His shouts had been heard; the other Scouts came down. It was too late. They found Cameron's body, and a little later they found Prim's.

Boy Drowns at Beach.

The first drowning since the opening of the Fifty-first street municipal bathing beach five years ago occurred yesterday when Bernard Fairman, 13, 324 East Fifty-third street, met death.

According to the boy's brother, he and some friends were playing on the beach when they noticed that Bernard had disappeared. The last they had seen of him was several minutes before, when he was standing on the pier.

They immediately notified the head life guard and the body was found.

Deny Negligence of Guards.

According to H. Circle, who claims to have been a witness, the boy might have been saved but for the negligence of the life guards. He said it was fully fifteen minutes after the guards had been notified of the boy's disappearance before they began a search for him.

Harry J. Walls, who has been director of the beach for four years, denied this statement. He said he had three boats in the water and several guards diving for the boy within one minute after the alarm had been given.

"It was only thirteen minutes," Mr. Walls said, "after we learned the boy was missing that we had him out of the water and in the hospital."

Mrs. Stella Godlove, 1403 East Fifty-first street, who claims she was a witness, said the life guards were on the job the moment the alarm was sounded. She said they did all they could to save the boy's life.

Chop Away Piling; Save Boy.

City firemen chopped away parts of the Grace street beach piling yesterday to rescue Hugo Garrett, a youthful fisherman, whose right foot and leg had been caught in the timbers when he slipped from the breakwater.

The boys cries brought life guards and firemen were called when after an hour's work the guards and crowd which gathered had failed to extricate him. He was not seriously injured.

President and Mrs. Wilson Take Trip on Mayflower

Washington, D. C., July 19.—President Wilson left Washington tonight aboard the Mayflower for a week-end cruise down the Potomac river and Chesapeake bay. He was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson. They expect to be back at the White House Monday morning.

HERE'S CHICAGO EDITION OF THE "FALL OF TROY"

Mr. Mooney's Aids Star in Famous Role of Wooden Horse.

When J. G. Troy of the bustling hamlet of Charlotte, Ia., brightened his father's doorstep with his Dubuque College sheepskin last month, his grand old dad slapped him on the back and led him to his private chamber.

"Now, son," he remarked, "you have done well by the name of Troy. Here's $500. Go to Chicago and show those slickers what the Troys are made of."

The youth wanted one of "pop's" three farms, but father couldn't see it, so with his little cane and satchel in his mitt, J. G. started for Boul. Mich.

Arriving in Chicago, he yielded to the high sign of a young labor expert who specialized in transporting foreign to various parts of the west to build railroads and farm lands. The business listened good to Troy and he parted with his part of the family fortune.

The first day Charlotte's pride sent six men to Montana. On the next he contributed two huskies to Nebraska. Then the ball bounced in the wrong direction and for the next two weeks the business rushed—past his shingle.

Too Proud to Wire.

Disgusted, disconsolate, broke and discouraged, he hauled his cane off the wall on July 9, slammed the door of the counting room.

That night he parked his luggage in the Y. M. C. A. hotel. It so happened that a transient guest, Bill O'Morrow, had been assigned to the same single room previously, but that didn't worry Troy. The latter, 'tis alleged, walked into the room, annexed two suits of clothes and everything of value he saw and made the street safely.

The following day he lugged his possessions to a three balled emporium at Eighteenth street and Wabash avenue and obtained $40 and a pawn check.

Troy's poke of $40 soon melted, and once again he found himself on the "coffee and" circuit. Still he kept his head high and his belt tight. Yesterday morning breakfast meant nothing more to him than a word in the dictionary, so he pulled his shriveled carcass to a "one arm" lunchery and filed his application. The proprietor gave him an apron and a check puncher and put him to work.

His Diction's Perfect.

During the noon rush Detectives Chassin and Nagle dropped in for ham and eggs. A thin, sickly youth took their order, and perfectly enunciated the famous "double play" to the kitchen.

Then Chassin became suspicious. He pulled several written descriptions out of his pocket and studied the man behind the counter. "He's our man," Chassin whispered to his mate.

And Troy was. He was whisked to the detective bureau, where he confessed having relieved O'Morrow of his raiment.

Last night he sent the following wire to Charlotte on the creek:

"Dad: I have been discovered by city officials. Send $200 to James Mooney, city hall. He has taken an interest in me." SON.

DUBLIN PARADES FOR PEACE WITH SINN FEIN QUIET

100,000 in Streets Show They're Loyal to Britain.

BY JOHN S. STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

DUBLIN, July 19.—When I landed in Dublin this morning and drove through the silent, undecorated, and deserted streets I formed an opinion that it was a Sinn Fein Ireland. Sulking on a day of peace celebrations, while London was letting herself loose in wild abandon of joy over the official end of the war, Dublin appeared to be emphasizing Ireland's claim to independence by ignoring the great march.

Half an hour later, when I walked down to the point where Lord French, viceroy, was to take the salute, as representative of the king, from part of the demobilized army and the Dublin garrison, I met immense crowds traveling in the same direction, and felt inclined to modify my first impression to the extent of admitting that some at least of Dublin's citizens were not Sinn Feiners.

Not a Sinn Fein City.

Two hours later, after having watched 16,000 men march past Lord French, amid scenes of enthusiasm second only to those which I witnessed on peace night in Paris, I might have been justified in coming to the conclusion that the Sinn Fein was dead.

The conclusion I have formed is that the Sinn Fein, while powerful in Dublin, has been much overrated, and that there is a very large section of the population which, while Nationalist, is entirely loyal to the British empire and totally opposed to anything like an independent republic. I spent most of the two hours during which the procession was passing in College green, opposite the saluting stand on which stood Lord French, a little gray figure in khaki, surrounded by his staff.

Finds No Disloyalty.

Declining an invitation to a favored position for watching the military parade, I spent the time mingling with the crowd, talking to its members, and, I must confess, trying to draw out expressions of disloyalty. I am compelled to state my attempts were unsuccessful. During the whole time I did not hear one declaration in favor of the Sinn Fein policy of an independent republic. I heard many declarations for home rule and, particularly, the Sir Horace Plunkett plan of dominion home rule, while many men and women declared that to separate from the British empire was unthinkable and ruinous to Ireland.

As far as I can learn, this marks a revulsion of feeling of the last few weeks which surprised even the leaders of various public bodies.

All Join in Parade.

For instance, the Nationalist Veterans' association a few days ago passed a resolution advising its members to refrain from taking part in the procession as a protest against the supposed shelving of home rule by the British government. This morning I saw Gen. Hammond, president of the association, marching at the head of his old regiment, the Connaught Rangers. On one side of him walked Stephen Gwynn, former Nationalist member of parliament and former captain in the Connaught Rangers, and on the other Maj. Bryan Cooper, former Unionist member of parliament and now chief press censor for Ireland. Nearly 8,000 of these veterans were in line and received the heartiest cheers, only equaled by those given the Dublin fusileers. Every other Irish regiment was fully represented by veterans, who ignored the resolution of their association. Fully 8,000 demobilized veterans were in line, the rest being troops from the Dublin garrison.

100,000 See Parade.

I have heard the wildest estimates of the number of people in the streets, but the most reliable seem to put it at 100,000, which is pretty good for a city with a population under half a million. In College Green I noticed a large proportion of the very poorest class who normally are anti-British, but today they cheered vigorously their own veterans of the great war. The scores of windows in the gray old front of Trinity college were filled with spectators, and the roof of Trinity was black with people.

Lord French took his stand on the reviewing platform in front of the Bank of Ireland, once the Parliament house and soon to be again. Facing him was the statue of Grattan, the great Irish statesman, and on top of the pedestal with his arms round Grattan, was noticed an American doughboy, an Australian, and a Dublin civilian, probably all members of the unconquerable Irish race and all doing honor to those members of it who fought in the war for freedom.

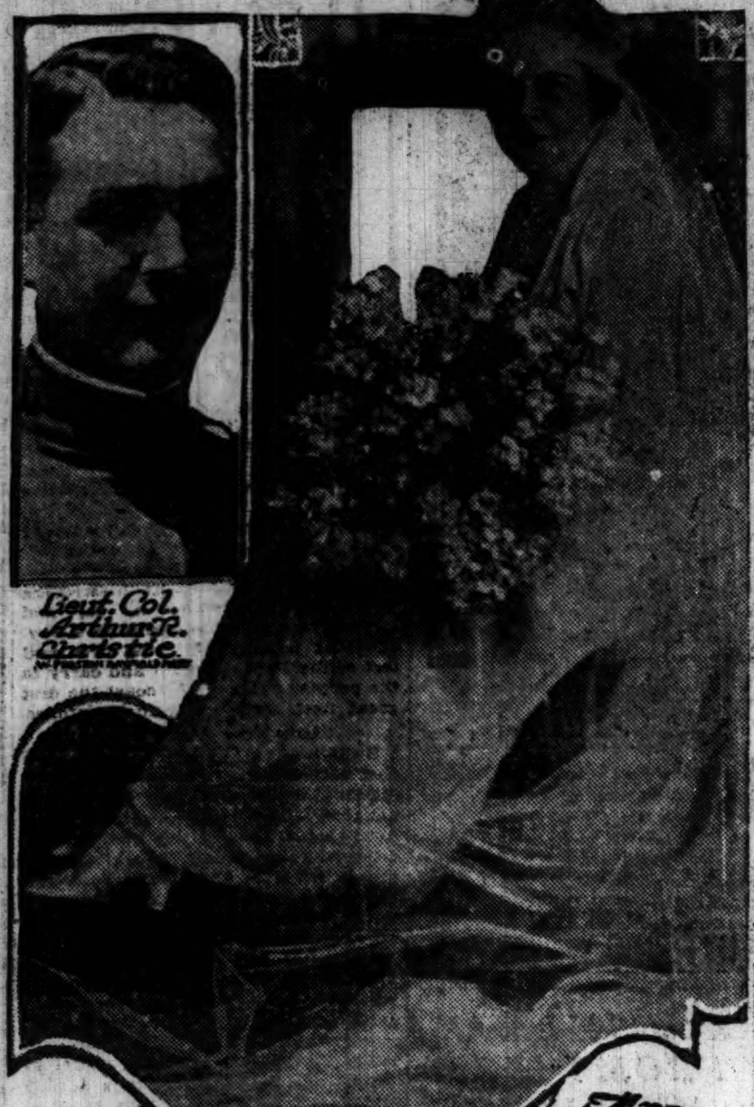
The day passed absolutely without an unpleasant incident.

Everything Is Orderly.

In spite of the great crowds and the holiday making in the streets I saw no drunkenness and few fights. The police report they had nothing to do, and now that it is over I can testify on authority of a high police official that they expected a heavy day and held large reserves of both police and troops in readiness.

"A PERSONAL MATTER"

Army Officer and Wife (Pictured in Her Wedding Gown) Who Have Separated for Second Time.



It was the war which first separated Lieut. Col. Arthur Christie and his wife—the officer going overseas with his regiment. Mrs. Christie went to France a year ago, spent several months with him and returned after the armistice. But they are separated again, and this time it's "just a personal matter," Mrs. Christie says. She has been residing with her father, Edward Russell, in Winnetka. Her husband is in Washington, still in the service.

WILSON HELPED IRISH MISSION, DUNNE ASSERTS

Says Col. House Cleared Path for Visit to the Emerald Isle.

Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, speaking before the Irish Fellowship club in the Hotel Sherman yesterday, told of his experiences as a member of the party which recently returned to America after having visited France, England, and Ireland in the interests of the "Irish republic." He said in part:

He told of numerous efforts to gain the ear of delegates to the peace conference and other statesmen for the purpose of furthering the Irish cause.

On Political Mission.

Former Gov. Dunne said in part:

"Our mission from the beginning was avowedly political. Yet our application for passports in Washington stated in writing our purpose was to assist the delegates of the Irish nation in presenting the case of Ireland to the world conference in Paris and to obtain recognition of a republican form of government in Ireland.

"We have good reason to know objection was made by the British authorities in Washington to the granting of passports to France. Yet these passports were granted.

House Takes Up Cause.

"On our arrival in Paris, we again, in a letter to President Wilson, explained the object of our mission. In answer, President Wilson gave our chairman, Mr. Walsh, a long and sympathetic interview and referred us to Col. House to take up the matter and obtain, if possible, the aims of our mission. That gentleman took hold of the matter promptly, vigorously, and sympathetically, and had several interviews with the British premier and his representatives.

"After this he expressed the opinion our request for safe conduct to Paris for the Irish delegates, De Valera, Plunkett, and Griffith, would be granted. At the same time, he stated Lloyd George desired a personal conference with us, and suggested we meet Mr. George.

Get British Passports.

"Owing to the press of business incident to the final formulation of the treaty with Germany, this conference had to be postponed, and, as we were desirous of conferring with President De Valera and his associates, it was agreed by representatives of Mr. George, Col. House, and ourselves additional passports should be given us for Great Britain and Ireland for the purpose of holding the conference and enabling us to become acquinted first hand with the conditions in Ireland.

"As all parties involved knew the object of our mission to Ireland, no restrictions or conditions were either suggested to us or imposed upon us."

KILLED HER, THEN HIMSELF.

Altoona, Pa., July 19.—Saying he could not live longer without her, John A. Walden, 38, this afternoon shot and instantly killed his wife, aged 20, from whom he had been separated, and then drank a bottle of carbolic acid from which he died in a few minutes.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEE

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 19.

WASHINGTON was stirred late today with a state department announcement that American sailors from the U. S. S. Cheyenne, while fishing in a ship's boat near Tampico, Mexico, had been robbed by armed Mexicans.

The report kindled long smoldering flames of feeling over outrages against Americans in Mexico and members of congress are particularly agitated. The state department immediately telegraphed urgent representations to the Mexican government, and Secretary Daniels, who said he had not heard of the incident until the state department announcement was made, found a message about it in his own department from Commander Finney of the U. S. S. Topeka at Tampico. He at once wired for full report and investigation.

SENATE leaders opposed to the league of nations have offered to show President Wilson a list of thirty-five senators who have solemnly pledged themselves to vote for rejection of the peace treaty unless radical amendments or reservations are made. If these thirty-five senators remain unyielding and the president will accept no compromise, the treaty will be rejected.

PRESIDENT WILSON is as strongly opposed to reservations regarding the Shantung settlement feature of the peace treaty as he is to other phases of the pact, but has admitted he doesn't like it. He is waiting word from the peace conference to let down the bars so that he can make a clear public statement regarding it in which he will admit that it was a necessary compromise.

OPPOSITION to giving Gen. March, chief of staff of the army, the rank of general for life is developing in both houses since President Wilson recommended that legislation be enacted giving this rank to both Generals Pershing and March. Representative Britten introduced a bill today authorizing the president to appoint Gen. Pershing to that rank, but ignoring Gen. March.

ATTEMPTS of wets to amend the prohibition law enforcement bill failed again in the house. Numerous amendments were offered, but all were voted down with clocklike precision.

LONDON ROARS SELF HOARSE ON VICTORY DAY

Mass in Streets and See Americans Lead the Big Parade.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, July 19.—A vast mob, which fills Trafalgar square, sweeps forward clear across Whitehall, blocking the way of the victory parade. Cavalry, police, thousands of constables, all drive forward into the face of the people. Enough open space is won for a half dozen men to march abreast. Screams come from the packed and milling crowds under the terrible pressure. Scores of men and women faint and are carried away.

Up from Whitehall comes tremendous burst of music. Then, on a splendid sorrel horse, Gen. John Pershing rides into view. A roar of cheers accompanies him, shot through by wild yells of Americans scattered all over the vast square. To Gen. Pershing and his soldiers of the United States is given the signal honor of leading the Victory march of the British empires and its allies.

Cream of United States Army.

Three thousand men of a composite United States regiment march not at all like machines. There is nothing mechanical about them. They seem rather to flow like an evenly running river, swift and deep and resistless. In full fighting kit, with trench helmets all dull gray green, they look like real fighting men. One does not need to see the insignia of the famous 1st and 2d divisions to know them for veterans. Yet, they are young and tall and slender, and there seemed a touch of puritan in their solemnity and lack of gay color.

Becomes Gorgeous Line.

Only as they pass under the Admiralty arch and all the massed flags and colors of our famous regiments were unfurled does the gray sinuous line suddenly grow gorgeous.

Marshal Foch, Admiral Beattie, Sir Douglas Haig, all the great allied leaders, followed with their men, deep roaring cheers heralding their coming. For two hours it was a continuous struggle with the vast mob, which swept into the square from half a dozen directions. Often all the police and cavalry could do was to keep a space six feet wide open through which three men abreast could squeeze by.

Nelson Column a Magnet.

All night several hundred people—soldiers in khaki, land girls in trousers, boots, and long coats; old Cockney women, little children—sat about the base of the great Nelson column in Trafalgar square. From the top of the tall slender shaft—where the great admiral in bronze looks out over the metropolis—fifty foot streamers of red and white hang down. Below dozens of girls and boys sit on the broad backs of Landseer's famous lions.

Before 6 in the morning the city is stirring. The sky is heavy with clouds. The sprinkle of rain is falling. From the west end and from the east currents of people—carrying boxes of luncheon, flags, and gay umbrellas—stream towards the heart of the city. By 8 o'clock hundreds of thousands are massed on the Mall between the white battle monuments.

Sun Breaks Clouds.

By 8 also scores of busses, packed with wounded soldiers and sailors in light blue uniforms, had forced their way under the Admiralty arch to stand on the Mall.

Before 9 o'clock the sky had cleared, the sun shown, and a light breeze set millions of flags a-flutter.

For hours a constant flood of people, almost solid from curb to curb, have swept through the Admiralty arch, down the Mall, towards Buckingham palace, where King George will review the parade. The king is the magnet and the center for the swarming millions. It is a tremendous demonstration of loyalty to the royal family.

Squads of British cavalry move slowly down Whitehall; thousands of police form solid walls, banking up the crowds against the buildings; long columns of ambulance men carry their litters through the gaps.

The police, in a solid front, are forcing back the crowds; troops of cavalry ride in to help keep the way open; women are fainting in the front ranks; far off trumpets sound.

Rush to Trafalgar Square.

From the Strand, where the crowds are massed solidly for miles, there is a resistless rush into Trafalgar square. Policemen in triple ranks with linked arms are swept away. Hundreds of women scream with fright and pale as they are crushed forward. From the mile long mob in the Strand comes a resistless pressure. A motor car full of Italian officers is caught in the swarm and is actually pushed back and forth by the swaying mass of people.

Trucks Useless Barriers.

Huge army trucks are being used as dams against the crowds. They are not effective. Always the front line of the enormous crowd is pushed forward. All the bells in hundreds of London steeples are chiming. Hundreds of people, scattered through the mass, are using trench periscopes bought from the government to see over those in front.

So while all the church bells chime loudest and distant guns thunder the triumph, the last marcher tramps under the arch towards the palace. Swarming millions scatter to the parks where the military bands play and thousands of singers raise patriotic choruses. Huge displays of fireworks will lead up to 11 o'clock at which hour bonfires and beacons will be lighted on every hilltop of these islands to notify the world that Britain's greatest victory has been won.

Report Dutch Will Refuse to Surrender the Kaiser

GENEVA, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—It is reported from Berne that the Dutch prince consort, who is traveling in Switzerland, has declared in private conversations that Holland would formally refuse to surrender the former German emperor to the allies if asked.

MAKE WAY FOR THE OVERLAND TRANSPORT TRAIN!

Glimpses at a Few of the 65 Army Trucks on Their Way Across the Continent to Boom Good Roads and Motorized Transportation at Chicago Heights Yesterday.

LIEUT. COL. CHARLES B. McCLURE.

CROSS COUNTRY TRANSPORT TRAIN VISITS SUBURB

65 Army Trucks, at Chicago Heights, Boom Good Roads.

The days of '49, when ox drawn prairie schooners crept across the plains, are being reënacted à la twentieth century. Yesterday afternoon the first transcontinental army motor train chugged into Chicago Heights en route to San Francisco.

There are sixty-five trucks in all, with a crew of 255 enlisted men and thirty officers. Everything from kitchens and ambulances to machine shops and 3,000,000 candle power searchlights is in the caravan. When in travel formation it extends along the road for three miles.

Start at White House.

The train, under command of Lieut. Col. Charles B. McClure, left Washington July 7 after a zero milestone had been laid in front of the White House.

The purpose of the journey is to demonstrate the strategic value of the motor truck in times of war and to boost the good roads movement. Incidentally it is hoped 6,000 recruits may be obtained to send to the motor transport school at Camp Holabird, Maryland.

Seeks Good Roads Support.

Dr. S. M. Johnson, one of the chief lobbyists for national highways in Washington, is accompanying the caravan as a speaker He is trying to get support for the Townsend bill, which calls for an appropriation of $425,000,000 for construction of federal roads.

Lieut. Fred C. Creighton of the Chicago recruiting office, 526 South States street, met the train at Chicago Heights with a truck full of enlistment blanks. He will accompany the "gas hounds" as far as the Mississippi. The departure is scheduled for Monday morning soon after reveille.

CAMBRIDGE TO HONOR WAR HEADS.

LONDON, July 19.—Cambridge university has decided to confer honorary degrees on Gen. Pershing, the American commander; Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, the Canadian commander, and other war chiefs. The ceremony of presentation will take place next Wednesday.

YOU'LL MUDDLE AGAIN, BRITISH WARNED BY FOCH

LONDON, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—"The next time England will be in the same position as the last time—she will not be ready, and we shall have to wait for her," is a statement made by Marshal Foch of France to a correspondent of the Daily Mail, which prints an interview with the commander in chief of the allied armies this morning.

Marshal Foch, in the course of the interview, however, pays highest tribute to the British army, saying: "The military history of the world contains no parallel to the production of such an army in such a way. In every respect the British army has been superb."

The marshal insists that Great Britain should maintain large reserves of military material, saying: "That is one of the obvious and indispensable precautions to be taken."

"Look at the out of date equipment with which we started this war," the marshal is quoted as saying. "The next war will be more than ever one of machinery. You should have laboratories with inventors always at work keeping you abreast of the mechanical side of war."

TAKES POSION TO ENFORCE PEACE; FAILS, MAY DIE

Here's a novel way to settle the domestic troubles of young husbands and wives—scaring the warring couple by taking poison.

Mrs. Laura Gibbins, 6445 Harper avenue, mother of Mrs. Charles Stewart, tried it yesterday, and now she's hovering between life and death in the Illinois Central hospital. Daughter and son-in-law have been on the "outs" for a year and yesterday she invited the pair to her room to iron out the difficulties.

They wrangled and kissed and wrangled again. The daughter promised she would return to her husband. Then she changed her mind. Just to "frighten" the couple, Mrs. Gibbins drank wood alcohol and chloroform.

On the way to the hospital Mr. and Mrs. Stewart still continued to argue. Finally the wife said she was going west, but on second thought decided to postpone her departure for a few days.

POLAND BLOCKS REPATRIATION OF RUSS THOUSANDS

Prisoners in German Camps Likely to Stay All Winter.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, July 18, via Copenhagen, July 19.—Month after month Poland has blocked repatriation of Germany's Russian prisoners, until now fears are expressed that these victims of war will be held in prison camps through another winter.

There are said to be between two and three hundred thousand of them, and nearly all have been prisoners since 1914 or 1915.

Among officers of the interallied military mission here, which last spring undertook the repatriation of these prisoners, it is felt that unless the road to Russia is opened in the near future—before cold weather arrives in that country early in the fall—it will be useless to consider sending these men back to their homes until next spring.

In Sixteen Large Camps.

Most of them are now concentrated in sixteen large camps in different parts of Germany, but many thousands are scattered in small working groups throughout the country. Gathering them together and transporting them will require two or three months, and if it is to be done this fall it should be begun immediately.

But Poland blocks the way. When it was first proposed to transport the Russians across Poland that country refused permission on the ground that the prisoners would leave the trains and not return to Russia. Then assurances were given the trains would be guarded and the Russians kept prisoners to the eastern boundary of Poland. Then Poland said something to the effect that the Russians might still come back into Poland.

Block Another Move.

Under these circumstances a plan was made to repatriate 40,000 Ukrainians from Germany across Czecho-Slovakia. The Czechs had promised to provide a daily train of fifty cars and all arrangements had been completed, when the Polish army made a new advance that cut off that route and still blocks it.

That was two months ago, and since then the interallied mission and field forces, including United States army details and Red Cross representatives at the big camps, have been waiting for the responsible authorities to do something to make repatriation of these thousands of prisoners possible, but have seen no indication here that anything is being done in that direction.

From the best information obtainable here, the responsibility will rest upon the interallied war council to modify the present attitude of Poland.

Bad Beau Brummels Get $80 in Store Robbery

Two fashion plates of the male sex strode into the dry goods store of E. F. Anderson, 4500 Montrose avenue, yesterday, and, after purchasing two flaming yellow ties from Miss Mildred Glaser, displayed revolvers. They explored the cash register and removed $80. Part of the money represented sales of United States stamps from the subpostal station, which is run in connection with the store. The men escaped in a green auto.

ASSASSIN SHOTS KILL UNARMED PLANT WATCHMAN

Hans Rasmussen hadn't a chance for his life.

The shot came as he stepped into the alley yesterday morning. The bullet caught him in the chest; he fell and lay still. Even if he had had his revolver with him, he could not have used it.

Rasmussen was a watchman employed by the Pinkerton protective patrol to guard the Rideway Quest company's paint factory at 2514 West Forty-eighth street. He was 50, single, and lived at 2205 West Park avenue.

He had left his revolver and his uniform in the offices of the paint company, and it is believed, was going home when the assassin—perhaps a criminal caught in an attempt at burglary, perhaps a personal enemy—fired three times.

Mrs. Mary Gibson, 2456 West Forty-eighth street, heard the shots. It was shortly before 7 o'clock. She went to investigate and saw the body. It lay near the gate that opens into the plant. There was a bullet hole in the gate. Mrs. Gibson called the police.

Rasmussen had been a watchman in that locality for two years. There have been several burglaries in nearby buildings.

Cold Wave Sweeps Rome; Fires Lighted in Homes

ROME, July 19.—A severe cold wave is sweeping the province, with a heavy snowfall reported in the highlands surrounding Rome. The inhabitants have been forced to put on their winter clothing and fires have been started in their homes.

WESTERN FLEET STARTS CRUISE TO GOLDEN GATE

Six Great Battleships Sail and Two Others Will Be Added.

Old Point Comfort, Va., July 19.—The Pacific fleet was well on its way tonight toward the west coast of the United States.

Ceremony was lacking today, but will mark the triumphant entrance of the ships into the Golden Gate about the middle of August. There President Wilson is expected to review them.

After a week in the Virginia roadstead preparing for their voyage, under Admiral Hugh Rodman, the grim superdreadnaughts and swift destroyers weighed anchor at 8:30 a. m., and turned their prows seaward on a voyage that is to furnish the first real test of the Panama canal and carry to the people of the Pacific coast the first great fleet assigned to their defense.

Great Ships in Fleet.

Swinging out past the capes, the fleet turned southward in cruising formation with the six superdreadnaughts, which with two others are to form the backbone of the Pacific naval defense, steaming within a triangular screen made by fifty destroyers. In that formation the ships will remain until the end of the first leg of the voyage at Colon.

Upon its arrival at San Diego, the first stop on the Pacific coast, the fleet will be joined by many other craft assigned to Admiral Rodman's command, and the combined armada will enter San Francisco harbor. Secretary Daniels will meet the vessels at San Diego and accompany them on their travels from port to port and finally will go to Honolulu with several of the craft.

Battle Practice Planned.

Plans for the extensive maneuvers and battle practices in which the fleet will engage after the conclusion of its "welcome home" cruise along the coast already are being worked out, and later will come "battles" with the Atlantic fleet and joint fleet exercises in both the Pacific and the Atlantic.

Irish Flag Will Not Fly At Bridgeport, Conn.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 19.—Because of a protest by the Pastors' association and others the Irish flag will not fly from the top of the city hall next week while funds are being collected for the Irish educational campaign.

Until it was discovered that a state statute existed prohibiting the display of any foreign flag from any public building and the request for the display of the flag had been withdrawn, feeling between the two factions ran high. Permission to display the flag was given by the aldermen last Monday.

The protest of the Pastors' association said, in part:

"To fly the flag of the so-called Irish republic beside the Stars and Stripes would constitute a gross impertinence to one of our allies and an insult to true Americans."

U. S. Mining Firm Must Pay Britons $15,000,000

Helena, Mont., July 19.—Under a decree handed down today by Judge George M. Bourquin in the United States District court in the litigation of Minerals Separation, Ltd., of London, against the Butte and Superior Mining company of Butte, Mont., it was estimated tonight the Montana company would be obliged to pay between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 damages to the English plaintiffs.

The decree, attorneys said, would operate as a perpetual injunction against use by the Montana company of an oil flotation process of reducing ores, and followed a decision in the United States Supreme court upon a judgment originally rendered by Judge Bourquin in favor of the plaintiffs.

MEXICANS RAID AMERICAN SHIP CARRYING FLAG

by bandits July 6, about nine miles from Tampico. One gold ring, one pair of shoes and one watch stolen."

Congressmen Are Cautious.

Members of congress who could be reached tonight were cautious in regard to talking for publication. If the facts prove as reported many of them admitted the situation must be handled with a firm hand without delay.

Senator Fall, New Mexico, foremost in the senate in the study of Mexican affairs and outspoken for years in regard to it, said:

"Mr. Phillips says it is a 'grave situation.' Yes, it is, indeed, a grave situation.

"We seized Vera Cruz on account of attacks upon our soldiers. We killed 200 Mexicans and put Huerta out of power. We put Carranza in power. Two years ago Mexican soldiers fired on our soldiers and our flag and we never did a thing. And now this last affair is characterized as a 'grave situation'."

Fall Loses Faith in Protection.

The senator said he had lost faith to such an extent that he will believe protection of American citizens in Mexico a fact only when he sees that protection brought about.

Senator Ashurst, Arizona, another border senator keenly interested in Mexican affairs, was the most outspoken in his comment.

"Every sensible American knows the course we should adopt to stop these outrages," he said. "We ought to kill about 2,000 Mexicans. This incident will mean only more watchful waiting, I suppose."

Secretary Daniels late today, after a conference with the state department, sent this dispatch to Commander Finney on the U. S. S. Topeka:

"Wire full report and result investigation of robbery of motor sailing launch of U. S. S. Cheyenne. Have parties been identified or apprehended?"

He stated that he would have sent such a dispatch long before had he seen the original message from Commander Finney.

Secretary Baker Won't Talk.

Secretary Baker said that the state department announcement was the first that he had heard of the affair. He would not discuss the situation.

Asked how many soldiers were on the border who would be available at once, should action be decided upon, the secretary refused to say. Neither would he give any opinion as to what course the government might pursue and referred his questioner to the testimony of Gen. March, chief of staff, before the military affairs committees. Gen. March said the number of soldiers available for Mexico at once was 26,000.

Pacific Fleet is Ready.

Should the American government prepare to back up its representations or to demand a salute to the flag, as it did in the Vera Cruz affair, it was noted tonight that the new Pacific fleet composed of battleships, cruisers, and destroyers is now en route to its western station. It is within a few days' run of Tampico.

It was rumored that the navy department might detach some destroyers and order them to steam direct to Mexican waters to await instructions. Whether there has been any communication sent to the Pacific fleet could not be learned.

Climax of Many Outrages.

The attack upon the American sailors is made particularly aggravating because of the fact that there have been a number of recent outrages reported from the Tampico oil district.

Among them was the murder of John W. Carroll, June 16, and the murder about eleven days ago of Peter Catrone, another American citizen, at Valles in the San Luis Potosi district.

In each of these instances, as in connection with numerous others, representations have been sent by the United States to the Carranza government, but the situation remains as dangerous for Americans in Mexico as ever.

Will Identify Attackers.

The government, it is said, will this time make every effort to establish beyond a doubt whether the Mexicans involved in the attack upon the sailors were outlaws or Carrancista soldiers or police.

There is no definite information as to the conduct of the American sailors, but enlisted men proceed under the strictest orders as to their actions.

British Subject Murdered.

Laredo, Tex., July 19.—Private telegrams received here today stated that Theodore Patterson, mine superintendent of the Mazapil Copper company at Concepcion Del Oro, state of Zacatecas, Mexico, was killed by bandits at his camp yesterday. Patterson was a British subject. No details were given.

27 Killed in Mexico.

Nogales, Ariz., July 18.—Twenty-seven were killed during a fight Thursday morning between bandits and the garrison at Potam, Sonora, 475 kilometers [about 300 miles] south of here on the Southern Pacific de Mexico railroad, according to American and British passengers who arrived here today. They said the attacking band was composed of "Bronco" Yaqui Indians.

Airmen Reach the Border.

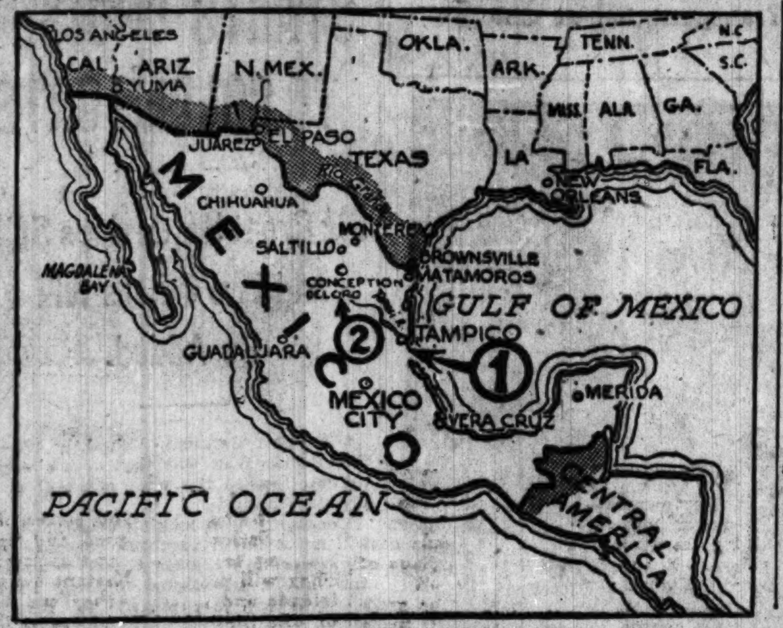
San Antonio, Tex., July 19.—Twenty-eight air service officers from Rockwell field arrived here last night and will be assigned to stations along the border for patrol. They were in command of Capt. H. R. Kelly.

Strategic Railways on Border.

Waukesha, Wis., July 19.—Activity along the Mexican border is indicated by the mission on which Maj. James H. Grier of this city has gone. With several other officers, headed by Lieut. Col. H. B. Perlee, he is surveying the whole border with a view to laying out a strategic narrow gauge railroad.

The report will be made soon to Maj. Gen. Derosey C. Cabell, commanding the southern department, according to an article in the San Antonio Light, received here Saturday. The intention, according to the article, is to move a considerable part of the 2,500 miles of American narrow gauge track in France to the border with the equipment, or such part as is not held in France.

MEXICANS AGAIN INSULT OLD GLORY



Tampico [1] is again the scene of a serious complication between Washington and Mexico City. A boat flying the American flag and filled with sailors from the United States monitor Cheyenne was stopped and robbed by an armed band. The attack took place July 6 in the Tamesi river near the port. The district is fully controlled by Carranza. The state department has made "serious representations" to Mexico City and Tampico. At Concepcion del Oro, Zacatecas, [2] bandits are reported to have murdered Theodore Patterson, a British subject and mine superintendent.

FEDERAL TIMBER GOING IN SMOKE; APPEAL TO LANE

Northwest Forest Fires Threaten Renewal of 1910 Disaster.

Boise, Idaho, July 19.—Gov. Davis and representatives of the forestry service will ask Secretary Lane for an immediate emergency appropriation to fight forest fires raging in central and north Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and Montana. Gov. Davis goes to Washington tomorrow.

Reports today indicate the situation is critical, with damage to timber lands approaching the loss sustained in the great fires of 1910 when more than 200 lives were lost and millions of dollars' worth of timber destroyed.

The fires have invaded the lands of the public domain and are burning practically uncontrolled. State timber lands have escaped serious damage owing to the vigilant patrol, but timber on federal lands, practically unguarded because of lack of funds, is being rapidly decimated.

Dread of High Wind.

Spokane, Wash., July 19.—Forest fires in northern Idaho, eastern Washington and western Montana continued today to eat their way into valuable government, state, and private timber, although in some instances it was believed the flames were under control.

Forest service officials and fire protective association rangers said again today that a high wind would work havoc.

Three fires, one on Caribou Creek, between Priest lake and Upper Priest lake, a mile square; one on Big Creek, and another on Blue lake, were believed of incendiary origin. The fire on Caribou Creek has spread.

Fires near Henderson and St. Regis, Mont., are blazing over unlimited territory, destroying everything in their path. Near Missoula, the Swartz Creek fire is especially dangerous.

Labor Trouble a Factor.

The Rattlesnake fire, northeast of Missoula, which has burned over between 4,000 and 5,000 acres, is being checked, though serious fears are felt concerning it because of labor troubles.

The Henderson fire, in western Montana, has already covered 11,000 acres, and the flames have crossed the divide into Mullan Gulch, and are steadily creeping northward.

The Gold Creek fire, which surrounds St. Regis on the north and south side of the river, is said to be the most serious in the district, threatening ranches and small towns. The flames are over a two mile front.

Fires are reported in the Wenatchee valley in Washington and the Herman creek forest in Oregon, where 1,400 acres has been burned over.

PERRY'S CRAVAT LOSES ITS 'PEP'; SO DOES PERRY

His Plan to Blind the Sleuth and Flee Goes Wrong.

Something new in neckwear came into Chicago yesterday with Detective John Cartan of the bureau and Franklin S. Perry, alias Hinton, late of the Canyon City, Colo., penitentiary. It was a floury tie—no, not flowery—floury.

Perry, it is said, was a stenographer in the department of justice in Chicago. He fled the town after cashing a number of bad checks, say the police, but rode to grief in Colorado.

Gets "Soft Job" in Prison.

As time went on he got a "soft job" in the warden's office. And at about this time Arthur Hanson, formerly of Chicago, went to Canon City. Hanson was arrested four years ago by Cartan. He was wanted in Stockton, Ill., for burglary. He told Cartan he just had been married, pleaded with him to be lenient. Through Cartan's efforts he received mercy in Stockton. He tried for a time to be good, but his hand slipped.

Hanson Warns Cartan.

Perry learned one day that as soon as he was released from Canyon City he would be taken back to Chicago by Cartan. He told Hanson all about it. He swore Cartan wouldn't take him back. He had a scheme.

Cartan arrived at the penitentiary in due time and met Hanson. Hanson warned him about Perry.

"He's got red pepper in his tie," said Hanson, "and when he gets the chance he'll blind you with it. That is, he thinks it's red pepper. It was, but I substituted flour."

And Cartan found it was even so.

WHAT TO SEE AND HOW TO GET TO FOREST PARKS

Here's First of Seven Guides to County's Woodland.

BY EYE WITNESS.

The Cook county forest preserve, which secures to the people of Chicago and their posterity forever oases of woodland to the north, west, and south of the city, comprises nearly 15,000 acres, or the equivalent of nearly twenty-five township sections, such a section being a mile square.

The preserve is being steadily increased by purchases and will ultimately comprise about 30,000 acres, which is all the available forest land in the county. Already $3,000,000 has gone into it.

These tracts provide the public with camping, boating, fishing (under restriction), and picnic privileges. They are equipped with comfort stations. The supply of spring water is copious and of the best.

The preserve is divided into eight districts, each administered by a district forester and staff of caretakers.

These districts include sixteen widely separated parcels, distributed between Palatine township in the extreme northwest of Cook county and Bloom township in the southeast corner of the county.

Seven Large Tracts.

Of these sixteen parcels, seven are extensive and reasonably compact and will properly be the first to receive the attention of the pedestrian desiring to make a comprehensive tour of the Cook county forest preserve. The other nine are small and isolated, though three of them—Turnbull woods, in the northeast corner of the county; Hazel woods, two miles south of La Grange, and the Thornton and Glenwood tracts (connected) in Thornton and Bloom townships—are notably beautiful and will repay study.

The seven large tracts are:

(1) The North Branch Chicago river tract: Extending along both banks of the North Branch from Lawrence avenue northward nearly to the county line.

(2) The great Desplaines valley tract: Extending along both banks of the Desplaines river from West Madison street northward to the county line.

(3) Deer Grove, or Palatine Preserve: 1,200 acres lying in the northwest corner of Cook county and extending a mile and a quarter from north to south and a mile and a half from east to west.

(4) Elk Grove: 1,600 acres lying in the western half of Elk Grove township in the northwest part of the county. This region was known to the Indians as "The Land of Bubbling Springs."

(5) Salt Creek Valley Preserve: A tract of nearly 1,000 acres situated mostly in Proviso township and extending from the Village of Riverside west to the western boundary of the county. It follows the contours of the whimsical Salt creek, a stream the Indians called "Lovely Little River."

(6) Palos Hills Preserve: Nearly 2,400 acres lying mostly amid the hills and ravines of the northwestern quarter of Palos township. In this preserve are the Swallow Cliff and Thoreau spring.

(7) Chicago Heights Preserve: Two thousand acres (of which the beautiful Thornton and Glenwood tracts are a part, though isolated from the main tract) lying mostly in the southwestern corner of Bloom township, which is the southeastern township of Cook county.

Series of Maps Ready.

It is intended to print on successive Sundays seven maps, each covering one of these seven main tracts of the forest preserve and showing the pedestrian what is to be seen within the borders of a particular tract. The first of these maps appears today and covers the principal points of interest in Palos Hills preserve under twenty letters—from A to T.

For the sake of ready reference the key to this lettering is printed beneath the accompanying map.

The pedestrian will find it convenient to keep in mind the fact that a township, usually, is six miles square and contains thirty-six sections, each a mile square and comprising 640 acres. Thus the pedestrian by counting the section squares in the accompanying map of Palos preserve will instantly be able to estimate the distance from point to point. Not all the thirty-six sections of Palos township are shown on this map, but the section squares run a mile to a side.

How to Get to Palos Hills.

As the key under the map locates the noteworthy points in Palos Hills preserve, it remains only to tell the reader how to get to it from Chicago by the main routes:

By steam cars: Chicago and Alton suburban trains to Willow Springs entrance of preserve.

By electric cars: Chicago-Joliet Electric railway via Archer avenue to Willow Springs.

By auto: South on Western avenue to Ninety-fifth street and west on Ninety-fifth street to Keene avenue. Fine roads all the way.

Note that by going south from Ninety-fifth street on Keene avenue for a mile and a half you strike Bluff road (One Hundred and Seventh street), which takes you into the western sections of the preserve and to the public golf links at letter H.

By going on Keene avenue as far south as One Hundred and Nineteenth street, and then west on One Hundred and Nineteenth street, the autoist will reach the neighborhood of Swallow Cliff and Thoreau spring.

The village of Palos Park, a goodly walk through a fine countryside from the southern sections of the Palos Hills preserve, is reached by the Wabash railroad's suburban service.

THE SIGHTS OF THE FOREST PRESERVE AND HOW TO FIND THEM

BY EYE WITNESS.

A Series of Maps Guiding the Pedestrian to the Scenic Beauties and Natural Wonders of Chicago's Woodland Girdle.

1: Palos Hills Tract; 2,400 Acres.

A—Junction of Ninety-fifth Street and Keene Avenue. This is the principal entrance to some of the choicest parts of Palos Hills preserve. Here are comfort stations, drinking water and parking space.

B—Village of Willow Springs, recently renamed Spring Forest. Chicago and Alton suburban trains and the Chicago-Joliet electric trains stop here. Station 300 feet from preserve entrance. Nearby the canal boat men on the old Illinois and Michigan canal stopped to fill their barrels from the springs.

C—Maple Hill. Approach to notable view at letter E. Chicago-Joliet electrics stop here also.

D—Probable site of ancient Indian fort. On sandy knoll marked by group of trees.

E—Notable view over basin of proposed lake.

F-G—F marks Archer avenue leading to the beautiful Sag church and burying ground one and a half miles distant from the preserve. Here the famous Inspector Shea is buried. G marks the Bluff road by which the church is a mile directly west. These roads intersect near the church.

H—Public golf links. Leave Chicago-Joliet electric cars at Red Gate. Conductor knows the stop but it is not on map.

I—Site of old French fort, of which no trace remains. Site covered by a barnyard. Not on preserve property and may be visited only by permission.

J—Old French fort No. 2. Slight traces. Private property. Permission necessary.

K—Bettyman spring.

L—Clow spring. The little jog at letter L was bought on account of this spring.

M—Swallow cliff. Haunt of thousands of bank or sand swallows whose wonderful ways and dwellings may be observed from the adjacent brookside.

N—Curious triple elm tree grown from saplings which a hunter wove together many years ago to form a screen to conceal his body from the deer for which he was lying in wait.

O—Century-old log cabin. In ravine.

P—Thoreau spring. A remarkable spring of pure icy water. Six feet deep, but so clear it looks only three. Named in memory of the Concord naturalist and philosopher.

Q—Eighty acres of hawthorn and wild crabapple trees. Many of the hawthorns (or thornapple trees) grown into fantastic shapes through the cattle feeding on them when the trees were young. Blooming time in May, when the sight is worth going miles to see.

R—Spencer spring.

S—Sharpshooters' park and clubhouse. Though a club, the restaurant is open to the public.

T—Village of Palos Park. Good walkers who are not afraid of a five mile stretch can hoof it to Swallow cliff from this station, to which there are ten Wabash trains daily.

It is worth remembering that this whole Palos Hills region was the scene of events that affected the course of empire when the French were attempting to subjugate the Pottawattomies.

The district forester of Palos Hills preserve is Edward J. Murphy.

The Tribune wishes to express hearty thanks to Emmett J. Flavin, chief engineer and head of the map making department of the forest preserve commission, and to his staff, for patient assistance in preparing the accompanying map and others that are to appear in this series.

BULGARIA TO PAY A BIG INDEMNITY TO BALKAN FOES

Delay Treaty Pending Settlement of Turk Future.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Wireless Dispatch to The Tribune.]

PARIS, July 18.—[Delayed.]—The Bulgarian treaty is being delayed owing to the fact that certain clauses are contingent upon the disposition made of Turkey and the Turkish question cannot then be approached until President Wilson finds out from congress if the United States will accept the mandates for Constantinople and Armenia.

Will Name Indemnity.

However, it is announced that the Bulgarian treaty will name reparations somewhere between 1,000,000,000 and 2,000,000,000 francs, which will be divided between the Roumanians and Serbians, with the Greeks getting a small share for damages as a result of the Bulgarian invasion of a small part of Greece.

The council of five is awaiting a reply from President Wilson regarding his attitude toward continuing the blockade of the Russian bolsheviks.

Favor Keeping Ports Closed.

The French, Poles, Czechs, Roumanians, and even the Germans favor keeping the ports of Russia closed until the bolsheviks are crushed, as it is feared war material will be smuggled into Russia if the blockade is lifted. Even if arms and munitions are kept out the bolsheviks will be able to keep their people if they feed them, whereas at present, owing to lack of food and all other supplies even the bolshevik peasants are becoming restless.

Worthington is wanted by the federal authorities here for having in his possession altered government warrants.

N. U. PLEDGES AID TO WIN 1,000,000 OVER TO CHURCH

Three Special Courses Will Help M. E. "Soul Campaign."

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Northwestern university is to be one of the chief agencies in promoting the winning of 1,000,000 souls next year, in accordance with the plans of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Prof. J. A. James, dean of the graduate school of the university, made the plan public for the first time yesterday at the Desplaines camp meeting. It was Methodist Minute Men's day at the camp and Prof. James spoke as chairman of the Minute Men of the Chicago northern district.

"One of the reasons I am filled with optimism over the campaign to win 1,000,000 souls for Christ the coming year," he said, "is the manner in which Northwestern university has planned to coöperate by establishing departments in religious education, missions, and rural sociology."

Prof. Norman Richardson and Prof. George Herbert Betts, both of Boston university, will head the department of religious education.

Services for Schools.

"We have been promised by the public school authorities of Evanston the privilege of establishing week day religious education in connection with the schools if the churches will back the plan." This statement of Prof. James was greeted with an outburst of applause.

"Prof. E. D. Soper of Drew theological seminary," he continued, "will become professor of religion and missions. A department of rural sociology, which will be a help to rural pastors, also will be established.

"Just now on the campus of the university there are sixty men in training to go to the various foreign fields as missionaries. They are among the brightest and best trained men we have.

"The Methodist centenary also has furnished the money for the returning soldiers to continue their education which was cut off by their enlistment."

63,000 Ready to Aid.

C. E. Nordeman, chairman, said there were 6,400 Methodist minute men in the Chicago area and 63,000 in the nation who stood ready to enter into the campaign for 1,000,000 souls.

"We wish to make it our one business," he said. "The greatest sight at the Methodist centenary in Columbus was 7,000 minute men marching and then listening to Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels."

Mr. Nordeman wore a Methodist minute man's hat as he spoke and drilled the audience in the "yell" and "salute" which the organization has adopted. The yell was:

"Amen! Praise the Lord! Old John Wesley! Minute men! Minute men! Minute men! One, two, three, four, five! If anybody speaks more than five minutes, kill him! Shoot him! Skin him alive!"

G. H. Stineback and J. W. Perry, Methodist minute men, led the evening service.

One of the features of today's services will be the thanksgiving service for the returned soldiers and memorial services for those who died.

DIVORCE COURTS CLOSE WITH NEW RECORD FOR YEAR

6,220 Decrees Granted; Last Day's Grist a Big One.

Chancellors in the divorce branches of the Superior and Circuit courts, after completing the greatest year in the history of Cook county, yesterday hung up their gowns, locked up their chambers and tramped away on their vacations. One branch in each court will be open during the summer for emergency business.

The term just closing—1918 and 1919—will go down in the records of the court as the biggest year in history. It will no doubt be remembered by every one of 12,440 disappointed wives and divorced husbands. A total of 6,220 decrees was granted during the year.

The war, liquor and a seemingly increasing belief in free love is blamed for the unusual number of ruined romances, according to the experts.

Judge Hopkins Explains.

"The war, which promoted hasty marriages, has greatly increased the number of domestic tragedies," asserted Judge Jacob H. Hopkins yesterday. "War weddings in seven cases out of ten proved failures. The young brides were afraid of those strange men they married two years ago. And some of the men, not knowing a woman's heart, came back as intimate husbands, when they should have wooed their wives all over again.

"A great cause of unhappiness in married life is liquor. The next few months will see a great decrease in divorce.

"Then, with the newspapers constantly telling of men being found with 'other women,' people have come to believe that it is almost legitimate. An extremely high percentage of broken homes is shattered by free love."

Next year the Circuit court will have four judges hearing divorces. This year there were two. Judge William Fenimore Cooper in the Superior court will sit on divorce cases. Both dockets are nearly cleared at present.

Judge Brothers Holds Record.

Judge David M. Brothers, in the Circuit court, holds the record for hearing the most cases. He is followed by Judge Hopkins of the Superior court. The records show the following figures:

Judge David M. Brothers, Circuit	3,036
Judge Jacob H. Hopkins, Superior	2,028
Judge R. S. Tuthill, Circuit	739
Judge John J. Sullivan, Superior	367
Judge Charles M. Foell, Superior	50
Judge Denis E. Sullivan, Superior	16

"Judge Hopkins heard more contested cases than Judge Brothers," said Bailiff George Rudge. "That is why Judge Brothers comes first in number of decrees."

Approximately 1,500 more cases were disposed of this term than last.

"Cook county — Chicago — is going wild," said Robert Sturgeon, who has been the divorce clerk in the Superior court.

RECORD HOLDERS

Divorce Judges Hang Up New High Mark for Season.

Judge David M. Brothers and Judge Jacob H. Hopkins

Yesterday the marital mixup mills were jammed. Many and varied were the complaints. Judge Hopkins' court displayed the S. R. O. sign.

Fred E. Cross was there with a complaint against Gertrude. He said she was faithless.

"We were married June 15, 1912, and she fell in love with a singing professor," he testified. "At first she took one lesson a week from him. Pretty soon she decided that she needed a lesson every day and he sent her bouquets and it got to be pretty thick. Finally she packed her clothes and left me.

"I met him on the street one day and accused him of stealing my wife. 'Well, what are you going to do about it?' he asked me. I did it—and we were both arrested for battling."

Judge Hopkins granted a decree.

Ex-Soldier Gets Decree.

Fred J. Sheridan, 4004 Claredon avenue, a broker who was in the army, complained that Ethel Shannon Sheridan had an affair with a traveling man.

"She wrote to him and he wrote to her and once I saw them descending in the same elevator from a hotel," he said.

Witnesses corroborated his testimony and Judge Hopkins granted a decree.

Lincoln W. Oates, 3336 West Chicago, was another man whose wife had strayed from the narrow path.

"I found Helen in a hotel room with a man," he said. "Neither of them was dressed. I cut that man all up. Cut him five times with a knife."

He was granted a divorce.

Henry B. Chon, 836 Fletcher street, accused Dollie of infidelity.

"She was living with a little Filipino boy," he said and he won a divorce.

Thomas Marriott, 60 years old, 523 Surf street, married Caroline in Devonshire, and then came to America.

"I wrote for her and sent her money to come, but my sons answered saying that she was drinking and acting like a maniac, he testified. He was granted a decree by Judge Hopkins.

Henry W. Button, 16 West Ontario street, said that he and Katherine were living together in Minnesota.

"But she told me that she didn't like the woods and left," he said.

He was divorced.

Women Also Complain.

There were women there, too, yesterday.

Mrs. Rose Brown, 1816 Humboldt boulevard, charged her husband, Joseph with cruelty and then waived alimony.

"I don't want alimony because he is the father of my sister's two children and he must support them," she said. Her attorney, Frank Teed, agreed, and a divorce was granted.

Anna L. Bird, 4136 Jackson boulevard, rocked the courtroom with her testimony.

"I asked George for some clothes for the children and he disappeared," she testified. "Later I went down in the basement and he was rummaging through the rag bag. He said he was looking for clothes."

She was divorced.

Elsie Skoglund, 4406 Greenview avenue, said that Carl R. Skoglund had threatened to kill her.

"He said he didn't believe that he would hang, either," she asserted. "He spent my money on liquor." Decree.

Ordered From Home.

Emilie Pappas, 1914 Park avenue, said Peter told her to get out.

"I did," she said, and won a divorce.

Mabel Graham of Franklin Park called Lansing a professional drunkard.

"He spent my money—he got drunk—and he deserted." she said.

"Sufficient," ruled Judge Hopkins.

Barbara P. Sandusky said William Lester Sandusky loved liquor parties and liquor music. She won a decree.

Mary M. Garvey said another woman stole Charles. Divorce.

Elizabeth Crowley Fenning, 1431 Jackson boulevard, said William "went and marrit another woman."

"Bigamist, eh?" mused Judge Hopkins, and granted a decree.

Calls Husband Criminal.

Belle Mershan McCoy, 1520 Lowe avenue, called William and "out and out criminal." She is free.

Grace Griswold, 504 East Forty-seventh street, said Charles wanted to sell their store and buy a boat and tour the world.

"He's touring now—I don't know where," Mrs. Griswold said. Neither does she care—she is divorced.

Cora Stewart, 3019 Jackson boulevard, said Walter announced that Europe was his destination when he deserted. She hasn't seen him since—and she has a divorce.

"Some day's business," sighed Judge Hopkins, as he slid out of his gown. "Now for a little rest—and a little golf."

Two hundred and twenty-two went to the penitentiary as a result of the court's action, 225 to the reformatory, 280 to the house of correction, and 113 to the county jail. Twenty-two went to Oak Forest, two to Kankakee, and one each to St. Charles, Chester, and the Lincoln State school.

WITNESSES BARE BAKER'S METHOD OF BUYING CAMP

Huge Overpayment and Coercion Charged in Georgia Site.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Evidence of the unusual haste of the war department in purchasing the site of Camp Benning, Georgia, after the military committees of the last congress had forbidden the buying of more land for camp sites; of exorbitant prices paid and coercive methods used by the department's agents to induce certain owners to part with their land, was presented today to the house subcommittee investigating camp sites, of which Representative McKenzie, Illinois, is chairman.

Baker Overrode Committee.

This effort to acquire the land occurred after the senate military committee had twice voted against the project and after Senator Hoke Smith, Georgia, had imparted to the mind of Secretary Baker "the obsession," according to Mr. Baker's own testimony, that the sentiment of the committee was contrary to its formally recorded votes, thus inducing Mr. Baker to approve the expenditure of $9,000,000 on Camp Benning, and after the signing of the armistice. In fact, most of the land appears, according to testimony, to have been bought this year.

Two Witnesses from Georgia.

Dr. Charles Nelson Howard Jr. and Charles Albert Rheuark, both of Cusseta, Ga., and county commissioners of Chattahooche county, were the witnesses today, having been sent to Washington by the county commissioners to urge the salvaging of the camp and its restoration to the land owners; or if that could not be accomplished, such action by congress as would eliminate the present indeterminate status of the camp.

For the Arthur Bussey plantation, which former testimony showed to have cost the owner $32,000, the government paid $439,000, plus allowances which, according to the witness, George W. Summers, would bring the total cost up to $500,000.

"Uncle Sam an Easy Mark."

Under cross-examination by Representative Doremus, Dr. Howard said, "It was generally known along during the week before July 1 of this year that anybody who had anything to sell to the government could get any price they asked for it."

Regarding methods employed to force a sale of the land where the owner was reluctant, Rheuark testified, "Maj. John Paul Jones, the army officer charged with acquiring the camp site, said I had better sell or the government would take it by condemnation and I wouldn't get the money; that my great grandchildren would get it—and I haven't got a child of my own yet."

Suitable Furniture for the Bedroom

Cane paneled bed from the Puissarnaud suite.

Cane paneled beds add a touch of airiness to the bedroom. They are still more refreshing when, like the Puissarnaud suite, they are finished in the soft French gray color, which blends so charmingly with the light and graceful Louis XVI design.

The delicate moldings and finely carved detail of the Puissarnaud bed illustrated are typical of a period noted for its classic correctness. As befits so handsome a model, the workmanship is of the finest. There are seven pieces in the suite: bed, dresser, chiffonier, toilet table, night stand, bench, rocker.

The low price of $746 for the suite complete is the result of a liberal concession made by the manufacturer at a time when he was obliged by the government to discontinue many of his finest patterns.

Much lower in price, but none the less stylish and attractive, are the many bedroom pieces we have procured to delight the housewife who has a limited amount to spend.

The Quincy Adams four-post bed. An antique mahogany finish bed in the best of colonial styles. It comes in either twin or full size at $45.25. To match are: Dresser, $79.25; chiffonier, $72; dressing table, $55.

Advance Sale Leschin Furs

Starts Monday Morning, July 21

The general prediction of much higher prices for furs next fall (due to the shortage of fine pelts) gives particular interest to our early selling.

Anticipating a scarcity of Furs, we bought heavily for this season, much earlier than usual. The price advantages we obtained last fall enable us to offer price inducements during this sale.

Our exhibit of Furs is very complete and reflects our decision that the popular fine fur wraps will be Mink, Broadtail, Baby Lamb, Caracul and Chinchilla.

We urge buying at this time, as higher prices will surely rule later in the season. A deposit will hold any selection until Oct. 1.

EXTRAORDINARY SALE of Magnificent Bohn Syphon Refrigerators Specially Made for the U.S.NAVY

Last August we were awarded by the U. S. Government a large contract for Refrigerators for battleships, armored cruisers, submarine chasers, etc. The contract called for the very highest grade of construction ever put into Refrigerators by any manufacturer, and every process of manufacture was rigidly inspected. These Refrigerators were shipped to the various Navy Yards.

When the Armistice was signed, most of the Refrigerators shipped to the Philadelphia Navy Yard could not be used because the vessels for which these Refrigerators were intended would not be built.

These Refrigerators were stored in the Philadelphia Navy Yard Buildings Nos. 400 and 401, and have been shipped back to us. They are now in the original crates, and are ready for immediate delivery or shipment, or can be held (on a small deposit) for fall delivery.

These Refrigerators have exteriors of beautiful robin-light-blue genuine fused-steel porcelain. The trim and fittings are handsome solid-brass nickel-plated, with heavy solid-brass nickel-plated sanitary legs with castors, with 6-inch clearance from the floor, for easy cleaning. They have 4 doors, 5 shelves and 2 bottom compartments. The size is 37½ inches wide, 20¾ inches deep and 60 inches high. Ice capacity about 100 lbs.

The Bohn Syphon Refrigerator is the standard of the world. All railroads use the Bohn Syphon System for their refrigerator cars, and every dining car in the land (the severest test of a Refrigerator) has a Bohn Syphon.

Actual Value $250.00 Special Sale Price, $156.00

CHICAGO EXPERT SEES MENACE IN 'VAGUE' LEAGUE

Conditions May Arise to Force U. S. Into War, C. C. Hyde Asserts.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Significant facts on the proposed covenant for a league of nations will be presented to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in a report by Charles Cheney Hyde of Chicago, requested by the chamber to prepare an unbiased analysis of what the provisions in the covenant mean.

Mr. Hyde conducts international law courses in Northwestern university and is on the editorial staff of the American Journal of International Law.

One of the principal points given attention is the question of whether a breach of the covenant of the proposed league will bring war, and if so, whether the United States will be obliged to participate in it.

United States Must Act.

On this point Mr. Hyde says:

"There may be doubt whether the breach mentioned is intended to produce automatically a state of war or is merely to be deemed to constitute a so-called act of war with regard to which the aggrieved members of the league may in some respects retain freedom of action.

"If a breach is to produce necessarily a state of general war as against the wrongdoer, the United States, as a loyal member of the league, would find itself obliged to declare war by appropriate congressional action against the covenant breaker. This procedure would be demanded by the constitution.

"In case of a grave conflict involving several states and beyond the control of the powers near at hand, the United States might be expected to take a part."

Monroe Doctrine Affected.

On the revisions concerning the Monroe doctrine, Mr. Hyde says:

"It is possible that the restraint imposed by the United States under cover of the Monroe doctrine might be protested against by another state, on the ground that it was an unfair application of the Monroe doctrine and an unreasonable restraint upon the exercise of political independence.

"In such case the aid of the league might be in fact invoked as a check upon the United States. Such a situation might perhaps be anticipated if the United States exerts its strength to restrain from wrongdoing any of its southern neighbors.

League's Attitude Unknown.

"Thus a question for your consideration is, What would be the response of the league to such a protest or complaint; or, conversely, would the league be disposed to impede the United States in its efforts to establish, even by force, conditions of stable government in countries subject to chronic disorder or unable to respond faithfully to their international obligations?

"I offer no opinion on this matter. It should be noted, however, that this question would not arise with respect to states which, under existing treaties, enjoy in varying degree the protection of the United States."

Article X Important.

As to article X, which guarantees the territorial integrity and political independence of each member state, Mr. Hyde says:

"This is one of the most important undertakings contained in the covenant. The special relation of it to the United States deserves attention, and particularly in connection with the Monroe doctrine."

One of the most important things to which he calls the attention of the business men and trade organizations of the country is to article XX:

"Renunciation of the existing treaties inconsistent with the covenant seems to be essential to the successful maintenance of the league. There is no technical difficulty in agreeing, through the covenant, to abrogate treaties between states which are original members of the league or which may join it."

Supreme Court Warning.

In this regard Mr. Hyde speaks of the caution the Supreme court of the United States has suggested as to treaty obligations. He says:

"The Supreme court of the United States has manifested caution in suggesting limits beyond which the president and senate should not go in contracting in behalf of the nation. Individual justices have expressed their views and announced limitations, thereby emphasizing at the same time the vast scope of the treaty making power.

It is a significant fact, worthy of special attention at this time, that the Supreme court has never found it necessary to decide that any treaty concluded in behalf of the United States was void. It has never been held that the president and senate have abused their power."

OPPOSITION TO LEAGUE PERILS PEACE TREATY

Sentiment Against Pacts Growing, Senators Declare.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—To back their assertion that the league of nations in its present form is doomed, opposition leaders it was learned today, have offered to furnish President Wilson with a list of thirty-five senators who have solemnly pledged themselves to vote for the rejection of the whole treaty unless radical amendments or reservations are adopted.

Ratification of a treaty requires a two-thirds vote. Thirty-five senators would be two more than enough to reject the treaty. The senators whose names appear on the list are in most instances the same as those who signed the Lodge "round robin" last March and forced the revision of the covenant by the Paris peace conference.

Each of these senators, it was stated, has given his pledge in such form as to show his determination to vote against the treaty in its present form, at any risk or cost to his political future.

Wilson Is Optimistic.

The president, nevertheless, takes an optimistic view of the prospect. His spokesman today denied reports to the effect that the president had cabled to other powers asking if they would be willing to accept "interpretations" by the senate, and insisted the president had no thought of compromise.

Concessions by the administration were a long way off, it was stated. Nothing of the kind would be forthcoming unless an absolute deadlock should develop over the treaty, and administration leaders said they were confident no such contingency would arise.

Despite the fact that a canvass showed the president had made no inroads on the opposition, Secretary Tumulty said the president had authorized him to say he was much pleased with his conferences with Republican senators during the last two days. No conferences were held today, but it was stated at the White House the president had no thought of abandoning them and would extend other invitations next week.

Whole Treaty in Balance.

Reviewing the developments of the first week of the treaty in the senate, opposition leaders declared that the fight was taking on a new aspect. Sentiment for the rejection of the whole treaty is growing, they said. Careful study of the text of the document is revealing so many obnoxious features, they stated, as to create doubt whether American interests can be amply protected by mere reservations or amendments.

One of the opposition leaders, who did not want his name used, summed up the situation in this manner:

"The contest as to whether there shall be reservations is past. The fight now enters upon a new phase—whether the United States shall enter any league. I am convinced the president will agree to accept reservations, seeking to make them as mild as possible. The final stage of the contest will be whether or not the treaty shall be rejected. There is a strong, growing sentiment in this direction in the senate."

Opposition to Treaty Grows.

Senator Moses of New Hampshire, a Republican member of the foreign relations committee, made this statement:

"There is a growing feeling in the senate that the whole treaty should be thrown out of the window. Senators are beginning to believe that the wisest way to deal with the problem is to discard it entirely and adopt a plain resolution declaring the status of war at an end."

The two reasons held to be most responsible for the drift toward flat rejection were:

That the close scrutiny to which the treaty has been subjected in the senate during the last week has brought home to senators a realization of the tremendous burdens assumed by the United States as one of the "big five" apart from the obligations under the league of nations covenant.

That there is a reflex of public sentiment, as revealed in the correspondence of senators, following upon the revelation of the facts regarding the Shantung settlement.

Wants Two Issues Divided.

Senator Knox of Pennsylvania came out today for the rejection of the treaty unless the league of nations covenant is eliminated and reserved for future discussion.

"I cannot vote for the treaty unless the league covenant is separated from it and unless material modifications are made to the body of the document," Senator Knox said.

The senator reiterated his determination to push his proposal to separate the league covenant and the treaty. He feels confident this proposal is much stronger now than when it was first put forward.

Some of the president's advisers are urging him, it has been learned, to abandon his country-wide campaign for the league. They pointed out that, while the president undoubtedly would be received everywhere by large crowds, his receptions would have little or no effect on the senate. He could work more effectively in Washington by attempting to conciliate the senate, they thought.

PRESIDENT WILL FIGHT SHANTUNG RESERVATIONS

Awaits Paris Advices So He Can Make Public Statement.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—President Wilson is strongly opposed to any reservation or formal action by the United States repudiating the Shantung settlement, his spokesmen stated today. He is making no exception in the case of Shantung in his demand for the ratification of the treaty without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t," they declared.

Although Mr. Wilson, according to those who have conferred with him during the last few days, is not wholly unsympathetic with the widespread disapproval of the Shantung affair, he feels that any reservation or formal repudiation by the senate would serve only to irritate Japan and lead her into negotiations with Germany again.

Awaits Reply from Paris.

The president is awaiting an answer to his cable to the Paris conference asking for permission to make public all the facts about Shantung. When he gets an answer he will reply to the criticisms of the Shantung settlement, either in an address to the senate or a statement to the country. He hopes in this way to quiet the unrest about Shantung and to convince the country that a senate reservation on this point would be harmful instead of helpful.

Senator Lodge, the Republican leader of the senate, is planning also to make a speech on Shantung at an early date in which he will show that the acquisition of the peninsula is only a part of Japan's scheme of military aggrandizement to dominate the entire orient.

Boycott of Jap Goods Gains.

The Chinese boycott of Japanese goods, which has gained headway in Shanghai, Chefoo, Canton, and other cities, has failed completely in Antung, according to an authoritative report received here today. The Antung merchants in spirited appeals were reminded of their Shantung nativity and that the Tsingtau question was of vital interest to them, but they failed to respond.

"Practically all the inhabitants of Antung are natives of Shantung," the report says, "and yet the report of the decision of the Paris peace conference to permit the retention of Tsingtau by Japan did not cause the slightest stir. Almost a month passed without any action being taken, and the first circular calling the local merchants to task for not having bestirred themselves was not issued until two or three days ago.

Antung Standing Pat.

"There is hardly any doubt that local shopkeepers will not participate in a boycott. Local shops are stocked almost entirely with Japanese goods.

"The Japanese absolutely control the trade of Antung, and a boycott would react in such a way as to do undoubtedly more harm to the Chinese in Antung than to the Japanese. A boycott in Shanghai, where American and British goods may replace Japanese, may be successful for a time, but in Antung a boycott is out of the question. That no action was taken in Antung with regard to the peace conference decision shows that the merchants realize the economic hold the Japanese have on them there, and that a boycott would be futile."

KILLED BY FALL

Chicago Alderman's Wife Who Met Death Yesterday in Accident at Home.

Mrs. John H. Lyle

Mrs. Clara Lyle, wife of Ald. John H. Lyle, 6504 Harvard avenue, died yesterday morning at St. Bernard's hospital after a fall of about ten feet from the rear porch of their home to a cement sidewalk. She had become faint as she was leaning on the banister and in falling had struck her head. A neighbor saw the accident and her screams brought Ald. Lyle from the house.

Mrs. Lyle was only 28 years old and the alderman is not many years her senior. He was overcome with grief. They have one daughter, 5 years old.

When the alderman's law partners were notified of the death, Attorney James P. Harrold went immediately to offer his assistance and sympathy. Later Attorney Adrian L. Hoover went to Ald. Lyle's home.

The inquest, set for yesterday, was continued by Deputy Coroner Peter Seese until Aug. 1 to give Coroner's Physician Joseph Springer opportunity to conduct a post-mortem examination. Physicians at the hospital were unable to determine from a cursory examination what injury caused Mrs. Lyle's death.

The funeral will be held Tuesday at 2 o'clock p. m., with services at Englewood First Methodist church and burial at Mount Hope.

NEUTRALS TO BE U. S. CONSULS IN GERMAN TOWNS

Wilson Tells Delegates to Guard Trade Till Senate Acts.

BY HENRY WALES.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]
[By Wireless to The Tribune.]

PARIS, July 19.—The American commission, which is now composed of Henry White and Gen. Bliss, today received orders from President Wilson instructing it to arrange for neutral governments to represent the American consular service in Germany pending ratification of the peace treaty by the United States, so that American business and commerce can compete on the same footing as the British and French, who already have poured their consuls into the enemy country.

Henry White, through the aid of economic experts, is expected to close arrangements with the Spanish, Swiss, Dutch, Norwegian, Swedish, and Danish governments to immediately have their consular agents represent the United States temporarily.

Different Neutrals Engaged.

Entire consular representation will not be handed over to any one neutral country, as the best equipped nations will be asked to handle various ports and centers in Germany.

Experts and observers just returned from Switzerland and Holland assert both countries are filled with American salesmen and representatives of American business houses awaiting the lifting of the bars against entering Germany, as without consuls there is no one to visé passports and business and travel remain impossible.

Adroit Move by President.

In certain quarters here it is pointed out that the president's action in arbitrarily obtaining neutrals to represent the United States consular service in Germany is an adroit move to strengthen the necessity for ratification of the treaty by the senate without attempting to make any changes or amendments.

With American business beginning to get started in Germany and with commerce flowing Germanyward, it will be that much harder for the senate to keep the United States in a state of war with Germany, as such action would necessitate engaging neutrals as consular agents and nullify all business contracts and other commercial ventures engaged in.

PRESIDENT WILL NOT SPEAK HERE ON TREATY TOUR

President Wilson regrets he cannot accept the invitation to deliver an address in Chicago, but the score of commercial and professional organizations which invited him have not yet given up hope. They will invite him again.

Secretary Tumulty sent the following letter to the Chicago Board of Trade. It was received yesterday:

"The president asks me to make cordial acknowledgement of the telegram which you and others addressed to him this morning and to assure you that he greatly appreciates your courteous invitation.

"Unhappily, however, it will not be possible for him to visit Chicago in the course of his proposed tour."

Many Chicago business men see in the letter a hint that the president has been obliged to reconsider his proposed tour. They do not believe he would tour the country without visiting the second city of the land.

They say it is possible Republican senators have succeeded in making the president attend every meeting of the committee considering the treaty. This would compel him to stay in Washington.

TOO WEAK TO CALL, LOST BOY WATCHES BOATS

Harry Nutter is fast coming back to health and strength, aided by nourishing nips of milk and orange juice. As the emaciated body begins to show more life, the boy remembers more of his adventures in the woods near Fox lake, where he roamed for eleven days and twelve nights, without food or water, the brambles tearing off his clothes and cutting his flesh, the sun burning him black.

Elmer Nutter, his uncle, who has been a father to him ever since Harry can remember, is with him constantly. And Harry wants only his brother "Ernie" to make him completely happy. He was with "Ernie" when he was lost—and it was "Ernie's" name he called all the time he was lost.

He told yesterday how he lay on the bank of the lake, that last day, watching the pleasure boats skim over the waves, too weak to call to them.

FINANCE BOARD FAVORS TAX LEVY OF $65,580,009

The council finance committee yesterday recommended to the council the 1919 tax levy ordinance which calls for a levy of $65,580,009. The 1918 tax levy ordinance was designed to bring in approximately $45,000,000 in revenue, but the increase in the tax rate from $1.10 to $2.15 increases the levy for pension funds, schools, and corporate purposes by more than $20,000,000.

The committee asked the corporation counsel for a report on the amount of the city's present bonding power. The committee also requested a report showing the amount of bonding power which accrues each year through retiring municipal bonds.

It rejected Ald. Woodhull's motion that a request for authority to issue $5,000,000 worth of bonds for more electric lights be placed on the ballot.

Buy and Build Up On the Hill

in Ridge Homes

Thirty-eight Minutes from the Loop

HEED that home-building instinct that clamors within you for expression. Come out to the Ridge, in the beautifully wooded Beverly Hills district, and select your building site in the delightful, restricted Ridge Homes subdivision, 38 minutes on the Rock Island from the Loop, at 103d and Hoyne Ave.

THE IDEAL HOME SITE

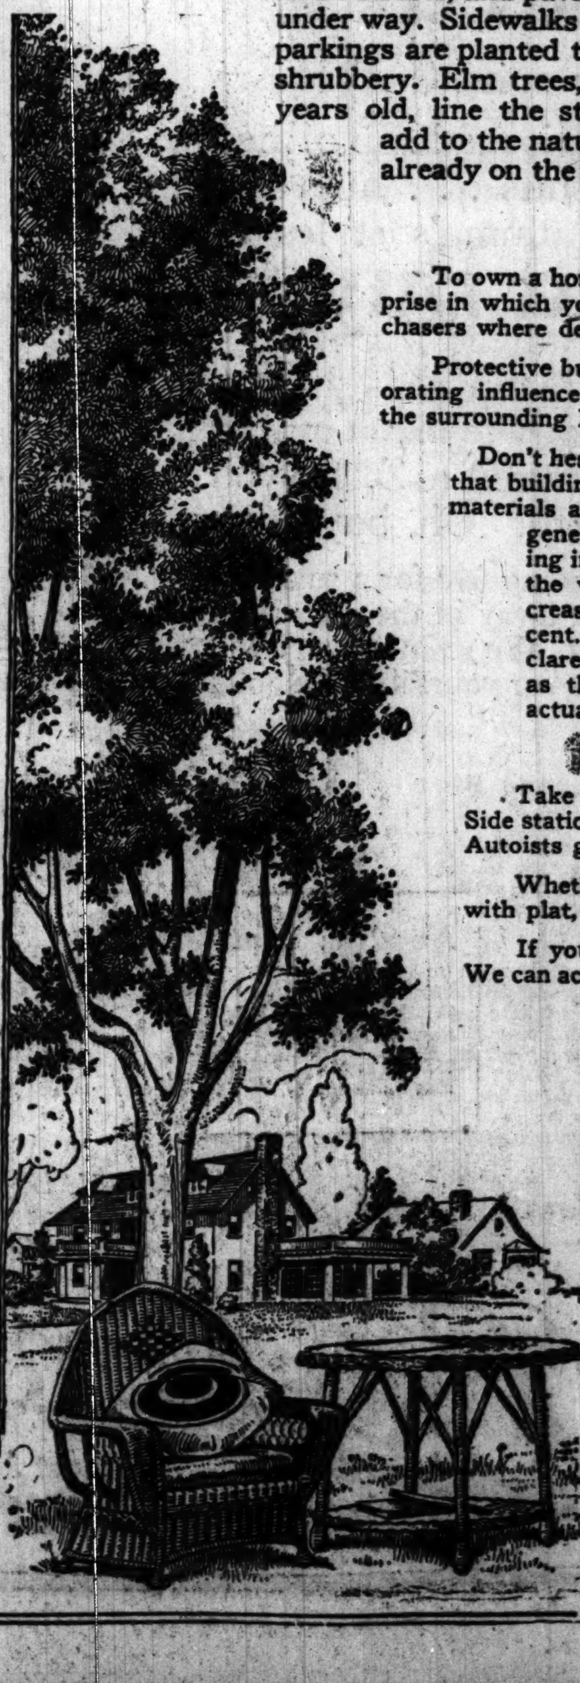
YOU'LL like Ridge Homes, high up on the ridge in beautiful parklike surroundings. Here, where pure air sweeps across the open prairies, the sun has a chance to shine clear, through the smoke-free atmosphere. Here are trees and birds and flowers, and stretching lawns that make the ideal setting for a home.

Two years have been spent in the improvement of Ridge Homes. All underground work has been done—sewers, water and gas mains are all in. Cement curb has been laid on all streets, and paving is now under way. Sidewalks are in and parkings are planted to selected shrubbery. Elm trees, now two years old, line the streets and add to the natural shade already on the place.

FOR you, Ridge Homes affords the opportunity for recreation in the open, and needed relaxation that comes with a change in environment at the close of a trying day.

In Ridge Homes your wife will have the kind of neighbors she wants—the kind she will enjoy visiting with and inviting to her own home. She will have the opportunity and incentive for recreation in the open mid the flowers, and on the tennis courts and near-by golf courses—a chance to benefit from the tonic of pure air and radiant sunshine that keeps alive the spirit of youth and puts Nature's bloom in the cheeks.

Here is the opportunity to provide a home where life in the open air inspires the little people to that rollicking activity which makes laughing eyes and happy hearts, builds sturdy bodies and stores up the vitality and stamina that makes for robust health and development.



WE FINANCE YOU

To own a home of your own in Ridge Homes it is not necessary to hamper any enterprise in which you may be interested by withdrawing funds. We finance responsible purchasers where desired.

Protective building restrictions guard your home and your investment against deteriorating influences. Only single family homes will be built. Like restrictions have kept the surrounding Beverly Hills district free from flat and apartment buildings.

Don't hesitate to build now on the theory that building costs are too high. Building materials are 46 per cent. lower than the general level of all commodities, having increased but 30 per cent. during the war as against an average increase on all commodities of 100 per cent. Competent investigators declare building costs are as low now as they ever will be again, if not actually lower.

Rentals are high and are to advance again in October. Desirable places are scarce. Protect yourself by building in Ridge Homes.

Come out Saturday or Sunday and see Ridge Homes site. Stroll or drive along the winding boulevards of the neighborhood and see what beautiful homes the people of Beverly Hills have created.

HOW TO GET TO RIDGE HOMES

Take the Rock Island at La Salle Street Station in the Loop, or at any South Side station, and get off at 103d street. Walk three blocks west to Ridge Homes. Autoists go out over Vincennes road or Western avenue to 103d street.

Whether you can come out or not, you will want our book, "Ridge Homes," with plat, prices and other information. Fill out and mail the coupon.

If you are in the market for a home site, don't delay seeing Ridge Homes. We can accommodate only 90 families. Will you be one of them?

EVERY MAN SHOULD BUY A HOME TODAY !!
The Government Says So
Don't Squander Your Money in High Rents
Put Your Weekly Earnings and all Your Savings Into PERMANENT WEALTH - YOUR OWN HOME

Home Ownership Is Bed-Rock In Fortune Building

FEW men, except professional traders, have ever made money out of the buying and selling of stocks, but millions upon millions have lost countless billions in the purchase of worthless and manipulated securities. Few of us know much about professional trading in stocks or bonds. There is one thing, however, that we do know about—the value of a home as an investment in respectability and happiness and as a guaranty of at least a measure of financial responsibility. The ownership of real estate is the most important foundation on which to build substantial credit. The man or woman who applies for a credit account at any department store is always asked the question: "Do you own any real estate?" Whenever the big commercial agencies like Dun and Bradstreet make a report on an individual the item of real estate is given the most important attention.

57% of the People of the U. S. Are Tenants—Are You One? And Why?

A city of tenants is not a stable city, and in some states there is 45% decrease in birth rate due to flats and tenements. Merchants can't carry tenants, generally, on big credits, for rent receipts are not collateral. You are a tenant today because your vision is dim or because you have failed to study your own financial condition. The success of your future may depend on your solution of this important problem.

Real Estate Ownership Has Always Governed the World

Empires and dynasties, kings, princes and peoples have for scores of centuries fought for the domination of the world's real estate. The riches of America are founded upon the products of her lands. The wealth of the American prairies is governed by the annual production of the lands of the middle west. The most substantial fortunes in America today are invested largely in American real estate and the tendency is for the wealthy to acquire more and more real estate as these fortunes continue to grow. In the end home ownership—universal home ownership—will be the only thing that will prevent our land from being held by the few to the detriment of the many.

Chicago Real Estate a Money Making Investment for Every One

Nowhere in the world is there such a city as Chicago, a city so rich in its surroundings, so far removed from the decaying forces of the old world. Untouched by war, thrifty because of the riches of the prairies which she dominates, Chicago stands pre-eminently above all the big cities of the world in immediate possibilities of substantial growth in both population and money. Chicago is today 40,000 homes short. Her building program is one of the vast projects in this country which demands immediate attention. Her necessities must surely force the prices of her real estate steadily upward in proportion to her growth.

Westwood and Belmont Terrace Located Along Avenues of City's Progress

Realizing the conditions that exist in this city today the Wm. H. Britigan Organization is offering two great properties for home and investment purposes. Our invitations to the public have appeared in the columns of this paper for the last four weeks, and more than $600,000 of these properties have been disposed of in that length of time. No expert salesmanship could have accomplished this unless the properties themselves possess even greater values than those stated in the advertisements. Not a single lot was sold in either of these subdivisions unless the purchaser came and saw it himself. He did not buy on faith or on our promises, but he bought because of what he saw of the property and its surroundings.

Every Man Should Buy His Lot Now—While Low Prices Prevail

We are paying higher wages today than were ever paid in the world before. The day laborer, the skilled mechanic, the tradesman, the artisan, the manufacturer and the merchant are getting more today for what they have to sell than they ever dreamed they would get. We have expanded from a nation of 300,000 investors to a nation with 30,000,000 investors, but all this wealth that is scattered among so many millions of people will find its way into the pockets of the few if it is dissipated by those who have it today. Every man should put at least a portion of this money into real estate in his own home town. It will then become for him A PERMANENT ASSET. The greatest town in the United States, the city that promises greater profits to the holders of its real estate than any other, the city that is richest in commercial and industrial possibilities, is THE CITY OF CHICAGO.

Belmont Terrace

"A North Side Property"

Located Between Belmont Ave. and Diversey Blvd., and Between Kostner and Kolmar Aves.

The northern boundary of this subdivision is Belmont Ave. and the southern boundary is Diversey Blvd. It is just two blocks from Kelvyn Park, one of the smaller but very beautiful new city parks of Chicago. Across the road from the park is a fine grade school that has just been completed and a few blocks away is the Carl Schurz High School, one of the finest in Chicago. For miles on every side of Belmont Terrace there are great residence and business districts. This is one of the few close-in properties in Chicago that has not been sold and developed. Never again will you have the opportunity to purchase such property miles within the city limits and with such exceptional transportation facilities. Belmont Terrace is highly restricted. No frame buildings can be erected in this subdivision, no business on residence streets; there is a sensible building line and only buildings costing over $3,500.00 can be erected in this subdivision. There is speculative property on Belmont Ave., Kostner Ave. and Diversey Blvd.

"A South Side Property"

Located Principally Between 67th (Marquette Blvd.) and 71st Sts., and Between Western Ave. and Rockwell St.

This great property, located only two blocks from Marquette Park, is in the heart of Chicago's great Southwest Side. Its northern boundary is a beautiful boulevard; its southern boundary is a principal cross-town street which runs along the southern edge of the subdivision and of Marquette Park; its eastern boundary is Western Ave., a car line street with a through route service from our property to the northern city limits (Howard Ave.); its western boundary is Rockwell St. Westwood is essentially home property. Its restrictions include a 15-foot building line on residence streets, no frame buildings, no buildings costing less than $3,500.00. Westwood is improved with sewer, water, gas and cement sidewalks, all included in the price of each lot. Public and parochial schools are in the neighborhood, denominational churches, stores and shops of high character. There are also banks in the district, garages and every facility for the man who desires to build his home at once and enjoy every city advantage. The business property on Western Ave., on 71st St. and on 69th St. is an exceptionally fine investment with speculative features. This property should advance in value in proportion to the influx of population, and its history should be one of profits.

U. S. Cemetery Marks the Scene Where Yanks Led Foch Attack.

BY CONGER REYNOLDS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

CHATEAU THIERRY, July 18.—[Delayed.]—One year ago this morning the Yanks of the 26th division crawled out from behind rock piles and out of their fox holes in the Bois de Belleau and began the attack on the Germans twenty minutes ahead of the rest of Foch's great counter-offensive.

Down a gentle slope, as open as a Boone county meadow, they went toward the village of Belleau and the ridge beyond. A few minutes later, wounded and dying men dotted the ground, almost in as great number as the fresh shell holes, but survivors swept on and took Belleau.

Drive Germans from Hill.

Later, with the aid of the 3d division, they got Hill 204, the keystone of the German position for holding Chateau Thierry.

Today I visited the new cemetery at the eastern edge of the Bois de Belleau, overlooking the field where that attack took place. There, under the shade of the forest, are big white crosses and the Stars and Stripes floats high on a flagpole.

At the center of the cemetery lie New England boys who were shot down a year ago today. Near lie marines whose blood paid the price for the taking of Belleau Woods.

In the fields to the eastward farmers stopped work and stared at the party of visitors. Two-thirds of the fields are covered with rippling wheat and fresh haycocks. The rest are untilled, overgrown with weeds, and splotched with shell holes.

Cultivation is laborious. The ground, broken and uneven, and scarred by shell craters, is "sewn" also with shell fragments that are as thick as rocks in a Vermont pasture.

There are human bones in the fields near which was left a year ago a mass of splintered tree trunks.

War Scars Still Show.

Most of the dugouts have fallen in, but there still are visible the lines of holes which took the place of trenches in the fighting done by the Americans.

Work, however, is under way, and on two or three acres the broken trunks have been cut for firewood and neatly corded.

Some time ago there was talk that the American government would buy the forest and preserve it as it was in the wake of battle for tourists to see. If this still is the hope of any one, steps must be taken soon.

As late as last February, there were many reminders of the battle that since have been removed as souvenirs. Still there is an abundance of fragments of German uniforms, heaps of cartridge shells at old machine gun "nests."

It is safe to predict that none of these will be left for next year's tourist invasion, unless a guard is mounted.

All American dead have been transferred from dugout and shell hole graves to the cemetery. Few German graves remain, some carefully marked and tended, but others barely distinguishable; at least one exposing the bones of the occupant to the gaze of the curious.

The villages of Bourschee, Torcy, and Belleau expose gaunt wreckage.

This is the more impressive because some broken stone, plaster, and house furnishings have been shoveled out of the ruins and piled in long ricks beside the highway. There are only two or three civilians in sight. In Belleau I saw only German prisoners wandering about, perhaps searching for some overlooked treasure. Where a year ago battle fiercely surged and roared today was the stillness of death.

XYLOPHONE BABY TO SLEEP; DON'T WALK THE FLOOR

It's Newest and Surest Route to the Kiddies' Slumberland.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

Fond fathers of Chicago, when the baby cries at night and upon you devolves the pleasant duty of pacing the floor long hours at a time, when you shush it and cuss it and pommel its back, and rub its tum and nothing avails to still its wails remember that it's your fault after all. You neglected to purchase a xylophone.

Mrs. Isa Maud Ilsen, who was made director of hospital music by the war department, who has soothed the insane and shell-shocked patients in hospitals all over the United States and Canada by the use of certain ditties, and who has just completed giving a course at Columbia university in the therapeutics of music states that there's nothing like "Rockaby Baby" played on the xylophone to pacify a furious infant.

Works Three Times.

"I know it works," she said, "because I've tried it. I was giving a lecture once and there was a crying baby in the audience. I begged the people to excuse me while I tried an experiment and I played a tune on the xylophone. That baby stopped crying at once. We tried the experiment three times and the audience went wild over it.

"The old saying about music having charms to soothe the savage breast certainly has been proven, too, by the experiments which we made in the hospitals with the men suffering from war neurosis. Take jazz music, for instance. We can't have that at all. It's positively dangerous. There was a well meaning Y. M. C. A. instructor—an athletic director—who thought he'd give the shell shocked boys in a certain hospital a treat, and he got in a jazz band. Why, do you know, those boys were getting well, but when they heard that music they went crazy. They took off all their clothes and started to throw things at each other, and we thought they'd kill each other before we could get them calmed down.

Harp Soothes 'Em.

"For our nervous patients we must have simple melodies, with a good deal of repetition in the phrases—and no climax. We have found that the harp is a particularly soothing instrument. Some of the surgeons used to ask us to bring our harp when they were changing the dressing on bad wounds. Then we'd play some of the old tunes, like 'Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms' or some of the border ballads, and it took the patient's mind from his pain."

CHICAGO OFFICER IN U. S. AFTER RUSSIAN SERVICE

CAPT. CHARLES H. ARMSTRONG

Charles H. Armstrong, captain of Company C, 310th engineers, reached New York yesterday on his way home from northern Russia. He is a son of Assistant Superintendent of Schools J. E. Armstrong, who lives at 10638 Prospect avenue. He has been in the vicinity of Archangel, Russia, for the last year, building barracks, constructing roads through swamps, guarding supplies, and training native Russian troops.

Great praise has been bestowed upon the battalion of which Company C is a part by the superior officers for the energy and dispatch with which all work has been done under the most trying circumstances.

Before enlisting in the first officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan Capt. Armstrong was an assistant engineer of the state utilities commission at Springfield, Ill.

TRANSFERRED TO FORT SHERIDAN.

Detroit, Mich., July 19.—Preparatory to turning hospital 36 over to Detroit health authorities Aug. 1, 200 wounded soldiers today were transferred to Fort Sheridan, Chicago. Only forty-five patients remain.

"'IS 'IGHNESS" OF WALES TO VISIT OUR FAIR CITY

Prince Eddie of Wales is coming to Chicago.

He will arrive in Halifax early in August, according to his present schedule, making a flying tour of Canada before he enters the United States.

He will go first to Detroit, and then to Washington to pay his respects to the government of the United States. He wants it understood, however, girls, that he is coming on a business trip, not a social triumph.

He wants to see railroads and stockyards and mills and factories and other business enterprises. He wants to meet the business men of the country and learn American business methods.

Chicago's business men, and not society leaders, will be his guides and companions. No plans have been made yet for his reception in Chicago, the British consul, Horace Nugent, believing it unwise to make any arrangements until definite details of the royal tour are learned.

Mine Host at the La Salle Wins Plaudits as Lyricist

The humdrum round of managing the Hotel La Salle has driven Ernest J. Stevens to becoming a lyricist. His first effort is a nifty madrigal that has been set to a waltz tune by Henry Sellinger of the Thomas orchestra, and A. L. Schyman, pianist. It was played yesterday in the hotel dining room and was applauded by the guests.

FELS-NAPTHA
FELS-NAPTHA

Two "machines" are better than one

When you use Fels-Naptha Soap in your washing machine, you put two great cleaners at work. One helps the other, and both make washing easier.

They also save clothes by saving some of the "churning" and hard rubbing.

The naptha in Fels-Naptha Soap does that. While your clothes are soaking, the naptha is dissolving the dirt.

The machine churns the naptha into every part of the garment. ALL of the dirt is flushed out. Quickly, too, because the naptha loosens it and makes less work for the machine.

Snow-White Clothes

is the result when you use Fels-Naptha, either in the machine or wash by hand. The great big thing about Fels-Naptha is you don't have to boil the clothes unless you really want to.

Why the Oakland Is a Leader Among All Cars

The Oakland Sensible Six stands out among all automobiles as a foremost exponent of the principle of high power plus scientific lightweight construction. The chassis and body of each Oakland model are built for hard work—are firmly knit and well balanced—but do not carry any unnecessary weight. This type of construction, with the overhead-valve six-cylinder Oakland engine, means unusual performing ability plus rock-bottom economy, as shown by the experience of Oakland owners anywhere.

The total result is that these owners secure continuously efficient transportation, with marked freedom from trouble of any kind and at the lowest cost of ownership, operation and maintenance. They drive 18 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 miles on tires.

The Sedan and Coupe—Fine Cars for Everyday Use

Nothing less than the tremendous Oakland manufacturing resources could produce the value found in the design, materials and workmanship of the new Sensible Six Four-Door Sedan and the Coupe.

Both are fine motor carriages that accord with taste and refinement, yet they are built to withstand the severest service.

FIGURES SHOW RETAIL PROFIT ON STANDARD FOODS

Comparisons Set Forth in Case of Meats and Green Goods.

Figures aiming to indicate fairly the profit that retail butchers and grocers make on meats and vegetables that go daily into Chicago homes were given to THE TRIBUNE yesterday.

The tables first quote the price at which the grocer obtains his goods, either from the packing plants or the produce market on South Water street. They then state just what the butchers actually charge the housewife. The first table of comparisons relates to meats.

There was also made a comparison of prices at which the grocers buy their green goods and the prices at which they dispose of them to the housewife. They ran from over 500 per cent on tomatoes and over 300 on watermelons down to as low as 40 per cent on oranges and cabbage in a list of thirteen items. The large difference in some of these goods is recognized as being not so startling as in other products, for they are perishable goods and a high percentage is waste.

Table of Quotations.

Here is the table of quotations on meats by the pound:

Pork loins	$ .35	$ .40
Leg of lamb	.32	.42
Lamb chops	.32	.40
French chops	.32	.50
Shoulder chops	.15	.46
Lamb stew	.15	.40
Spare ribs	.16½	.25
Premium bacon	.51	.63

Suggests Fair Profits.

In connection with the profit that the butcher should take per pound in the various cuts of meat Michael H. Conley, 5905 West Ohio street, a butcher with five stores in active operation in Austin, said:

"In butchering we figure that some cuts must be sold at cost because they are not much in demand, and this, of course, forces up the price on the choice cuts, but on an average the following pound for pound profits are fair and reasonable: Pork loins, 5 to 6 cents; leg of lamb, 5 cents; lamb chops, 5 cents; Frenched lamb chops, because of the extra work in trimming and preparing, 13 cents; shoulder chops, 7 cents; lamb stew, 5 cents; spare ribs, 4 cents; premium bacon, 7 cents; boiled ham, 8 cents; raw ham, 10 cents; salt pork, 6 cents; lard, 5 cents; veal roasts, 7 cents; veal chops, 7 cents; eggs, selects, 5 cents.

"Those prices should allow sufficient profit to cover overhead expenses in any store that is operated upon an efficient basis."

Prices on Green Goods.

The figures charged by grocers were given to a woman reporter for THE TRIBUNE who went marketing, and was given the quotations at J. A. Cordell's, the Edwards Market company, M. T. Thiel, Todd & Gerhke, and Rosenheim's. The same grocers gave the retail quotations on green goods, which follow:

Cost to Grocer.	Cost to Housewife.
Cantaloupes—
$3 case of 45, 6 2-3c ea.	18c each
$1.25 case of 15, 8 1-3c ea.	16c each

These facts and prices, and similar prices from day to day, are to be given to the Anti-Profiteering league, headed by Mrs. L. L. Funk and representatives of twenty women's clubs who are out to make a survey of the situation, starting on Tuesday.

Figures for Investigators.

Similar figures will also be given to Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson's investigating committee when it is formed early this week under direction of Mayor Thompson.

Data to show that a combination has existed among the South Water street dealers in fruits to boost prices to the retailer through "fake" auctions was given to the federal district attorney by retailers who have information covering a period of four months. Assistant District Attorney Frederick Dickinson, in charge of the federal food investigation, would not give the names of the informants but said that their data is complete, with names, dates and figures.

System of Price Boosting.

The system under which the combination worked was to auction certain fruits and vegetables on which there was a large demand, and to have representatives of their own bid against the retailers to force the prices up above the legitimate cost. The new information contains additional data to show that when the competitive bidding failed to bring prices up, stocks were shortened by diverted shipments, and in at least three known cases, by actual destruction of enough of the commodity to keep the cost up.

Particular attention is now being given by the federal agents to alleged manipulation of eggs. There are 478,000 more eggs now in cold storage than were a year ago, under war conditions, and yet egg prices are now 49 cents a dozen wholesale against 42 cents in July, 1918. In addition the daily receipts for the month of July of this year against the same period last year show a 7 per cent increase. They are kept from the market and diverted to coast cities for export or into cold storage.

That the government is determined to do its best to halt the skyward flight of the cost of living was evidenced by requests for bids yesterday on its surplus stocks of stored provisions. Bids were advertised for on 50,000,000 pounds of frozen beef, 7,000,000 pounds of frozen pork, 833,000 pounds frozen mutton, and 2,915,000 pounds of frozen poultry. With these stores of meats there is about 25,000,000 pounds of bacon to be thrown on the market through competitive bidding in an effort to bring prices down, temporarily at least.

FIRE DAMAGES FEDERAL PRISON

Leavenworth, Kas., July 19. — The west wing of the federal prison here was damaged tonight by fire believed by officials to have been of incendiary origin. No time has been had thus far for an inquiry.

Flames were discovered near the center of the wing, which is nearing completion, burning in the scaffolding and they spread rapidly, filling the wing and endangering the whole prison plant.

Prisoners, now numbering more than 2,000, and including a score or more of Industrial Workers of the World, are confined in the east wing, and, according to prison officials, made no disturbance during the fire.

FORD EULOGIZED AS 1919 LINCOLN BY DELAVIGNE

Publicity Writer Comes Out with Defense and Attacks 'Tribune.'

Newport News, Va., July 19.—[Special.]—Theodore Delavigne, publicity agent, whom Henry Ford credits with writing much of the Ford propaganda figuring in Ford's libel suit against THE TRIBUNE, tonight came to light in this port in a signed statement denouncing THE TRIBUNE and praising his former employer, Mr. Ford.

Delavigne is just back from twelve months' service with the American army overseas. His statement came as the result of reading Associated Press dispatches and an editorial in one of the Newport News newspapers.

Delavigne's Statement.

In his statement, sent to the Newport News Times-Herald, he says:

"No man, reading your recent news articles and comment upon the Ford-TRIBUNE trial, would be able to understand that the action is simply as follows: THE TRIBUNE knowingly printed a fake interview, putting into Mr. Ford's mouth statements he had not made and would not make. THE TRIBUNE then printed an editorial based on the fake, in which it made untruthful and unjust statements, and among other things called him an anarchist. He then brought suit for libel. Not having any grounds upon which to defend itself in this purely legal matter, THE TRIBUNE has proceeded along the lines shown by your stories.

Calls Ford "Greatest Mind."

"The proof that Mr. Ford may be ignorant of an historical date or fact does not alter that fact. No doubt thousands of undergraduates given the power of the direct cross-examiner, a sort of third degree, and as unjust, often could show THE TRIBUNE attorney himself ignorant of countless historical facts and dates, and names, and even of many of the essentials of our national government and growth.

"Henry Ford would not be a jot removed from his present status as the times' greatest mind of common sense, industrial and political justice and honest worker for the welfare of the world, if he had never read a printed word.

Would Have Worked without Hire.

"Mr. Ford accepts responsibility for the writing of his hired writer. The writer of this letter, to whom fell the honor of having written them, would have gladly performed that labor without hire. The privilege of having been permitted a small part in such a work alone would have been ample pay.

"Henry Ford, curse him as you will, is the Lincoln of today, a Lincoln with hands clean of blood. This man has no ambition for the senate, but no greater good could befall the country and the world if the American people, seeing over and through the misrepresentations of a short sighted and sleeping press, should send him to the White House."

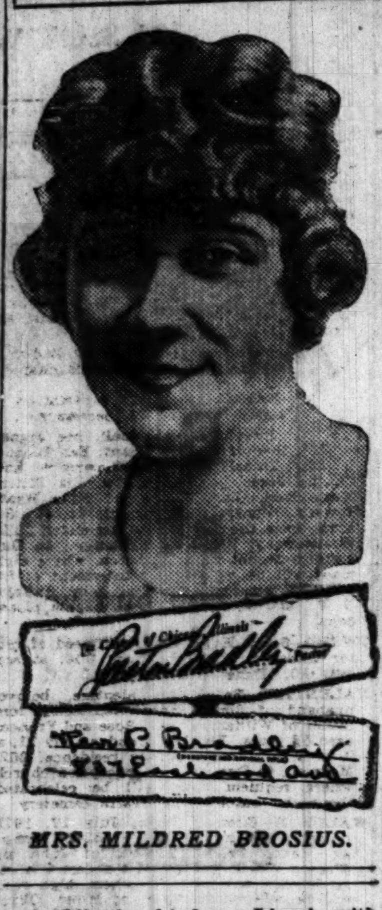
Delavigne is a private F. A., U. S. A., headquarters company, now at Camp Hill, Va. His home is in Detroit. He has been here about three weeks, coming in with a convalescent casual detachment.

QUOTED FORD OFFICIAL.

THE TRIBUNE did not, knowingly or otherwise, print a fake interview with Mr. Ford. In June, 1916, just before the editorial in issue was published, it printed, just as other leading American papers did, a dispatch from its correspondent in Detroit, quoting an official [F. L. Klinginsmith] of the Ford plant as saying the company would not pay salaries to its men who went to the Mexican border with the Michigan state guard, and would not promise to hold their jobs open for them until their return. Testimony has been given that Mr. Klinginsmith was in this correctly quoted, though Mr. Klinginsmith disputes this. When, a few days later, Henry Ford himself made a statement on the matter THE TRIBUNE printed his statement as conspicuously as it had printed the earlier dispatch quoting the Klinginsmith statement.

THE EVIDENCE

Wife No. 2 in Bigamy Tangle; Genuine (at Top) and Alleged Forged Pastor's Signature to Certificate of "Wife No. 3."



MRS. MILDRED BROSIUS.

3 WIVES SLIDE LAUNDRY DRIVER IN LAW'S MANGLE

He Also Has a Trifling "Forged Marriage" to Iron Out.

Robert Joseph Brosius, just turned 21, is in for a bad session before Judge Fry of the Court of Domestic Relations next Thursday. He will be called upon to explain why he elected to become sort of a rotatory husband.

It is charged he has a common law wife, who is No. 1; a real wife to whom he was married twice, first by a Waukegan justice, Leo Farmer, and later by a priest at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic church in Chicago—she is No. 2—and wife No. 3, whom he married June 18, 1919, in a ceremony alleged to have taken place at the North Shore hotel.

The last episode introduces the name of "The Rev. Preston Bradley, 837 Eastwood avenue," as the pastor who tied the knot, but it is claimed this ceremony was fraudulent and that one "Helen Wilbur," said to be manager of the hotel, wrote the name of Dr. Bradley in the license. She will be called upon to answer a charge of forgery, Judge Fry having issued a warrant for her arrest.

A Laundry Chauffeur.

Brosius, the son of Edward Brosius, 4454 North Albany avenue, is a gay young beau, even if he is chauffeur of a laundry motor.

His common law wife, Edna Lawrence Brosius, mother of two children, lives with his parents. She is the daughter of Charles H. Lawrence, Sious City, Ia.

Wife No. 2 was Miss Mildred Mansberger, daughter of William Mansberger, Forest Park. She has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Kane, her foster parents, 1747 Waveland avenue. They are supporting her in the prosecution of a charge of bigamy and contributing to the delinquency of the third wife, Miss Ruth Sechtling, 3262 Lincoln avenue.

The marriage license issued to "Robert Birck," the name assumed by Brosius when he took unto himself Miss Sechtling, was issued in the office of County Clerk Sweitzer June 18, and she accompanied Brosius to the marriage license window. He gave his age as 23 and that of the young woman as 22. She is 19.

Fake Ceremony Charged.

Upon leaving the county building, the pair went to the North Shore hotel, where the alleged "fake" ceremony is said to have been performed and the license signed with the name of "Dr. Bradley."

The girl, at the office of Leonora Z. Medar, her attorney, insisted the woman manager of the hotel subscribed the name of "Pastor Bradley" to the license.

Later, in the office of Edgar O. Eakin, lawyer for wife No. 2, it was said the wedding ring and the diamond engagement ring worn by No. 3 were taken from No. 2 while the latter was in the maternity ward of St. Bernard's hospital about seven weeks ago, when a son was born to Brosius.

Last March No. 2 heard of the common law wife of Brosius. As a result a suit for divorce is pending, the visit to the maternity ward having interfered with its prosecution.

Pictures Wife as "Sister."

"Why, Robert saw me there and told me Mildred was his sister," snapped the sister of Ruth Schetling.

Brosius is in the county jail.

Dr. Bradley's home was without an occupant yesterday and it is believed he is on a vacation.

"NITRO BANDIT" FADES WITHOUT LEAVING A CLEW

The best brains of the police department are addled over the mystery in the First Trust and Savings bank—the "utterly impossible" disappearance of the man with the bottle of nitroglycerin who demanded $5,000.

Detectives have searched all over for him, applied all the old and modern and correspondence school methods of detecting, without getting even a clew. The man, between 28 and 34 years old, smooth shaven, well dressed, 5 feet 10 inches, weight 165—there are not more than 200,000 like him in Chicago—left behind only the name "N. Newland."

He went into the bank Thursday noon, shoved into the cage of W. Pitter Holst, paying teller, a slip of paper asserting unless $5,000 was handed over he would blow up the place—and then, when Mr. Holst smiled and said, "I'll have to see the bookkeeper about this, you know," and left the cage, the man vanished. The alarm was given immediately. Special police looked everywhere, but there was no sign of "Newland."

Girl's Tip Brings Capture Of Bank Robber Suspect

Jimmy Johnstone, alleged member of the bandit gang that robbed the Downers Grove bank of $22,000, was brought back to Chicago yesterday by Detective Sergeants Johnson and Ruffle. He had been traced to St. Louis by letters he had written to his sweetheart. The girl, who had more respect for the law than Johnstone's affections, gave his address to the detective bureau. Chief of Detectives James Mooney communicated with St. Louis police officials and Johnstone was placed behind the bars. He is said to have given a saloonkeeper in St. Louis $1,085 to hold for him.

DROPS DEAD AS HE LEAVES CAR.

Thomas Areston, 528 West Thirty-seventh street, an employé of Sears, Roebuck & Co., dropped dead yesterday as he alighted from a Cottage Grove avenue car at Thirty-seventh street. Heart disease is blamed.

SHORE PROJECTS BLOSSOM OUT AS CITY'S GREATEST

New Estimates Set Cost at $141,000,000, Aldermen Learn.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The South Park commission has a more ambitious plan for lake shore development than has been made public.

Thirty million dollars is the maximum expenditure heretofore given the public, but that is not 57 per cent of what it is considering. The entire scheme involves more than $53,000,000.

It has been the custom to refer to the lake front development as a $110,000,000 project, but the revised figures of the Illinois Central railroad, totaling $88,000,000, and this new estimate of the park board brings the aggregate to $141,000,000. This is by far the largest improvement in which the Chicago city council ever has had a part.

"Let No One Hunger."

The park estimate came from Commissioner Mohr yesterday. He was discussing the board's plans with aldermen, city officials, and heads of civic organizations. This party of sixty-four made an inspection of the railroad's right of way in special cars to South Chicago and Riverdale and back to Sixty-third street.

The luncheon in the "dining car forward" was not an insignificant feature. This incident is mentioned at the request of two delighted aldermen. The appetizers, pickles, olives, and radishes came first. Then potato salad and lobster salad and ample platters of cold beef, boiled ham, specially treated tongue, and summer sausage.

"Let no one go away hungry,' pleaded the conductor as he directed the waiters in serving two kinds of bread and in asking each guest whether he preferred milk, iced tea or coffee. The bottled water came from Louisiana, cantaloupes from Egypt, and the cream bore the common name of York. Three kinds of cigars, two brands of cigarets, lemonade and grape were other refreshments.

Plan Two Islands.

From Sixty-third street the party taken in autos along the lake shore in Jackson park to the life saving station, where all boarded a city . This traversed the outer edge of prospective park development north, circled the municipal pier, and docked in the river.

"A little to the right," pointed Supt. Foster of the south parks as the tug pulled out of the lagoon into the lake, "we plan a large island. A little farther south, about in front of the South Shore Country club, will be a narrow, irregular shaped island."

Ald. Passmore, interested in a second, spoke up:

"I have seen some artistic islands on the map, but I never heard before that anybody intended to make them. I thought you were going to stop at the north end of Jackson park."

"We have some ideas for things as far south as Seventy-ninth street," said Commissioner Mohr.

Details Are Withheld.

"What is the total estimate of cost?"

"For everything it is $53,000,000," replied the commissioner. "Isn't that the figure, Mr. Foster?"

"Yes," answered the superintendent.

"What are your other plans?"

"Let's not get into that, pleaded Mr. Foster. "This ordinance only involves what we are going to do north of Jackson park. That will require us to build six or eight miles of breakwater and the filling for the 1,500 acres we have planned will cost approximately $10,000,000."

"William Rothman, attorney for your board, told the council railway terminal committee last Wednesday you are much opposed to a viaduct at Forty-third street," was suggested to Commissioner Mohr. "Since then a report has been circulated that Charles L. Hutchinson has asserted he will never vote to accept the ordinance with that viaduct in it."

"I'm sure he won't," said Mr. Mohr, "and I don't think I want to."

It Will "Make Chicago."

"Does that mean the board will reject the ordinance?"

"I think we will find some way around it," he replied. "That viaduct will have to be so high in the air that it will be expensive, inconvenient, and unsightly, and we are informed only one alderman wants it. I would not want to kick over this improvement for one viaduct, but it is an unfair requirement."

"This improvement is huge and will make Chicago. It will be an attraction that will bring thousands to Chicago annually, as well as contribute in a large way to the health and happiness of residents of the city.

"What have we in Chicago now? Visitors come once to see how large we have grown in so short a time and they don't come back. I notice an officer of the Chicago Plan commission has said New York gets $100,000,000 a month from visitors. If New York can get that now, with what she has, we should get more than that when this improvement is completed."

Mayor's Stand in Doubt.

As forecast in THE TRIBUNE last Thursday, nearly all of the aldermen on the trip believe the ordinance will be formally approved by the council tomorrow, but half of them inquired for information regarding the attitude of Mayor Thompson.

They dislike the possibility of the mayor vetoing the ordinance to get it amended. Ald. Kovarik thought he would present an amendment of his own. He desires the park board shall construct a pier or two for fishermen.

Vice President Baldwin of the Illinois Central told the aldermen certain tracks south of Fifty-first street are being laid preparatory to electrification.

"When we get these finished, they will be ready for electrical operation," he said. "Along the west side of the right of way to the north we anticipate industrial development and we will have the two west tracks for that service."

The Chicago plan commmission has issued a pamphlet, "Improve the Lake Front," which boosts the ordinance before the city council. It contains editorials from newspapers and resolutions and speeches in favor of the agreement. It also contains statements from the Association of Commerce, the building trades council, Chicago real estate board, Union League club, Cook county real estate board, and the resolution adopted by the plan commission a week ago.

"SABOTAGE" AGAINST H. C. L.

Little Girls Say Wooden Shoes Are Cooler as Well as Cheaper.

Olivebelle Hamon Sylvia Singer

With the clatter of their "klumpens" Olivebelle Hamon, 9, and Sylvia Singer, 10 years old, are scaring the wits out of old H. C. L. on the north side.

Sylvia and Olivebelle have declared a walkout. They began their "sabotage" yesterday by putting the leather topped shoes in the closet for Sunday use, donning their wooden sabots.

The girls walked downtown yesterday from Olivebelle's home, 4955 Sheridan road. Sylvia lives at 4938 Kenmore avenue.

"Wooden shoes are just the thing for hot weather, they are so cool," the girls agreed.

THREE CHILDREN KILLED IN DAY'S PLAY ACCIDENTS

Three children died yesterday as a result of accidents during their afternoon play, according to reports to the coroner's office. One was hit playing ball, one fell from an ice wagon, and one, a baby, "playing drug-store" with other children, swallowed strychnine pills.

Fourteen year old Aleck Isheksen, 5454 Leland avenue, was playing ball at Winnemac park, Foster and Robey streets, when a swiftly batted "liner" struck him in the head. He died on the way to a hospital.

Two year old William Bovine, 1128 Schofield avenue, Oak Park, was the "patient" when a number of children found some bottles and began "playing drug store." The baby took some pills and died within an hour.

Seven year old Samuel La Port, 230 West Twenty-fifth street, was "hitching behind" an ice wagon when he slipped and fell, breaking his neck.

ASKS MEETING TO TALK ABOUT BUSINESS NEEDS

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—A resolution reflecting the views of the Illinois Manufacturers' association and other similar organizations on the proposed national industrial conference was introduced in the house today by Representative Britten of Chicago.

The resolution provides for the selection of delegates by interested parties and the president.

It is in opposition to a resolution introduced by Senator Poindexter in the senate and Representative Kelley of Pennsylvania in the house specifying a list of named delegates.

Mr. Britten's resolution provides for a conference of twenty delegates, nine to be selected by labor, nine by capital, and two by the president.

Circus in Grant Park To Aid Memorial Fund

Arrangements were completed yesterday by Charles L. Hutchinson, vice president of the South Park commission and treasurer of the Soldiers and Sailors fund, and Alderman Joseph P. Kostner, chairman of the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial fund and representatives of Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus whereby the circus is to appear at Grant Park for nine days. The opening performance will be on Saturday afternoon, August 9, and two performances each day will be given during the engagement which will close Sunday night, August 17. The fund received a guarantee of the receipts of the circus.

Do You Share in This Great Volume?

During the present season, the output of our Akron factories alone has approximated the enormous figure of 25,000 finished Goodyear Tires per day.

If this production can be maintained over the 300 working days per year, in twelve months Goodyear will have produced one tire to each of the 7,500,000 automobiles in the land.

Think of the immensity of this volume, in view of the fact that there are some 300 other brands of tires—think of what it means in tribute to the goodness of Goodyear Tires.

Especially think of its significance in the light of the present situation—despite this amazing total there still are not enough Goodyear Tires to go 'round.

The present unparalleled popularity of Goodyear Tires is all the more remarkable in that it is founded solely on the virtues in Goodyear Tires themselves.

No fictitious discounts, no delusive guarantees, no expedients of any sort have been employed to stimulate artificially the even march of sales.

Purely on the merit of Goodyear Tires, and the consistently fine service they deliver, rests the demand which even the world's largest tire production does not satisfy.

Certainly nothing less than conspicuous superiority could thus win and hold the allegiance of the largest single group of tire-buyers in the world.

We want to serve all these tire-users, we want ample stocks of Goodyear Tires everywhere; to that end we are striving constantly to enlarge our production.

But so far it has not been humanly possible for us to build tires of standard Goodyear quality in the volume all these people demand.

Until we are able to do so, we suggest that you anticipate future requirements by placing a reservation order with your Goodyear Service Station Dealer.

Such action now will guard you against possible disappointment later and avert any inconvenience this temporary shortage might otherwise occasion.

SOX BATTLE ELEVEN ROUNDS TO BEAT JOHNSON, 6 TO 5

JOHNSTON WINS U. S. CLAY TITLE, BEATING TILDEN

Also Helps Sam Hardy in Battle for Duo Honors at South Side.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

William M. Johnston of San Francisco conquered his eastern rival, William T. Tilden Jr. of Philadelphia, in the final match for the title of clay court champion of the United States, winning in four sets at the South Side Tennis club yesterday. Only in the last two sets did Tilden dispute the issue with Johnston on anything like even terms. Johnston's bullet-like drives threw the easterner off his game at the start, and the coast man won by 6—0, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2.

The brilliant Californian also emerged from the final battles with the doubles title. Paired with the veteran Sam Hardy of Chicago, Johnston led in defeating two youthful California compatriots, Robert G. Kinsey of San Francisco and Axel Gravem of Berkeley, 6—3, 6—1, 2—6, 6—3.

Miss Gould Beats Miss Neely.

Tilden, who was clay court champion last season, was not the only national titleholder who saw his laurels wrested away. Miss Corinne C. Gould of St. Louis overthrew Miss C. B. Neely of Chicago in a straight set battle which was determined by superior speed, 6—4, 6—2. Miss Neely won the women's title in 1918.

In women's doubles, Miss Neely derived some solace, when she and Miss Mary Katherine Voorhees of this city took the title. They defeated Miss Gould and Mrs. Harry Peters of Cleveland, 6—3, 0—6, 6—0. It was getting on to dusk when the women players finished their match, and Miss Gould and Mrs. Peters were first to lose their accuracy. This was a sufficient opening for the two Chicago women, both seasoned tennis campaigners.

Crowd of 2,000 Sees Matches.

More than 2,500 people saw the matches, which furnished a fitting climax for this city's best tennis tournament. The gallery filled all three bleachers and overflowed six and eight deep on the turf all around the two championship courts. Hundreds stood on benches and tables, for vantage points, and peered through the wire backstops all afternoon, not minding the discomforts.

Johnston's chief reliance was his wonderful forehand drive, and he sped these sizzling shots deep into Tilden's back court all the time. Tilden never had a chance to gather his wonderful assortment of shots.

When he tried to work in toward the net his strokes were uncertain. Johnston caught him in middle court many times, shooting right at the easterner's feet when the latter was coming up.

First a Love Set.

There is no more determined player than the San Franciscan, and he was out to avenge last week's defeat by Tilden in the east-west sectional team play at Cincinnati, and showed it. In the first set he handed Tilden one of the latter's very rare love set defeats, scoring twenty-four points to the 1918 champion's seven. The second set was also a decisive win for the coast man, 6—1.

In the third set Tilden showed considerable of the fire and dash which characterized his play in former matches. He went right after Johnston on the latter's service, which opened the set, and won the set with some spectacular chops, 6 to 4.

Pounces on Foe's Service.

Johnston accepted the gage of battle and the fourth set was a corker. The San Franciscan served first, and each won on his own service till the games stood 3 to 2, Johnston's favor. The coast player was putting full steam into his shots, and he pounced on Tilden's service on the next game, 4 to 2. Tilden tried coming to the net in the last two games, but after Johnston passed him along the alley once his net game seemed uncertain.

Doubles Match Interesting.

The men's doubles final was a great match to watch. Johnston was on edge for more triumphs and never wasted a chance to paste the ball. The crafty Hardy raked in a lot of points by teasing little taps just over the tape, where neither Kinsey nor Gravem had the least chance to recover.

The first set seesawed until the games stood 3 to 2 in favor of Kinsey and Gravem. Then Johnston and Hardy seized the initiative, taking and holding the net position, which forced the two coast youths into the back court. Kinsey and Gravem had little chance to pass their foes at the net, and Johnston and Hardy ran the first two sets out, 6 to 3 and 6 to 1.

Take Lead by 4 to 0.

Kinsey and Gravem refused to be disturbed by the two set lead against them and they larruped their shots where they were hardest to handle. Kinsey

"THIS here country," said the Gold Coin Kid to the owl car conductor, "is went completely cuckoo on the subject of oil. Wherever I snoop my sniffer I hear nothin' but some kind o' gas ematin from Texas or Oklyhomy.

"I run smack dab into a party yestiddy an I take a couple o' slants at him before I can believe it's my old bandhouse buddy, the Goose Island grand, as shifty a li'l petty larcency lifter as ever done thirty days. He's oozing out of Limo and he's made up for a munitions maker so much snobbish swank, it nachrally itches my suspicions an I flag him.

"'What the hell,' says I and he knows just what I'm shootin' at. He fires up a perfecto, looks me square an says, 'oil.' I'd heard a few oil yarns before but I didn never know that stuff way up upper could make a out of a low down heel, so I wings in a few fast ones and I get some fancy curves back from the grand.

"He tells me he's third vice president of a bank in Wichita Falls, Texas, and owns four sevenths of a undivided two-thirteenths in a five acre lease within Big Bertha shootin range of Burke-Burnett. Two years ago it was sellin' for a chew o' t'baccer per homestead section. This mornin you couldn touch it under seventy five thou per acre.

"Is they oil on it? Well not exactly yet. But a guy half a mile away knows a man what hit some oil in the neighborin county and when that got noised around a syndicate was immediately perpetrated to snap up this here nearly adjacent an almost contiguous territory at twicet its weight in porterhouse steaks.

"The grand tells me he's got only one worry now an that is for fear some book will get monkeyin' around with a drill on their land an puncture oil. He says the shares is movin nice an is quoted on the curb in Dallas, Phoenix and Lone Prairie at 244.

"So far so good, says he, but if they go an tap a gusher before the stock is all planted then that'll cause a mess o' complications such as havin to plunge into the oil business and hirin bookkeepers and buyin adding and pumpin machines and paying suckers dividends an all impedimenta such as that.

"The grand says he can't be bothered peddling oil. He'll leave that to Rockefeller an pikers like that. Hes busy havin his glims already on a new three elevenths of a two seventeenth of a town lot.

"He says this here is one racket where the wise guys trim come ons and make em wealthy. When them syndicates is committed on shoestrings waiters and widows breaks a knee in the rush to get down on the three colored lithographs. When the queer is all shoved the syndicators moves on to the next patch leavin their victims with trunks full o' questionable insecurities.

Then in comes a well an the first thing you know all them soft marks is drawin 6600 per cent divident on their ridiculous investment, wirin Tiffany for dimond buttons for their underwear and looking disapprovingly at American made cars.

"He says Texas is just putrid with oil an rotten with oil speculators. All the eggs an short card cheaters is down there trying to swindle the public but unable to get over because the bum stock they slip em generally turns out to be worth a few millions, which breaks the crook's heart because if they is anything a grifter constitutionally dislikes its to scale a fish an make him winner.

"So ev'ry body in Texas is getting rich, the oil rain fallin alike upon the sap an the steerer."

"As it should be," said the owl car skipper. "Gettin rich is mild compensation for having to live in Texas."

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—One more game here tomorrow.

After the series here the Cubs are destined to play across the big bridge against the Robins for three days, with a double header booked for Monday.

So far this year the Cubs have won one out of ten contests from the Giants. Yet McGraw postponed a game yesterday under conditions no worse than existed today.

Chase opened the home third with a single but ran too far when McCarty popped a fly to short right and Flack doubled him up neatly before he could get back to first.

Deal stabbed a hot one from Zimmerman's bat in the second and extracted loud applause from the rooters who were safely housed in dry territory—beneath the grandstand roof.

Paskert made some peevish remark about the weather in the sixth and was chased to the clubhouse by Klem. Everybody on both teams envied him because he could take a shower bath without his clothes on.

If anyone thinks this part of the country has gone dry take a slant at the postponed games in the last ten days. The baseball club owners are trying to frame a petition to congress for an injunction against J. Pluvius.

Hollocher led in the ninth with a safe bunt which Heine Zimmerman could not dig out of the heavy dew in time. Magee sacrificed but Merkle fouled out and Pick's rap to Zimmerman resulted in the demise of Hollocher at third.

GIANTS SLIP IT TO CUBS AGAIN, VAUGHN VICTIM

Two Home Runs Off the Star Southpaw Settle Game, 3 to 2.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Three pop flies which would have been easy outs on a man's sized ball yard went into the right field stand at the Polo grounds today and scored all but one of the runs in a game which the Giants won from the Cubs, 3 to 2. The only legitimate tally made off Vaughn or Toney, who hooked up in a submarine combat, was registered by the Giants in the fifth inning.

Fletcher and Chase made the Bevo home runs for the Giants in the sixth and seventh innings, respectively, with nobody on. Merkle dropped our softboiled four-bagger in the fans' domain in the seventh with Magee on ahead of him and counted all the runs off Toney with it.

Easy Outs in a Real Park.

All three of the home runs would have been caught by Flack or Young on any other major league park, except possibly that occupied by the Phillies. The balls dropped into the seats close to the right foul line which is very short.

The game belonged to the Giants on its merits because they scored one run off Vaughn without the aid of their joke home runs. Two singles that were clean, and an infield out, put over the genuine tally. But the Cubs outhit their opponents and would have counted on their own efforts without Merkle's home run, if the Giants had not perpetrated a pair of horse shoe plays in the infield, each of which killed a base hit. Fletcher and Doyle were the villians.

Rain Gums Up the Show.

Rain mussed up the works and made conditions impossible for baseball but the teams played without an error and both hurlers were steady and had control.

A brief respite in the showers which have besieged the east for a week tempted the home club to open its gates and start the game, but before the third inning was over, it began to drizzle and kept it up with a crescendo movement until the scrap was over.

Every ball batted to the outfield on the ground raised a shower of spray all along its route and had to be manicured with a towel before it was fit to pitch again.

Only One Base on Balls.

In spite of these conditions there was only one base on balls and that was given to Hollocher at the start of the fourth round. It paved the way to the first chance either team had to score. Magee and Merkle flied out, but Hollocher stole second. Pick walloped a high liner toward right. Doyle jumped and speared the ball with one hand, but had hold of only one-third of the pill when he came down.

Deal led in the fifth with a hit and was sacrificed to second by Mann, only to be doubled up when Fletcher stole a base hit from Killefer by scooping it off the dirt on the fly close to second base.

Benny and Zim Collaborate.

The Giants scored in the fifth on singles by Kauff and Zimmerman and an infield out. They registered again in the sixth when Fletcher deposited a pop fly in the empty seats near first base.

The Cubs knotted the count in the seventh. Magee led with a single and Merkle duplicated Fletcher's home run which was good for two tallies. The Cubs might have won right there if they had not forgotten the slow going. Pick followed with a single which he tried to lengthen, and Kauff nailed him at second. Deal skied, then Mann singled and was pinched trying to steal in the mud.

Two were out in the home half of the seventh when Chase popped a fly into the stand close to the right foul line for what proved the winning run.

FIGHT PICTURES NOW IN NEW YORK

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Moving pictures of the Willard-Dempsey fight at Toledo are in New York, say representatives of Frank G. Hall of 130 West Forty-sixth street, who holds the rights to the films. The pictures were sent here for cutting and subtitling, and there is no intention of exhibiting them for pay, it is explained. Hall is trying to have the decision of the Ohio board of censors against showing the film in that state rescinded.

G. CARPENTIER TOPPLES SMITH IN ROUND EIGHT

PARIS, July 19.—Georges Carpentier, the French champion, knocked out Dick Smith, former English champion, in the eighth round of a twenty round bout tonight. It was Carpentier's fight all the way.

Smith was offered as the victim to Parisian fight fans in celebrating Carpentier's return to the ring after five year's absence. He was completely outclassed, Carpentier dominating the situation throughout.

Hooks to Jaw End Fight.

The fourth round alone was about even. Smith was down for a count of seven in the third, and took a count of eight in the fifth. Carpentier finished his work in the eighth with a left and right hook to the jaw.

The Frenchman semed anxious for a prompt knockout. He fought fiercely, leaving openings which might have been taken advantage of by a more clever opponent. Carpentier appeared a little short of condition, and some line was obtained on this evening's showing regarding his chances in a gruelling battle.

Fred Fulton challenged the winner.

Beautiful Women See Scrap.

The assembly was more spectacular than the fight itself, beautiful women in georgeous gowns and men in evening dress cheering Carpentier and Fonck and Nungesser, the aviators, when they were introduced.

It was more like a social function than a prize fight, and the crowds went home happy that the French idol had not been dethroned.

The bout is Carpentier's first fight of importance since the start of the war with Germany and proves that he is in some sort of condition, for Smith never has been considered lightly by the British public.

Carpentier and Joe Beckett, present British champion, are now matched for a twenty round encounter Sept. 2, the winner of which bout it is believed, will be matched to meet Jack Dempsey, the new world's champion.

Georges Must Come to U. S.—Kearns.

Oakland, Cal., July 19.—"Carpentier is undoubtedly the best of Europe's heavyweights. His win today puts him that much nearer a bout with Dempsey, under championship conditions, but such a bout will be fought on this side of the Atlantic," said Manager Jack Kearns tonight, after reading of the French heavyweight's victory over Dick Smith.

Dempsey and Kearns left tonight for Salt Lake, to visit Dempsey's parents. From there they will go direct to New York, according to present plans.

Dempsey Making a Hit.

"That bird ain't a bit stuck up," was the way San Francisco and Oakland fight fans sized up Dempsey. "To all he was unchanged since the days he broke into the front round matches hereabouts, and was able to recall the names of ringsiders, towel swingers, and fight fans without hesitancy.

RED HOSE DENY DISSENSION HAS WRECKED TEAM

Boston, Mass., July 19.—The world champion Red Sox, now in seventh place in the American league standing, published today a statement signed by virtually every member of the team, denying that the team's failure was due to dissension of mismanagement.

The poor showing is attributed in the statement to "a combination of bad breaks, the failure of some of the regulars to perform up to their past standards, weak pitching, and continual bad luck on the field."

Manager Edward Barrow is said to have "treated his players in a manner that could not be improved upon" and the statement adds that "the players are in complete harmony with themselves and with the manager."

Carl Mays, the star underhand pitcher, who quit the team recently, will be traded, according to President Frazee. He said that almost every team in the league was seeking Mays, and that deals now pending might involve two other teams, with the Red Sox obtaining one or two pitchers.

MILTON TRAVELS AT 101 MILE CLIP IN AUTO COMBAT

Uniontown, Pa., July 19.—[Special.]—Tommy Milton of St. Paul for the second time this season demonstrated his superiority over a fast field of veteran pilots of the speedway this afternoon. He hurled his swift speed creation over twenty laps of the mile and one-eighth board saucer at the rate of 101.17 miles an hour in the final heat of twenty-two and one-half miles.

Max Marston in Comeback Wins New Jersey Honors

Deal, N. J., July 19.—After half a dozen years' interim, Maxwell Marston, Philadelphia golf star, today won the New Jersey state golf championship for the second time, defeating Edward M. Wild, 3 and 1 to play, at thirty-six holes. He was 4 up at the end of the first eighteen holes.

FOHL RESIGNS; SPEAKER MADE INDIANS' PILOT

Cleveland, O., July 19.—Lee Fohl, manager of the Cleveland American league baseball club for the last three years, resigned as manager of the team today. The resignation was accepted by President James C. Dunn, who appointed Tris Speaker, outfielder, manager for the rest of the season. Fohl's resignation, it is said, was because of dissatisfaction of the public with his management.

"Fans Not with Me."—Fohl.

In tendering his resignation to President Dunn, Fohl said:

"I feel that the fans are not for me and as I have your interest at heart first and my own last, I think it best for all concerned for me to step down and out. The team has a chance to win the pennant and I don't want to appear in the light of being a hindrance to them. I hope they will win the pennant."

Fohl will be retained on the pay roll in some capacity, either as coach or scout, President Dunn said.

The unfortunate ending of yesterday's game with Boston, when Ruth hit a home run with three on bases, giving Boston the game, 8 to 7, is said to have caused Fohl to resign.

Fans who saw the game were bitter in their criticism of Fohl for picking Pitcher Coumbe, who had not hurled a game in two months, to pitch to Ruth, instead of one of the first string twirlers.

"Relations Cordial"—Dunn.

After appointing Speaker to fill the vacancy President Dunn said:

"Fohl's action was purely voluntary. I never even suggested to him that he quit his job and I had no intention of making such a suggestion. Our relations were cordial.

"Fohl will remain in the employ of the Cleveland club at the same salary he was getting as manager. I cannot say now in what capacity he will act. It may be that he will act as a developer of young pitchers and other players, in which rôle he has done wonderful work for the Cleveland club."

Dunn said he had absolutely no criticism to make as to Fohl's work as manager.

Speaker Didn't Seek Job.

"I didn't seek the job, didn't want it, and have at all times worked in perfect harmony with Manager Fohl," said Tris Speaker. "But now that I have taken it, I intend to do everything in my power to make a success of it."

Fohl became manager of the Indians in 1916 when Joe Birmingham was turned loose in midseason by Charley Somers, then owner of the club.

In his ball playing career Fohl was a catcher, serving in that capacity on the Columbus Association team, on the Akron team in the old O. and P. league, and on the Waterbury team in the Connecticut league.

Tris Speaker came to Cleveland in 1916 when Dunn gave $50,000 and Pitcher Jones and Infielder Thomas to land him. From the day he came he was destined to become the Cleveland club's manager.

French Bantam Champion Knocks Out 'Digger' Evans

PARIS, July 19.—Criqui, the French bantamweight champion, knocked out "Digger" Evans, the Australian, in the eighth round of their boxing bout here last night. Evans won the championship in the bantamweight division during the interallied games late in June.

NOTES

The Yankees come today for a three game series.

Chicago is leading New York by four and a half games at the start of this crucial series.

When the Sox were enjoying their tremendous batting assault in the third inning Hap Felsch hit a ball harder than any of the others, but his was a line drive right at Murphy in center field.

Tip O'Neill was so happy over the Sox victory that he drove a load of scribes down to the loop after the game in his "speedster."

One thing was evident about the initial appearance of Lefty Sullivan. He isn't afraid to put the ball over the plate and seems to have plenty of stuff on it. If his only fault is in throwing bunts to first base it looks as if he may be with us a while.

Just before Johnson drove out his double in the eleventh Harold Janvrin hit a terrific line drive down over third base. It was on its way to be a double, but McMullin leaped off to his right and stabbed it. Besides that play Mack did some sturdy fielding. Twice he cut over and took slow bounders that were headed for Weaver and both times got the man.

MEBLEH VICTOR IN YACHT EVENT

Cleveland, O., July 19.—Mebleh of the Cleveland Yacht club today won the long distance sail yacht race from Put-in-Bay to Cleveland, a distance of fifty-two nautical miles, in 8:10:20, winning the Winton trophy, presented by Commodore Alexander Winton. Yank of the Toledo Yacht club was second in 8:21:53, and Psammiad of the Cleveland Yacht club third in 8:26:26. Eight yachts competed. All finished except Aladdin of the Sandusky Yacht club, which ran on a reef early in the race and withdrew.

Arvia of the Buffalo Yacht club was first to finish. Arvia was forced to give time allowance to its rivals and on the corrected time finished in fourth place.

HIT BY COLLINS CRUSHES GRIFFS IN LONG TUSSLE

Gleason Gambles on Rook Hurler, Who Is Chased in Hurry.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

With Walter Johnson opposing them, Chicago's White Sox went out and won a ball game yesterday that was a thriller. It took them eleven innings to do it, but they had to overcome a four run lead. The final count was 6 to 5, and a crowd of at least 20,000 fans left the park convinced that the Sox are after the pennant.

It wasn't any fluke victory. The Sox won it by walloping Walter's curves. They walloped them probably harder than the fans here ever saw them walloped before. In the third inning they knocked out five regular hits and scored four runs. They knocked in another in the fourth, and then they fought until the eleventh, when with men on second and first, Eddie Collins sloughed one to the fence in left field that drove home the winning run.

Final Blow Easy Triple.

Eddie could have made a triple on that blow had a triple been worth a cent. He simply ran to first base and then cut across the diamond for the shower bath. The winning run was over the plate and one of the hottest fights of the season had been won.

While they walloped Walter hard, the Sox might have won easily, for Washington had a lot of luck and a lot of help in scoring five runs. Boss Gleason surprised everybody by sending his new pitcher, Lefty Sullivan to the slab at the start of the game to oppose Walter the Great. It was a pretty big situation for a youngster to make his big league bow and possibly rather tested his nerve too harshly.

Walks Pave Way to Runs.

Anyway, everybody, including the Washington players, had been reading how this Sullivan youngster was a hum dinger of a pitcher, but that he was almost sure to throw the ball away when it was up to him to field it. Well, he didn't get a chance to throw it away in the first inning because he never had one hit to him. After he got two men out, he couldn't pitch to suit the umpire and walked a couple of men and then Murphy poked one down third base way. The ball hit the chalk mark and the ump called it fair. It was good for two bases and sent two men home.

Throws Ball Into Field.

Two were out in the third and Mike Menosky poled a double to left. Sam Rice bounded one toward the slab and this time it was up to Sullivan to field one. He grabbed it and flung it clear to the farthest corner of right field, thus living up to all the traditions about him that he couldn't field his position. Not only Menosky scored, but Rice ran all the way around the bases and Washington had a commanding lead of four runs.

But in the last of the third the Sox assaulted Johnson as no one ever believed it possible. Ray Schalk started it with a single and Liebold, Eddie Collins, Buck Weaver, and Joe Jackson all followed suit. Then Picinich made a bum heave to third when Weaver was stealing, and the score was tied.

Plays the Ball Safe.

Young Mr. Sullivan went to the slab for the start of the fourth and Picinich opened with a single. Shanks bunted a nice soft one right down toward the pitcher's slab. It was once more up to the youngster to field a ball. He ran in, grabbed the ball, and though he had oceans of time to fire to first and retire the man, he simply held the ball in his hand and carried it back to the slab.

Boss Gleason knew it was time for him to get out of there, so he called in Dick Kerr and Dick came and got the side out niftily, turning a corking play at first base for the third out when he ran over and covered on a smash to Risberg and had to snare the ball with his bare hand while on the run.

Dick stuck to the job to the finish. In the fifth Risberg fumbled one at first and Rice followed with a triple that gave Washington a run that tied the count again, the Sox having counted one in the fourth on singles by McMullin and Schalk, a wild pitch, and a sacrifice fly by E. Collins.

Story of Final Run.

Kerr held his own with Walter then until the eleventh, when McMullin singled and Schalk sacrificed. Kerr hit to Johnson and McMullin was run down between second and third, Kerr reaching second on the play. Leibold walked and then Eddie Collins smacked his single to the left wall that won the game.

'Ringer' Causes This Game To End in Seven Rounds

The ball game between employés of the state's attorney's office and the sheriff's office at Wells park yesterday ended in a row at the end of the seventh inning, with the score 0 to 0. When the sheriffs came to bat in the seventh and it was Cremo's turn to bat they tried to slip in Fred Botersstein in his place. The substitution was discovered and after the sheriffs admitted they had tried to run in a "ringer" the game ended in a tie.

FORM REVERSAL GIVES POLO TILT TO ONWENTSIA

Strong Attack and Sturdy Defense Win Over Dayton, 5 to 2 3-4.

Onwentsia's polo team by a vastly improved attack and defense finally triumphed over Dayton by a score of 5 goals to 2¾ at Lake Forest yesterday.

The opening of the sixth period saw a peculiar accident which fortunately carried with it no serious results. Towne, No. 3 of Onwentsia, was riding hard in advance of the ball, which was driven on a line by a Dayton player. The ball struck Towne fairly in the back of the neck. After being removed from his horse and having his neck bathed in water, Towne came back gamely and played the last two periods in great shape.

Victor Scores Twice.

In the first period play was mostly in the center of the field. Opening the second period with a dashing attack led by Rader, No. 2, Onwentsia quickly scored twice, goals being shot by Rader and Coonley.

The third period saw Dayton come back strong and a well placed shot by Mead, No. 1, brought the visitors a goal. A penalty also was suffered in this period. The fifth period saw Dayton score again after a hard fight. The goal was made by N. Talbott, No. 4.

The sixth was probably the hardest fought period of the match, both teams scoring a goal. The supreme effort of the Dayton team was made. Onwentsia scored goals in the seventh and eighth periods. The goal in the seventh was due to a fine shot by Towne.

Rader Plays Star Game.

While there was much praiseworthy work on both sides, Rader, No. 2, stood out as the individual star. He scored three of the five goals for his team and was directly responsible for another. Lineup:

ALLOW AUSTRALIANS TO PLAY IN TOURNEY FOR DOUBLES HONORS

New York, July 19.—Two Australian tennis pairs will compete in the United States doubles championship tournament at Boston the second week of August.

Norman E. Brookes and Gerald L. Patterson will form one team and Randolph Lycett and R. V. Thomas the second doubles.

Entered by Special Rule.

A special ruling of the executive committee of the United States Tennis association was necessary before the antipodean teams could enter the Longwood C. C. tournament, owing to the late arrival of the Australians in this country. According to the playing regulations, only winners of sectional doubles championships are eligible to compete for national honors in the championship round.

Unable to get passage before July 24, the Australians could not arrive in time to enter any of these sectional tourneys. Realizing the unusual circumstances, the executive committee, by virtue of a special by law, entered the two teams as from the National association. All four players are also expected to play in the national singles championships to be held at Forest Hills the last week of August.

Expect Visitors to Win.

Many expert followers of tennis look for Brookes and Patterson to win the American doubles title. Brookes, although past 40, is still considered by many as the greatest player of his time, while Patterson in his early twenties, was the sensation of both the interallied and English championships. He won the latter singles, defeating Brookes in the final round.

BILLY JOHNSTON TOPPLES TILDEN AS NET CHAMPION

worked his across court passing shots against both opponents, and Gravem smashed spectacularly from overhead. They set the pace all the way, running up a lead of 4 to 0 in games and taking the set, 6 to 2.

After the rest period the teams resumed, with streaks of fast and furious play, then slumps when the play lagged a bit. Each side won on the serve until at 2-all Johnston and Hardy broke through on Kinsey's service, rushing the net and raking the ball to the deep back court. The new champions finished with two love game victories.

Miss Gould set the pace in the women's singles final against Miss Neely, playing to the latter's back hand, and driving steadily to the base line.

Mixed Doubles Today.

All titles were settled yesterday but that in mixed doubles, which will be played off at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The opposing teams will be Miss Marion Leighton of Chicago and Kinsey, against Mrs. Ralph Field of Cincinnati, and Gravem. The play in this class was interrupted by many defaults, the reason being that the event had to be concentrated almost entirely into one day's play. Many of the out of town men and women had made arrangements to leave the city yesterday, and were unable to carry out their mixed doubles matches. Summaries:

Barney Oldfield Says About His Tires:

"The great success of Oldfield tires in the Chicago territory is beyond expectations—and we were ready for some big business, at that.

"Oldfield tires have proved their worth. Car owners do not stop with one Oldfield tire or two. They come back for more when they see what the first ones do.

"Remember that I am not making a new tire at all. It is the same tire others made about five years ago—the best ever built until Oldfields came out.

"I am making a bigger tire—putting more rubber between fabric and cord. It is a tire that does not blow out—one that can safely be retreaded after the tread has worn off, and practically double the mileage.

"The Oldfield Tire Co., of which I am president, is represented in the Chicago territory by Sawin, Gale & Co., Distributors, 1606 Michigan Avenue.

"They have all sizes in stock—fabric and cord—including the wonderful 30x3½ six-ply cord, the greatest tire value for Ford cars ever made.

"Besides selling the best tires I know how to make, after my 20 years' use of tires under the most trying conditions, our Chicago distributors render a tire service that insures absolute satisfaction for the customer. They tell you to be your own adjuster on Oldfield tires.

"Here are some of the reasons why Oldfields are selling big and giving supreme satisfaction—representing the greatest tire value, cheapest mileage, smallest percentage of tire trouble on the market today:

Reasons Back of Oldfield Tire Value

"1. The wonderful over-size feature. Oldfields are larger, sturdier and mean longer and more dependable service.

"2. Tread compounded for extra toughness—for wear resistance. The distributors tell me that not an Oldfield tire running in the Chicago territory has, to their knowledge, shown a single road cut or had a blowout. If a road cut does happen, they repair it free of charge.

"3. Extra strong bead—more wires—increased strength.

"4. Highest grade of gum used—more resiliency in cushion and breaker—easier riding—less friction and heat.

"5. More good rubber throughout the tire.

"6. Extra heavy side wall.

"7. More Tire in every way—more miles—less cost per tire mile.

"I know we have the most trustworthy tires that can be built, and the distributors give a service that must make you satisfied.

"Yours truly,
"BARNEY OLDFIELD."

A HOT SPOT Chalmers Lures You

PICTURE in your mind the things that you would have liked to own—that piece of rare jewelry, that very fetching motor boat—possibly an airplane—that delightful old house on the hill.

Money would have meant little could you have procured them.

Here's one more—and quite possibly you've never "discovered" it. Most good things, you know, you've got to "discover."

Its looks may charm you, its specifications may attract, its comforting economy you may enjoy, but there's one thing about it that'll lure you—charm you—delight you beyond words.

That is the engine. Not so much by what it is, because so many look alike. But by what it does, what it gives.

It "pulverizes" gas before the spark plugs touch off the fuel and you have a throbless, jarless, silky sort of action from underneath the bonnet.

It gives you the feeling of fineness, without the excessiveness of power, although you can punctuate the speedometer dial with speed probably as quick as in any car built today, and make a hill country look like a plain—if you want. But you don't have to use it, and when you do it isn't like giving a banquet. Remember this about a Hot Spot Chalmers.

HOOSIER GIRLS CAPTURE TITLES IN A. A. U. SWIMS

Misses Ries and Mattis Score Victories at Edgewater Beach.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Indianapolis swimmers made a clean sweep of the three women's senior Central A. A. U. championships, staged yesterday at Edgewater Beach. Miss Regina Ries of the Indianapolis A. C., holder of the 100 yard breast stroke title, which she won at Put-in-Bay, won the fifty yard breast stroke event, and also landed the 220 yard free style championship, in which Miss Thelma Darby, winner of titles galore, finished second. Miss Darby retained the fifty yard back stroke title.

Miss Frieda Mattis, a stockily built girl, scored her first victory in competition by taking the Chicago championship at 100 yards. She appears to possess fine class, as she defeated Miss Sybil Bauer, who finished second in the fifty yard back stroke championship.

Raphael Junior Champion.

Morris Raphael, unattached, won the men's junior C. A. A. U. championship at 100 yards free style. E. J. O'Connor, who finished second in this event, was disqualified for finishing outside the flag.

The men's junior C. A. A. U. championship at 100 yards back stroke, was taken by W. T. Reckless of the Hamilton club.

The contestants had to push their way through bounding billows produced by a strong breeze from the north which whipped up a few white caps on the bosom of Old Lake Mich. All of the races were against the wind with the exception of the 220 event, in which the latter part of the course was with the wind and waves.

Under these conditions the times were slow and the strongly built contestants had an advantage.

Volunteers as Officials.

Although the program was plastered with an imposing array of officials few of them showed up and it was necessary to enlist recruits. In the final event, the women's senior 50 yard breast stroke, Director Chauncey A. Hyatt, who acted as starter, ran out of cartridges and as there were no timers at the finish, no time was taken.

It would also add interest to the spectators if the contestants were numbered and if the program contained the names of the last year's winners and the records for the various distances.

A big crowd saw the contests and enjoyed added features which included fancy diving by W. P. Heyn and Galbraith of the Great Lakes and Miss Helen G. Fitzsimons, Canadian champion.

Frank Stute of the I. A. C., who has won canoe tilting events in five states, won again yesterday, A. Hanning being the paddler.

DODGERS SCORE TWO IN TWELFTH ROUND TO DEFEAT REDS, 2-1

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 19.—Brooklyn beat Cincinnati today, 2 to 1, in twelve innings. Cadore and Reuther had a great pitchers' battle, neither side scoring until the final inning. Then, with two out, Daubert tripled and scored on Olson's low throw of Groh's grounder.

Ward started Brooklyn's half with a fly to Roush; Krueger singled, and Grimes ran for him. Kilduff, batting for Cadore, walked. Olson's Texas leaguer to left filled the bases, and Johnston's single to center scored Grimes and Kilduff.

Wingo was put out of the game for kicking and Sallee was chased off the visitors' bench for loud talking. Score:

PHILLIES WIN TWO GAMES.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 19.—Five St. Louis pitchers failed to keep Philadelphia from winning two games today, 6 to 1, and 4 to 3, making four straight victories for the tailenders. Rain halted the first game for nearly an hour and a half during the third inning, and made the field a marsh. The second was called after six innings. After play was resumed the Phillies knocked Doak off the slab and won in one big inning. Scores:

BOSTON, 2; PIRATES, 1.

Boston, Mass., July 19.—Powell was the big individual factor in Boston's 2 to 1 victory over Pittsburgh today. His sacrifice fly, on which Southworth made a wonderful one hand catch, taking from Powell what looked like a triple, scored Rudolph in the third, and his home run to right field in the eighth gave Boston the needed run. A pass to Terry and hits by Southworth and Cutshaw scored Pittsburgh's run in the first. Powell also made a single and a triple. Score:

Reuther, Cincinnati, with ten victories and two defeats, holds the National league slab leadership, but also is topped by a no-defeat occasional flinger—Carter, Chicago—who has three victories.

Dubuc, New York, follows Reuther with five and one, and Mitchell, Brooklyn, follows with four and one. Barnes, New York, has won twelve and lost four.

Chicago leads the American league clubs in batting, with .279, with Cleveland and Detroit second and third.

New York tops the National league clubs, with .274, with Brooklyn and Cincinnati second and third.

New Men to Aid Teams At Lake Forest College

Prospects for athletics at Lake Forest college the coming year received a boost upon the enrolling of two former Great Lakes stars. They are William McColley and Don House. McColley was one of the mainstays of the 1917-18 football and basketball teams, and a baseball pitcher.

House is a quarter miler, holding station and interscholastic records in that event. He also has played football and is a quick, hard fighting basketball forward.

With these men in addition to Englund and Powell of the star Rockford High school quintet of last year, and with Coleman, Finney, Woods, Eddy, Maplesden, Marsh, Smith, and Holmes among the older men coming back, Lake Forest college hopes to contend strongly for first place in all Little Five contests.

Soldier Events Added to National Rowing Regatta

New York, July 19.—For the first time in the history of the national rowing regatta, two special events have been added in order to give soldiers and sailors of the allied nations an opportunity of competing. Twelve regular championship races will be rowed over the Lake Quinsigamand course on Aug. 1 and 2 in the forty-fifth annual regatta, which this year will be held under the auspices of the Lake Quinsigamand association of Worcester, Mass.

The regatta committee unanimously decided to cater for the soldiers and sailors of any or all of the allied nations by the addition of a single scull, shell race, and a four oared gig event with coxswain.

CLUB GIVES ROTH CUP.

President Jack Roth was presented with a silver loving cup by the Garnet Sportsman's club for the success the club has attained under his leadership. The Garnet Sportsman's club will give an outing today at Lake Zurich.

Like Alex of Old, Dempsey Hasn't Anyone to Conquer

BY RAY PEARSON.

Now that Jack Dempsey has crowned himself the greatest heavyweight scrapper of the time, it is doubtful whether there will be anything for him to do in the fistic way for a long time. The field of aspiring young men of which Dempsey formerly was a member is extremely limited, particularly in this country. In Europe there are only a couple of men considered of caliber to meet the champion—Joe Beckett, champion of England, and Georges Carpentier, champion of France.

The situation as it concerns Dempsey in this country is due to the fact that the man who defeated Jess Willard trimmed almost every man of merit in the heavyweight class before he was "up to" a match with the Kansas Sunflower.

Now About This McMahon.

There are only one or two men who might be considered likely opponents for Dempsey, but even at that they will not be considered seriously. One is Tom McMahon of Newcastle, formerly of Spring Valley, Ill. McMahon's chief claim to fame is based on the fact that he defeated Willard before Jess was the champion in a twelve round bout at Youngstown, O. That was a decision bout.

In issuing his challenge to Dempsey McMahon states that a man of his size and weight, for he tips the scales at almost the same figure as the titleholder, has a better chance for victory than Willard had. McMahon weighs 185 pounds in fighting condition. He modestly admits that he can punch, and, to make his cause appear stronger, says he is a better boxer than the champ.

Well, Tom's a Modest Bird.

Here's what McMahon has to say about meeting Dempsey:

"I have no fear of Dempsey, and do not regard him as a superhuman. I witnessed him whip Willard, and his style would match well against mine, which is nothing more than a slambang style of milling. I am correct in saying that I am cleverer than the titleholder. I am training for a prospective bout with the champion."

Just a few words more about McMahon. Admitting that Tom is a pretty good fighter, we fail to see where his record can compare with that of the champion. Furthermore, if, as McMahon says, he would put up a slambang battle against Jack, we'd give everybody one guess at the name of the man who would finish second. Then, too, who would be willing to offer a purse for a scrap between this pair?

Dempsey Clears Up Field.

The man to blame for the fact there is no fistic work for Dempsey to do in America is the man whom Dempsey stopped in three rounds at Toledo. Willard did not meet Dempsey until he absolutely was forced to do so. He put it up to Dempsey long ago to go out and beat the other fellows, and among these other fellows he mentioned Fred Fulton, the Rochester Giant. Did Jack go out and beat Fulton? He certainly did, to the king's taste, in a single round—in fact, twenty-three seconds was plenty of time for Dempsey to stop Ferocious Frederick.

Anybody who remembers back to the time when Col. J. C. Miller of Oklahoma, sah, attempted his debut as a promoter by matching Willard and Fulton, only to have that match fall dead because public sentiment opposed it during the world war, also will remember what Willard had to say about Dempsey at that time. It will make interesting reading for those who saw what Dempsey did to Willard on July 4 at Toledo.

"Takes Care of Him Later."

Dempsey had made frantic efforts to get the match with the champion, but Col. Miller and Willard could not see things that way. They wanted Fulton, and couldn't see Dempsey at all.

What a difference a few months make. Read the accounts of that July 4 encounter, in which this same Willard was battered and beaten to the canvas by the young man who could and did wait. Such is pugilism. It would be our guess that, had Dempsey fought the champion at the time Jess was scheduled to fight Fulton, the result would have been the same as in Ohio.

Beckett or Georges Look Easy.

The talk of matching Dempsey with Carpentier or Beckett will continue, and may possibly develop into a fight, either in France, or England, or this country. If either of these matches should materialize, it would simply be soft money for the champion, for Dempsey should finish either man in jigtime. Jack wants to fight in this country, but money will do lots of things, and if he is offered enough of the "stuff" it's a cinch that Dempsey will fight either man in anybody's back yard.

One of the hardest things in the boxing game is to compare a present day fighter with a star of the past. Lots of people will say that Bob Fitzsimmons at his best would have trimmed Dempsey easily. Others declare that in their opinion Dempsey would have knocked out Fitz just as he knocked out all his rivals in his march to the crown. It is our opinion that Jack Dempsey, the champion of today, is the greatest heavyweight fighter of all time.

EXPECT RECORD ENTRY IN LOGAN SQUARE CONTEST

Officials of the Logan Square Athletic club are making special arrangements to accommodate several hundred runners for what is expected to be the biggest modified marathon event held locally, an eight mile handicap foot race, on Sunday, Aug. 10.

A special trophy offered for the leader in the novice division is serving well as an added inducement in bringing out green material unheard of before in local events.

The entry blanks are handled by John W. Weske, who can be reached at the club headquarters, Kedzie and Milwaukee avenues.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS DETROIT USA

Join The Half Million

Used in 3,000 Cities, Its Admirers Are Now Legion

Who Praise The Essex

The Essex is now known in more than three thousand towns and cities.

Deliveries of new cars approximate a hundred a day.

Thousands, through demonstrations made by dealers and rides with friends, are daily learning the qualities that account for Essex popularity.

Their knowledge, like those who have not yet ridden in the Essex, was limited to hearsay. But their impressions were most favorable because of what others had told them.

Won't You, Too, Join Its Army?

You, too, will volunteer your endorsement, we are sure, if you will but ride in the Essex.

It has never failed. Our estimate is that more than half a million have ridden in it and are telling their friends about the Essex.

Such praise is not misplaced. We don't believe it greater than the car deserves. But that you will be able to judge after you have ridden in the Essex.

Points Others Speak Of

Note how motor car talk quickly turns to the Essex.

When light, cheap cars are spoken of, their qualities are usually compared to the Essex. Then some one says, "But the Essex also has——" and from then on Essex qualities are compared to large costly cars.

It isn't likely that anyone will say any light similarly priced car approaches the value of the Essex.

In performance, for instance, you won't hear it classed with any but the most powerful.

And so with its riding qualities, which are invariably compared to high priced large cars.

So is the detail of finish and beauty judged by such standards.

Comparison with other light weight moderate priced cars can be made only with their respective first and operating costs.

Can You Resist the Invitation?

We hope you won't delay in accepting our invitation to ride in the Essex.

The result, we think, will be your leaving an order to be filled as soon as possible. We know you will help spread the news about the Essex, for it must inspire you with the same admiration others voice for it.

Mediocre Golf Play Due to Lack of Practice: O'Neil

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

GEORGE A. O'NEIL

The reason the links are incumbered with so many mediocre players is that those who most need to practice are the least willing to do so. Too many beginners expect quick results and imagine that after they have taken a few lessons from an instructor and acquired the rudiments of a good swing, further progress in the game will take care of itself.

Too many players of long experience in the game, who should know better, continue to play around the course with a score of 90 or more, when a small amount of time devoted regularly to practicing single shots would in a comparatively short time cut ten or more strokes off their score.

Practice a Prime Essential.

Short-sightedness, self-indulgence, lack of willingness to give up a present pleasure for a future gain, are only too common weaknesses. It requires self-control and capacity for self-denial to go off to some quiet spot with a dozen balls and a caddy and practice shots for an hour, when one might be playing the game with pleasant companions.

All players who do not practice should at once and forever get into their minds this fact: That first-rate golf cannot be attained without practice.

If one is learning, it is better to take three lessons a week and practice alone the rest of the time than to take seven lessons without practice. It is essential to learn to work by one's self. The player who is continually taking lessons depends upon being prompted and directed; he does not develop self-reliance and the power to improve his game and correct his own faults.

Mediocre Player Wonders Why.

As for the mediocre player who wonders why his game is not better now than it was several years ago, let him look about him and make a few observations. He will soon discover that the golfer playing 90 and more is the golfer who can never find time to practice—except perhaps to take a lesson now and then to get rid of a slice or a pull—whereas, the golfer who plays under 80 will spend many hours improving his shots.

Self consciousness and the awkwardness that always attends it are necessary evils in correcting a fault or developing a swing. And many bad strokes are inevitable. But progress is possible only through imperfection and with progress the player becomes able to throw off his self-consciousness, he loses his awkwardness, and his muscles learn to act without his conscious direction and in smooth and accurate coördination.

Control Better than Distance.

Practice may have either of two objects: to develop a correct swing or to improve control.

If the development of the swing is the aim, it is best to attend primarily to that and pay little attention to the control of the ball when struck. If improved control is the purpose, the same shot should be played again and again with careful attention to the causes of varying results. And, of course, improvement in control should be striven for constantly, as soon as a smooth swing has been acquired.

Control is worth infinitely more than distance. Without control the game is a game of chance. The price of control is practice.

WHAT'S WHAT IN BASS FLIES.

NOW is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their family larders and fare forth for bass with fly rods—a fortunate circumstance, since lake bass are inclined to find a cool place and loaf these hot days, and muskies are beginning to have trouble with their teeth. Reports from far and near indicate that the "dope" is right this season and that the broad, husky knights in shining green armor are now rising to the occasion—and to flies.

The first fly fishers for bass, the anglers of northern Kentucky, used large trout flies and as they were expert anglers—they brought the multiplying reel to its present perfection—it is more than likely that they tied bass flies of their own designing. If they did it is a curious fact that none of their pet patterns are now in use nor are the flies recommended by the earlier American angling writers, like Dr. Bethune and Frank Forrester, considered of much value.

Seth Green had rather positive ideas as to what was what in bass flies and said that four patterns, Coachman, Lake George, Seth Green, and Grizzly King were enough for practical purposes, and probably they were—for Seth Green. Present day anglers have "idears" of their own on the subject of bass flies, and it is one of almost endless possibilities, as there are hundreds of good bass flies and every angler has his "best bets," the unfailing merits of which he will defend to the last drop of oil in the camp lantern.

A few years ago we asked some of the most successful bass fly fishers for a list of their twelve favorite patterns and when we came to adding it all up we found that there were a few top liners in the bass fly family. The recapitulation, which we believe is worth reprinting, stacked up something like this:—

White Miller, Parmachenee Belle, 7; Colonel Fuller, Professor, 6; Lord Baltimore, 5; Yellow May, Reade, Royal Coachman, Silver Doctor, Brown Palmer, 4; Grey Palmer, Montreal, Grizzly King, Bucktail, Brown Hackle, Oliver, Scarlet Ibis, 3; Raven, Jock Scott, McGinty, Reub Wood, Seth Green, Black Gnat, Bug, Coachman, Jungle Cock, Phil Mitchell, Onondaga, Lake George, [illegible]

The figures indicate the [illegible] times mentioned. Patterns [illegible] particularly for the upper [illegible] river, probably the best [illegible] fishing bass water in the world, [illegible] as follows:

From the above the younger [illegible] might conclude that the white [illegible] the king bee for all around use [illegible] but the anglers who included [illegible] their lists did so as a special [illegible] fly—for night fishing and for [illegible] ter—although when cabbage butt[illegible] and white moths are on the [illegible] bass will take the white [illegible] gardless of the conditions of the [illegible]

Mind you, these patterns are [illegible] flies and the bug mentioned is [illegible] floating, cork bodied bug. [illegible] fly made from the natural [illegible] white and gray, hair from the [illegible] a deer and tied flat. In the water [illegible] sembles a crawfish or helgramite [illegible] when the water is anything [illegible] this is the fly we start with. [illegible] or without a small spinner [illegible] killer.

This fly was originated in [illegible] T. Cook, a St. Louis angler. [illegible] first tried by Miss Westwood [illegible] mette and for that reason [illegible] called the Westwood bug; also [illegible] as the Mississippi bug.

The tendency in bass flies is [illegible] smaller and better hooks. [illegible] years ago a 3-0 hook was [illegible] about right for bass. Now you [illegible] find them larger than 1-0, while [illegible] twos, and threes are most popular.

For the smaller streams, where [illegible] fish do not average big, a No. 4 [illegible] will turn the trick.

The old rule of using large [illegible] flies for roily water and small [illegible] ones for bright days and clear [illegible] is as good in bass fishing as [illegible] ing, but like any other trade [illegible] should not be followed too [illegible] —the average bass doesn't know [illegible] about the fine points of fly fishing [illegible] he knows what he likes and his [illegible] are as changeable as the wind.

DERF 360 POINT SPARK PLUGS

Conqueror of a Hundred Fields

No other spark plug has ever equalled the marvelous record made by the Derf. Time after time, in test after test, it has come out a proved victor.

Why? Because it is built on the best idea—the one big idea: a 360 point, circle-within-a-circle surface for sparking. Naturally there can be no miss fires—no failure to function from oil splashes, dirt or carbon. And the fat spark fires a leaner mixture, giving you 25% to 35% more mileage out of your gasoline.

All this has been proved. The Automobile Club of America and the Motor Truck Club of America proved that the Derf will save 25% gasoline; The Tower Motor Co., in an Overland Dependability run, proved that, for 7 days and 7 nights continuous run, the Derf never once missed fire. Packard Motors Efficiency test showed that Derf was the most economical as well as efficient. The N. Y. Herald-Government Fuel Economy test proved Derf the winner—not only in less fuel used, but it fired the car that won the hill climb!

What Derf Spark Plugs have done in these tests they will do in your car. You'll get the greatest satisfaction from using these plugs. Buy them today. $6.20 for four, $9.30 for six.

15,963 Miles on Owen Truck Tires

AND

Good for 30,000 More

Read of this remarkable performance of Owen Titans in heavy inter-city haulage, as told by H. K. W. Roepke of the Purple Line, in the following letter:

THE PURPLE LINE
Long Distance Motor Transportation
Main Office and Warehouse
10514 Cedar Avenue
Garfield 3330

Cleveland, O., July 11, 1919

The Owen Tire & Rubber Co.,
Bedford, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

Referring to the set of Owen Titan Tires which you placed on our 4½-ton Packard Truck on January 10th of this year, wish to say that to date these tires have covered 15,963 miles.

After examining these tires, today, our mechanic informed me that he felt satisfied that we would be able to get fully 30,000 miles more out of this set of tires before they would be worn out.

This truck travels from 130 to 175 miles six days each week and to date there is not a cut or sign of wear on the tires.

In making its regular schedule trip this truck covers from 10 to 22 miles of unimproved road daily, in fact it is the only truck we send over this unimproved road for two reasons:

First, our drivers insist that on account of the high cushion of your tires, they hold the dirt road much better and do not skid in the mud nearly as easy as a number of other tires we are using on other trucks.

Second, our drivers insist that due to the exceptional resiliency of your tires, it is much easier and more comfortable to ride the unimproved roads, than with other makes which they say "jar the daylights out of them."

If your tires do not "jar the daylights" out of the drivers it sure does away with a lot of vibration, with the result that the upkeep of the truck will be greatly reduced.

As soon as we find it necessary to replace the tires on our other trucks, we are going to equip them with Owen Tires.

Yours very truly,
THE PURPLE LINE COMPANY.
HKWR:LC (Signed) Henry K. W. Roepke,
Treas. and Genl. Mgr.

Actual photograph of Owen Tire just after completing daily run of 150 miles in Purple Line Truck over heavy, muddy roads. The mud still clings to the tires—not a cut or defect in them.

In contrast with these Owens, other tires in similar service have been cut to ribbons after a few thousand miles.

Equip your truck with these remarkable mileage Owen Tires. Consult Owen Specialists on your haulage problems for type of tire needed.

ALGONQUIN CAMP WORKS MAGIC ON 'HEAD O' DE GANG'

All Off with Bolshevism, Says Kid Harry; Self and Mother Aided.

It's "Kid Harry" talking. They used to know him as the "hard boiled egg of Blue Island," and at sixteen he still leads the gang. He came home yesterday with his widowed mother from Camp Algonquin, THE TRIBUNE summer hospital for weary tenement folks, with his views of life entirely changed.

For two weeks, while the sick mother who wouldn't leave her stifling room without him found new health and happiness in the summer haven, the boy roamed Fox River hills, ate honest country food and learned to grow.

Another mother and her family took the place vacated at Algonquin by Harry and his mother. Two hundred city refugees, newly arrived for their two weeks' vacation, got up at dawn yesterday to make the most of the daylight hours. Other hundreds are waiting patiently in Chicago for their turn, and the summer will be all too short to reach them all.

Their Treat Insured.

While the "tenderfoot company" got acquainted with the out doors folks who know how best to spend their money insured them and others like them the summer treat. Here are the new donations:

This Drink Had 'Kick,' Also Some 'Kick Back'

Detective Sergeants Barry, Dillon, and Cordy of the Desplaines street station saw a man with a "jag" emerge from the saloon of John Cannon, 617 West Madison street, yesterday. Barry, observing a sign over the bar, "Vinous, a drink with a kick in it," asked the bartender for some "Vinous."

"Will you have a kick in it," asked the bartender. "Yes," replied the sergeant.

The bartender produced a quart of whisky.

Thus the place was "pinched."

Cannon and the bartender were booked on charges of violation of the search and seizure law and five customers on charges of disorderly conduct.

U. S. Puts 17 More on Trail of Tax Dodgers

Seventeen new income tax dodger catchers were added to the squad in charge of Col. L. G. Nutt yesterday and the drive was renewed on evaders of the law. They will be dealt with severely, Col. Nutt announced. Oliver J. Sproul, former head of the air mail service in Chicago, was one of the seventeen. Mr. Sproul, who recently was recalled to Washington, had requested to be reassigned to Chicago.

All Aboard for Tampa, Florida

Ex-Senator J. E. Bruce says: "One of the principal reasons that prompted me to locate a home for myself in Bruce's Tampa Highlands was the fact that I was MORE COMFORTABLE there in July and August, 1918, than I had ever been during the same month in any one of the many summer resorts and alleged 'Keep Cool Places' that I had visited."

A "Keep-Cool" Summer Resort.

Here's "Uncle Sam's" Weather Bureau figures for 27 years at Tampa—annual average temperature of 71.7 degrees—average temperature for July and August of 81 degrees—hottest day of 98.5 degrees. Remember that Tampa's occasional "above 90" during the middle of the day, with every morning and evening COOL, and nights almost "cold" is much more "livable" than ten degrees less "up north."

PLAN POLISH "INVASION" OF U. S.

Military Envoys Here to Arrange Passage of 18,000 Troops.

Lieuts. Henryk Suchenek, Alfred Sosinski, and Stanislaw Ramecki arrived in Chicago yesterday from Novo Nikolaieffsk, Siberia, as the advance guard of the army of 18,000 Polish troops it is planned to move through the United States this fall.

In addition, there are more than 1,200 invalids to be taken back to the Paderewski government. Two of the officers who arrived today are doctors, who will advise the Polish consul in New York as to medical supplies needed for caring for its soldiers on their 12,000 mile trip.

The army was made up of prisoners captured by the czar's troops previous to Russia's withdrawal from the war. For the last five months they have been fighting the bolsheviki and Germans along the Volga river. The first unit formed after the Russian revolution was the Kosciuszko regiment, which won much praise during the Samar engagement, where it lost more than 1,000 troops.

Members of the mission will speak at the Carter Harrison high school this afternoon and at the Polish Roman Catholic Union auditorium, 986 Milwaukee avenue, in the evening.

OUTLAWS ESCAPE AFTER REVOLVER FIGHT WITH COP

J. D. Clark, president of the Perfection Bedding company and Patrolman Matt Frolich fired a dozen shots in a running battle yesterday in a futile attempt to capture armed men who attempted to hold up the bedding company for the $2,000 pay roll.

The pay roll of the company had just been brought in and was being guarded by Frolich when J. D. Cameron, cashier for the company, saw two armed youths enter and gave an alarm. As Frolich drew his revolver the outlaws ran out, jumped into a waiting automobile, and fled. One was believed to be hit.

Beginning tomorrow morning meetings will be held in Wicker Park hall, 2040 West North avenue.

The Walther league is specifically interested in maintaining hospices in the various cities of the nation so Lutherans traveling may keep in touch with members of their faith. The league also maintains hospitals. Headquarters of the convention are at the Hotel Sherman.

CHARGE AGAINST J. S. WILLIAMS TAKES NEW TURN

Controller Is Accused of Profiting in Federal Property Deal.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—An entirely new set of sensational charges was sprung today out of the fight on the reappointment of John Skelton Williams as controller of the currency.

Representative McFadden of Pennsylvania, appearing before the house rules committee, charged that Williams assisted his brother-in-law, Lewis C. Williams of Richmond, Va., in the sale of an office building site in the capital to the government, and that the controller shared in the commission for the sale.

McFadden declared if the rules committee did not provide for an investigation he would move the impeachment of the controller from the floor of the house.

Williams Demands Hearing.

Controller Williams immediately categorically denied McFadden's charges, declaring his brother-in-law acted as an attorney for property owners, and that the controller not only had no concern in the transaction, but received no part of any commission. The controller also called on the chairman of the senate banking committee holding hearings on his renomination to summon McFadden for Monday morning to give testimony and be confronted by the controller.

In his statement Mr. Williams said he had been urging Mr. McFadden, "by direct letters to him, made as stinging as possible, to push the investigation into my conduct at which he has been hinting since last February."

Alleges Revenge as Cause.

The statement continued: "I do not know what legal fees or compensation L. C. Williams and Mullen may have received for their services. Whatever they may have charged was for their professional services, in which I had no participation whatsoever. That is all the foundation I can imagine for Mr. McFadden's insinuations, which I denounce again as absolutely false and which have all the appearance of being dictated by intense malice.

"A Pennsylvania bank of which Mr. McFadden is president, has come under my official notice in an unpleasant way and I have expressed, both officially and publicly, the opinion that Mr. McFadden is responsible for whatever unfortunate conditions might there exist."

Brother-in-Law In Denial.

Richmond, Va., July 19.—Lewis C. Williams, brother-in-law of Controller Williams, today denounced the charges of Representative McFadden of Pennsylvania, against the controller as untrue. He said the sum involved was $1,000,000, instead of $4,200,000 as stated by Mr. McFadden, and that the controller was in no way concerned in the transaction.

EX-SOLDIER PUTS PARIS CRUELTIES UP TO PERSHING

Blames General for the Acts of Military Police.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—Gen. Pershing and Brig. Gen. Hart, officer in charge of the American military administration in Paris, should be brought to trial for the alleged brutal treatment of American soldiers in France by the military police, James W. Beckman, New York, former sergeant major, today charged in a letter to Representative Dallinger, Massachusetts.

"Gen. Pershing should be brought to trial for gross incompetence and negligence that amounts to criminality," Beckman wrote, "because the crimes of the Paris military police were committed right under his nose, and there is no excuse or defense which he can make for not having known of them and for not having them stopped, and because similar atrocities were the rule at several other places in France."

Beckman urged that Brig. Gen. Hart, who he says was President Wilson's former aid, be brought to trial on the charge of manslaughter, as he is responsible for the crimes which were committed over a period of a year or more under his command.

Three Hurt in Head-On Trolley Car Collision

Three persons were hurt and a large number badly shaken up last night when a Roosevelt road car left the tracks at Fifty-fourth avenue and crashed head-on into another car.

Edward Klima, 2837 South Central Park avenue, the motorman of the west bound car, and M. J. Donahue, a policeman from the Fillmore street station, were riding on the front end of the car when the accident occurred. Klima's leg was badly bruised and Donahue suffered a fractured rib and a smashed finger. Joseph Lytak of 1234 Elmwood avenue, Oak Park, a passenger, was badly bruised. No one on the other car was hurt.

CADETS GET TWO DAYS' REST AT CAMP ROOSEVELT

Muskegon, Mich., July 19.—[Special.]—The end of the first training period brought a two days' rest to Camp Roosevelt cadets, and nearly every boy was given leave to visit Muskegon or other points today. Many will visit the 300 Chicago Boy Scouts at Crystal lake. Parents and relatives of other Chicago boys are at nearby resorts.

Today's was the hottest weather since the camp opened.

Plans are made for welcoming the contingent of cadets from Chicago tomorrow evening. They will be taken to camp in busses, and mess will follow.

Dr. John Dill Robertson of Chicago has reported, after analysis of the well water here, that it is pure. As a result, a second well will be started.

The Camp Roosevelt News, the official weekly camp newspaper, made its first appearance today. It is edited by camp officials.

BRITTEN IGNORES GEN. MARCH FOR HIGH ARMY POST

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—President Wilson's recommendation for the appointment of Generals Pershing and March as full generals during their lives by congressional action started various counter moves today.

Representative Britten, Chicago, introduced a bill authorizing the president to appoint Gen. Pershing a permanent general for life, but ignoring Gen. March.

Representative Kahn, chairman of the military affairs committee of the house, said he would introduce a bill restoring the rank of full general, allowing the president to make such appointments as he chooses, subject to confirmation by the senate.

561 AMERICAN TARS, 154 SHIPS TOLL OF U-BOATS

Marine Insurance Bureau Gives Figures on Losses.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—One hundred and fifty-four American ships and 561 American seamen's lives were sacrificed to the German unrestricted U-boat warfare, according to a statement issued today by the war risk bureau.

Hitherto all information concerning the loss of lives and ships was a carefully guarded state secret, but with the closing of the marine and seamen's division of the war risk bureau, Secretary of the Treasury Glass allows for the first time a "close-up" glimpse of one of the most dramatic phases of the war.

Pay Out Big Sums.

In the four years and four months between the establishment of the bureau and Jan. 4, 1919, when rates were withdrawn, insurance aggregating net $2,067,303,865 was written or applied for on cargoes, freights, and bottoms, the net premiums totaling $46,751,382, with losses and operating expenses of $30,181,567. These losses covered the payment for 154 ships.

In the seamen's section policies aggregated $321,946,263, with net premiums of $842,172. The losses and expenses of this section were $367,096. This covered payment for 561 lives.

The marine and seamen's division was the beginning of all the enormous creation which later became and is now the bureau of war risk insurance. It began in one sub-basement of the treasury building with a staff of five people. When the United States had really swung into the war the bureau was occupying eighteen widely scattered buildings and had a staff of something like 17,000 employés.

Many Small Ships Lost.

Many of the American ships sunk by submarines were small fishing craft. Most of them were unarmed trade ships. A few were armed, but none of them sufficiently for adequate defense.

In the matter of losses it is interesting to note the principal losers among the allies and neutrals. Up to the signing of the armistice the losses of all nations were:

	Ships.	Tonnage.
France	697	889,358
Norway	793	1,180,316
Italy	621	846,388
Sweden	185	291,276
Russia	128	183,083
Greece	168	45,516
Belgium	60	85,758
Denmark	241	243,707
Japan	29	120,176
Holland	184	211,969
America	154	401,593

Only one of these boats, a ship belonging to Holland, was sunk by aircraft.

Many Tales of Sea.

When the bureau went out of business many thrilling tales were left in the archives. Some of the extracts resemble tales of pirate craft of the Spanish main or stories of brigands and buccaneers done by the master pen of Robert Louis Stevenson. Following are a few excerpts picked at random from various reports of masters whose boats were sent to the bottom by the enemy's U-boats:

"We then made sails of bed sheets and masts of oars and sailed in an easterly direction on Sept. 8. We then continued sailing and rowing up to Sept. 12, when we sighted Ushant at 8 p. m. We only reached this island on Sept. 13 at 7 a. m., having encountered meanwhile no vessel and having experienced hard things and suffering from cold and want of sleep, wet all the time.

"A German submarine, about seven miles to the north, started shelling the vessel; later members of the crew of this German submarine boarded the vessel with two bombs in their possession, and it is presumed that the vessel was blown up.

"The only food they (the rescued men) had with them consisted of about five pounds of crackers and two buckets of water.

"We were almost naked, as we had no time to get hold of our clothing."

Court Reporters Give Divorce Cost a Boost

Mister Attorney, here's a little tip.

Along with the soaring number of divorces comes an increase in the price of divorce.

Lucile, Lenora, Ruth, and Viola, you know 'em?

They're court reporters of famous speed and accuracy, and they're going to raise the price of default certificates of evidence next court term. Heretofore they have done them for $3 and $4. When courts open up again the price will be $5—with an additional tax of 50 cents a page after the first six pages.

WHO WANTS TO HELP THIS MAN CHANGE HIS LUCK?

Editor of The Tribune: One year and a half ago I was a prosperous business man, in the advertising business, to be exact. I had a happy, substantial home, a family of wife and three children. My business began to fail, it slipped away from me. My oldest boy, aged 7, died of influenza. My little girl, aged 3, suffered convulsions as a result of eating a green apple. These convulsions terminated finally in a hemorrhage of the brain and her mind became a blank.

All this time I was seeking a real job but taking anything to keep things going. We sold our furniture, gave up our apartment, took our little boy who was still left to us, and secured a room at a small family hotel. Finally, about two months ago, we had to put the little girl in an institution. I couldn't land a job that was real, I made shift as best I could.

I got in arrears at this family hotel, have been out of any kind of a position two weeks, and last night we were put out of our room. We slept out, the three of us, wife, little boy, and I. I had a dollar to my name this morning. The wife and little boy are dining at a Weeghman restaurant while I'm in here [at the Congress] writing this letter.

There's a rift in the clouds, however—our little girl is improving. We hear she's beginning to act like a normal child again. I want her with me. To do that I must secure a position assuring me at least a decent return with a future prospect. I have no funds to finance myself.

I am 34 years of age, college man, five years at head of my own business, here in Chicago. Had altogether about ten years' experience, selling. I know advertising, merchandising, and sales promotion.

Can furnish excellent references as to character and ability.

If you use my letter I will see it and then will communicate with you and let you know where I am.

The family have just finished dining, so I've got to go and cheer them up. That's all. X. Y. Z.

Chicago Soldier Wins "Most Beautiful Bride"

Private Maurice Newman Landis, with the 124th field artillery in France, often wrote to his friends in Chicago and former Yale classmates that "America was the land of beautiful girls."

Then he met Mlle. Paula Desmidt of Neuilly Sur Seine. They were married last February and arrived in America last week on the Imperator.

At the home of the bridegroom, 5000 Drexel boulevard, "Dad" greeted both with a kiss and called the bride the "Flower of France." Welfare workers say she is the most beautiful of the war brides.

Firemen Chop Piling to Release Boy's Foot

Hugo Gaartz, 14 years old, of 4539 Hazel avenue, was walking along the lake at Grace street last night when he slipped, his foot becoming wedged in the piling. His cries for help were heard by a Lincoln park policeman. The latter was unable to rescue the boy and called the fire department. Firemen had to chop away part of the piling before they could release the boy.

WAR MADNESS NOW TALKED OF AS NEW DEFENSE

Rumor That It May Be Adopted to Save Miss Lesser's Slayer.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 19.—[Special.]—"War madness," it was revealed here today, may be the defense of Harry S. New Jr., alleged slayer of beautiful Freda Lesser and defendant in the limousine tragedy of lonely Topanga canyon July 4-5.

The novel defense riveted the attention here today of the district attorney's office when it heard the rumor that New's counsel, seemingly supplied with abundant funds, was to spring a tactical surprise when the trial opens.

New has worn the uniform and criminologists avidly are comparing his alleged deed with that of another soldier, Herman Knaesche of Ukiah, Cal., who recently shot to death his war bride, then bemoaning killing "the thing he loved."

See Psychic Groove.

The two cases furnish the neurologists with an easy parellel along the groove of "stress of war" on minds "not naturally strong." The effects of war's unrestraints upon such minds as New's will be dwelt upon heavily, according to today's report, and an effort made to convert them into a strong defense.

However, New's military service was restricted to adventures along the Mexican border for a rather brief period, and for this reason the district attorney's office is professing not to be worried by any pleas for New which may be based upon the theory of a mind unsettled by war.

Think Confession Adequate.

The prosecution today in reviewing its preparations to prosecute the youth who claims to be son of a United States senator laid its greatest store by the defendant's confession. This is the chief instrument by which the state expects to send him to the gallows.

JORDAN

Prophetic of Imitation

Irresistible is the lure of exquisite lines and rich colors, caught and embodied in this newest motor car—the Jordan Silhouette.

Note the new French angle at the dash,—adding a touch that is at once different and prophetic of imitation.

Note the cocky tilt to the front seat cowl—the perfectly flat top-edge—the fenders distinctively different.

In the deep tonneau, there is a cordovan leather boot and saddle bag—a pleasant surprise for everyone who has grown tired of new fashioned things and craves the old.

Deep seat cushions rest almost on the floor—upholstery in soft hand-buffed leather.

The Silhouette is built for either four passengers or seven. And you have your choice between Burgundy Old Wine and Brewster Green for the finish—either is good.

Early Start for Home Delights Chicago Troops

Newport News, Va., July 19.—[Special.]—Chicagoans in the 803d Pioneer infantry (colored) went wild today with glee when informed that they would leave the army base at Norfolk on the morning of July 22 for Camp Grant and home.

The men came in last night on the transport Philippines, fourteen days out from Brest. They were commanded by Lieut. Adler, regular army, and had seen hard labor at the front, and behind the lines in France.

NOW COME MOTHS TO PLAGUE FOLK ALONG BEACHES

The shores are all aflutter. And the flitting isn't that of beach beaux and belles either. It's that of invading insects.

The invasion started Friday night. Both the number and genealogy of the mothlike fliers will appear presently expressed in long Latin terms. What the keepers of street lights, those fond of beach bathing and the tidy housewives along the beaches, want to know is how to discourage them.

Each lamp last night furnished a million illustrations of that moth and the flame yarn.

The insects appeared first along the beaches, winging their way to every beam of light and pounding the window panes of homes along the shore.

The new invader is small, has an aileron of a new, sharp type, a rudder of length, but his motor is feeble. Early bathers on Clarendon, Argyle, and Wilson shores were compelled to brush off dead moths from the lake's surface before essaying the morning dip.

Jailed for Threatening Wife, Commits Suicide

Ermil Veszlai, 9212 Drexel avenue, hanged himself with the belt of his trousers in the Burnside jail yesterday. He had been arrested shortly before noon by Policemen Sheffner and O'Rein after he had threatened to take the life of his wife, Bessie. The Veszlais were separated a year ago because Ermil is said to have beaten his wife repeatedly.

PRIVATE SLEUTHS PROTEST AGAINST NEW ORDINANCE

Representatives of private detective agencies met in the Hotel La Salle yesterday to protest against an ordinance which is to come before the city council tomorrow.

This ordinance, recommended by the license committee, provides that each agency shall pay $500 annually for a license, and a fee of $25 for each detective. It also provided that each detective must have a card containing his picture and description, à la passport, a duplicate of the card to be kept on file by the city. It gives the chief of police power to go into any agency office and find out what case each man is working on.

The private detectives are not complaining of the license and the fees, they say, but against the card system and the power conferred on the chief. To authorize him to find out what cases are being handled by the private agencies, they say, would take away all or most of their confidential cases.

Representatives were appointed to confer with the license committee and ask the aldermen to reconsider these measures.

Naval Deserter Taken Trying to Pass Check

Charles Werly, a deserter from the Great Lakes Naval Training station, was arrested in Evanston yesterday. He was accused of trying to pass a worthless check in Rosenberg's department store. He will be turned over to the naval authorties tomorrow.

O-Cedar Polish

YOUR car can be made to look the part. You can give it the gloss and glitter it had when you were so proud of it.

To do this is simple and easy. And with but little work and no muss or bother.

Simply use O-Cedar Polish. Use it the O-Cedar Polish Way.

Use O-Cedar Polish the O-Cedar Polish Way

First, remove mud, dust, etc., from your car by washing with water in the usual way.

If you have used oils, or wax, it is best to use Ivory Soap to remove them.

Pour about 4 ounces of O-Cedar in a pan and add a quart of warm water. Saturate a clean cloth in this and go over the body of the car. Do not attempt to clean too much at a time—take one side of the body or a fender first. Follow by rubbing with a dry cloth. But little rubbing is required to produce a hard, dry, lasting lustre.

OATS RISE ON ACTIVE TRADING; CLOSE AT HIGH

Corn Opens Weak, but Good Class of Buying Develops.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Active trading in oats, with the buying based on unfavorable thrashing returns over a large section of the country, led to an upward movement and prices closed the highest of the day, with gains of 2⅛c. Corn sympathized to a moderate extent with gains of ⅞@1⅜c. Evening up for the week was largely responsible for the late strength. Rye prices were 1½@3c higher and barley ¼c. Provisions and hogs were higher, with pork up 30c, lard 2½@5c, and short ribs unchanged to 15c higher.

Southwestern corn markets were ¼@1⅝c higher and oats 1⅝@2⅜c higher. Minneapolis closed 2¼@2½c higher on oats, 3¾@4⅛c up on rye and 1⅛@2c higher on barley. Winnipeg was closed for the Victory parade.

Closing prices compared with a week ago showed an irregular movement during the week, corn losing 3⅛@4¼c and rye 3@4c, while oats gained 1⅜@2c and barley 1⅜c. Provisions averaged lower, pork losing 60c@$1.25, while lard was $1.35@1.65 and short ribs 50@15c lower.

Corn in Sharp Rally.

An accumulation of overnight selling orders, combined with the excellent weather and crop reports and the bad economic conditions resulted in a drop of 2½@2¾c in corn at the start. Liquidation, however, quickly ran its course, and a good class of buying developed, with cash houses taking September against domestic shipping sales. This, with the strength in oats, gave the confidence of the local bears a shock and they covered freely. Prices rallied 4@4¾c and closed within ¼@⅝c of the top, with July at $1.90, September at $1.90⅞, and December at $1.61½.

There was some buying induced by a few scattered dry weather reports from central Illinois, and the rally of 18 points in sterling exchange from the recent low point caused considerable comment in view of the efforts being made to stabilize the market. Many shorts evened up for over Sunday, even though the weekly forecast was for occasional rains and normal temperatures in the region of the great lakes. Generally fair weather was predicted for the west and northwest.

Persistent rains in Argentine, which are reducing the quantity of corn in fit condition for export led Broomhall to believe that if prices in America declined somewhat that Europe might try this country for grain. The trade, however, claim there is very little that could be spared. The domestic demand showed considerable improvement, with sales of 55,000 bu. and sample values were stronger.

Oats Near Season's High.

A big bull market developed in oats after a break of about 1c at the start. Houses with eastern and northwest connections became heavy and persistent buyers, which absorbed the selling by the local element on the better weather conditions in the American and Canadian northwest. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way up, and the local bear element was demoralized. At the top prices were up 2⅛@3⅛c from the bottom, with a strong close, July being 80⅛c, September 80⅞c, and December 82⅝c.

There was some buying of September by houses with seaboard connections that was regarded as against shipping sales, but no quantities were given. Exporters at New York wired that foreign bids were out of line. Crop reports from the northwest were decidedly bullish, and thrashing returns from the more southern sections were disappointing. St. Louis had its first car from Missouri, and it weighed 28½ lbs per bu, confirming claims that the grain would be very light.

The trade believes that no amount of rain can now help the situation, and the best posted people predict that the next government report will show a heavy reduction from the 1,403,000,000 bu estimated July 1. Elevator interests and shippers absorbed the offerings in the sample market at 1½@2½c advance. Country offerings of new grain were small, but consignments of old weer liberal.

Feed Barley in Demand.

Sensationally bullish news from the Pacific coast is having some effect on barley. Sales are being made at interior points in California at $1.52½ per bu, and the export demand there has been so keen that a good part of the surplus already has been disposed of. Shipment is being made via the gulf, with ocean rates $1.00 per 100 lbs. While no change was shown in the local spot market, feed grades were in good demand. Nothing was said regarding export business. Sales were at $1.19@1.28. Receipts, 27 cars.

Bad crop reports on rye from the northwest, combined with the strength in other grains, led to fair buying and an advance of 1¼@3c. Spot sold fairly at $1.60½@1.61 for No. 2. Receipts, 33 cars.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 6@8c lower; July, $5.95; September, $5.88; October, $5.72. Winnipeg, holiday.

Timothy seed firm. Country lots, $9.00@12.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo 2½c lower; October, $5.80 per bu of 45 lbs. Cloverseed, strong. Country lots, $30.00@45.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo $1.00 higher, with prices the best ever known. October, $30.00 per bu of 60 lbs.

Liquidation in Provisions.

Selling of provisions was on early, there being considerable liquidation by speculators, and packers were sellers of all futures of lard. Hogs were higher and with a rally in grains there was a good advance and the close around the best prices with early losses more than regained. Labor conditions at the stockyards are an unsettling factor. Cash trade was fair with some interests and slow with others. Shipments of cured and fresh meats and lard for the week were 50,327,000 lbs, a loss of 49,000,000 lbs from the previous week and of 5,000,000 lbs from last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The trade is mostly bullish on oats on the crop damage and buying and bearish on corn. N. B. Updike of Omaha, who was here yesterday, said that oats would sell at 3c a lb, which is equal to 96c a bu. John Barrett, who left Chicago for Omaha Friday night, wired bullish reports on oats from there yesterday. Thrashings from Illinois, Indiana, and parts of Iowa are disappointing. Indiana is reporting 20 bu where 30 or better were expected. All the big houses were buyers of oats for eastern, with some attributed to foreign account. Speculation is going into oats to a greater extent and leaving corn. An Omaha grain man wired that oats were fair to very poor and light in weight.

It was a poor day for the corn traders, as they followed the liquidating sales early, with a break of 2⅜c to nearly 4c. The selling spent its force soon after the start and prices advanced 4½@4¾c, with the close ¼@⅜c from the top. The country is not selling corn, and some of the shipping houses reported a better demand from the east.

It was said that exporters were after oats, but there was no report of business.

Crop reports on corn are generally favorable, but a message from Springfield, Ill., said complaint was more general on corn, which is beginning to tassel three and one-half to four feet higher and rain was badly needed.

Liverpool says supplies of native oats are exhausted. Foreign oats are being put forward in fair quantities. Trade with America has been restricted owing to the unfavorable exchange rates and the marked strength in the United States. However, should prices decline moderately from their present level, American oats could be purchased and shipped within the minimum limit.

"Hopes of importing countries have been centered in the Argentine, where there appears to be a large surplus," says Broomhall. His agent there reports prospects of deterioration of the new crop, owing to excessive rainfall and flood causing material damage in many sections. This, he fears, will disconcert European buyers who have relied on that country for their supplies. It might also bring the Argentine market more on a parity with the United States and he intimates that it would not be surprising to see some foreign inquiries in America if corn should react somewhat.

An import duty on corn is proposed in a bill introduced in congress yesterday making a rate of 15c per bu on corn brought into the United States, and 4c per pound on cornmeal.

Grain movement is increasing. Chicago had 5,606,000 bu for the week, an increase of 1,000,000 bu over the previous week, but a decrease of 1,443,000 bu from last year. Compared with the five year average, there is an increase of 262,000 bu. The big increase for the week and last year was in wheat. Corn and oat receipts decreased, the former being 1,493,000 bu and the latter 810,000 bu under last year's. Provision receipts were 29,554,000 lbs, a decrease of 5,171,000 lbs from the previous week and 3,418,000 lbs from last year. Shipments of all provisions were 26,877 tons, a decrease of 25,230 tons for the week and of 6,000 tons from last year.

The executive committee of the new millers export association formed here this week with a capital of $1,000,000 to handle the export business in flour for the millers is: B. A. Eckhart, Chicago; A. C. Loring and J. F. Bell, Minneapolis; Frank Kell, Wichita Falls, Texas; Charles Roose, Wellington, Kan.; E. W. Marr, Columbus, Ohio, and George Milnor, Alton, Ill.

Hary A. Zweig, for many years with the J. Rosenbaum Grain company, has gone into business for himself with an office at 305 South La Salle street. He will handle cash grain only.

A comprehensive table giving the basic prices for all kinds of wheat in the leading markets of the country has been issued by the J. Rosenbaum Grain company. It includes the recent advanced basis at the gulf ports.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Increased offerings, with prospects for over 500 cars for Monday, and a letup in the local milling demand made an easier market for cash wheat. Elevator interests were the best buyers, mills getting filled up, and reds sold mainly at the basic figures of ½c over, with very choice at 1c over. Hard winters were mostly ½@1c over the basic.

Dark hard winter at Kansas City moved up 5@8c, while the regular hard was unchanged to 4c higher, the latter on samples runnnig to dark.

Elevator interests and shippers were good buyers of corn, and while prices were unchanged early there was an advance of 1½c later with the finish at the top. Receipts, 81 cars. St. Louis was 1@3c higher, Kansas City unchanged to 3c lower, Peoria unchanged to 1½c lower, and Milwaukee 1@2c higher.

While receipts of oats were liberal, 187 cars, demand was active, and elevator interests cleaned up the market at 1c over September for No. 2 white and September to ½c over for No. 3 white. New No. 3 white to arrive brought 1c under September. Sales showed 1½@2½c advance over Friday. St. Louis was 2@3c up, Kansas City, ½c; Peoria, 1@2c, and Milwaukee, 2c for the day. The labor situation was unimproved in Packingtown and considerable talk of spread of unrest among the men was heard. Most of the packers were out of the hog market, while the few buyers purchased conservatively. The striking men and the entire union will have a meeting this afternoon to decide what action will be taken. Packers are awaiting developments, figuring that with the calling out of additional men slaughtering may be suspended.

Hog trade ruled very uneven. After starting on a rather slow basis, fair action developed; purchase of 3,000 hogs by shippers was the feature. Outside buyers took nearly as many as the combined purchases of local packers. General selling was steady to 10c higher, but some packing grades ruled weak. The top at $22.50 was 10c higher than Thursday, while the average price at $20.85 was 15c lower, due to large proportion of common quality hogs. Armour put up a drove of 600 hogs at a cost of $19.94, being 23c below previous day.

Spread in hog values was widest since October, there being a range of $1.65 between top and average. The weight of hogs for the week, estimated at 240 pounds, was heaviest since September, 1 pound heavier than previous week, 4 pounds lighter than a year ago, but 9 pounds heavier than the average two years ago. Only 3,000 hogs arrived at Chicago closing day of the week, while the eleven points received but 27,000, against 52,000 previous Saturday, 42,000 a year ago, and 40,000 two years ago.

Closing Cattle Trade Dull.

There was nothing doing in the cattle market. Saturday traders were uncertain as to the outlook for next week, the labor situation being a big factor. To safeguard against a congestion, some wires were sent out stopping shipments. But a liberal supply of western range cattle is expected tomorrow which will help swell receipts. Average price of good beef cattle for the week at $16.00 was 90c higher than previous week, the larger proportion of choice to prime grades bringing up the price. However, the average was 20c below a year ago.

All of the 9,000 sheep received Saturday were billed direct to killers from other markets. Average price of lambs for the week at $17.75 was 65c higher than previous week, 50c lower than a year ago, but $7.65 higher than eight year average for the corresponding week. Aged sheep averaged $9.80, or 75c higher than the previous week, $3.60 lower than a year ago, and $3.15 higher than eight year average for the same week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 22,917 cattle, 36,357 hogs, and 14,223 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 65,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep.

CHICAGO'S FIGHT FOR STEEL BASE REACHES CRISIS

File Application for Complaint with Federal Body.

The fight of Chicago against Pitts- rgh for discrimination in the price steel has approached a crisis. John Miller, counsel for the Western Asciation of Rolled Steel Consumers, ich is the organization making the mpaign for a Chicago base on rolled eel, has filed an application for a mplaint with the federal trade comission, directed against the United ates Stee: corporation, the Inland eel company, the Interstate Steel mpany, and the Steel and Tube Comny of America, asking that the eight differential of $5.40 per ton on lled steel given Pittsburgh over Chigo, be abolished.

The controversy grows out of the fact at, oy arrangement of the steel mills, rolled steel in the country is "sold the so-called "Pittsburgh Base," ich means that no matter where the el is produced, the freight from Pittsrgh to the point of destination is added to the price.

Must Pay Freight from Pittsburgh.

In the case of Chicago manufacturers rolled steel products, although they y buy their steel from South Chicago Gary, they must pay, not only the il price, but in addition, the freight om Pittsburgh to Chicago, which ounts to $5.40.

In the case of other western communi- , the case is practically the same, although they buy at Chicago or ry, they must pay the freight, not m the mills to their factories, but m Pittsburgh to their factories, ich in most cases means the freight m the mills plus the freight from ttsburgh to Chicago.

Differential Goes to Mills.

This differential goes to the mills, and r. Miller's application in effect charges at this is a conspiracy in restraint of de; that it favors the east as against west, and that it is therefore in lation of the Sherman act, the Clayn act, and the federal trade commisn act. The application has been sent Washington, and will reach the comission tomorrow.

MARKET TAKES A DAY OFF TO GET ITS BREATH

New York, July 19.—Business on the stock exchange and allied institutions was suspended today to enable members to catch up with the mass of work resulting from the week's extraordinary activity. If the stock market keeps up at its present pace it is expected that the exchange will be closed on other Saturdays from time to time during the remainder of the summer.

Every stock exchange house had its clerks hard at work straightening out accounts and bringing them down to date. In some of the large commission houses three shifts of eight hours each have been employed for several months.

Sleep at Offices.

Some houses are reported to have installed sleeping accommodations in order to enable their help to sleep in the office. With dealings running well over a million shares a day, many stock exchange firms have handled as much as 150,000 to 200,000 shares a day.

Wall street now has experienced some five months of unparalleled activity, almost every full session of the exchange averagig at least one million shares. In recent weeks the average has been nearly 2,000,000 shares. Dealings in the outside market, the "Curb," have run as high as a million and a half shares in a single day.

These enormous transactions have taxed the machinery of the exchange to its utmost. They also have exhausted the energy of the thousands of men and women who gain their livelihood in the financial district.

Eclipses War Markets.

Since early in February the stock market has been going full blast. The boom in industrial securities has equaled and at times eclipsed anything that was seen during the great war markets of 1915 and 1916, when the war brides were soaring. The war brides of those days, now peace stocks, have gone in many instances higher than the levels reached during the war boom.

OILS AND MINING

The Superior and Boston Copper company directors have levied an assessment of $1 per share on the outstanding stock, which will be paid on Aug. 8.

The board of trustees of the Mother Lode Copper Mines company are arranging a special stockholders' meeting in Seattle, Wash., for the purpose of authorizing the dissolution of the company and the distribution of its corporate assets, including 1,225,000 shares of stock of the North Lode Coalition Mines company.

The directors of the Paragon Refining company have voted to issue $1,000,000 new common stock to shareholders of record July 16. The proceeds are to be used to reimburse the company for capital expenditures in expanding the capacity of its Toledo, O., refinery from 3,500 to 10,000 brls a day. The company recently increased its capital from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000.

The Phillips Petroleum company will soon offer to its stockholders, both common and preferred, 63,984 shares of its unissued stock, and subsequently will call for redemption its $5,000,000 7 per cent preferred stock at 105, first giving the shareholders the right to convert into common on a basis of two shares of common for each share of preferred. The company will then have outstanding one class of stock, with no bonds or notes, and over $4,000,000 in cash.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company has adopted plans for expanding its producing and transportation operations in the Texas fields.

The Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation has been granted a permit to do business in Texas. The new company has taken over extensive oil lease holdings of the Sinclair Gulf Oil company and will proceed to their development.

The Constantin Refining company's refinery at Devol will be increased from 5,000 to 8,000 brls a day capacity. The company owns a 10,000 brl refinery at Tulsa. It plans to extend its pipe line and gathering system to the Burkburnett field.

NEW OFFERINGS

A new issue of $30,000,000 5½ per cent ten year Swiss bonds has been bought by a syndicate headed by Lee, Higginson & Co. and will soon be offered to the public. The total Swiss general debt in 1918 was about $285,000,000, or about $75 per capita, considerably lower than that of any other European country with the possible exception of Denmark. The Swiss loans have fluctuated very little, and the interest rate has been lower than that of most European countries. In 1915 a syndicate headed by Lee, Higginson & Co. sold $15,000,000 5 per cent gold serial notes, issued by Switzerland, of which $10,000,000 have matured and were promptly paid. It is expected that the proceeds from the issue of $30,000,000 soon to be offered will be devoted to the purchase of commodities produced in the United States.

The syndicate which has purchased $15,000,000 6 per cent refunding and improvement series A bonds of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railroad is headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., the National City company, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and the First National bank of New York.

Stock of the Pabst Brewing company with a par value of $2,889,900, owned by enemy aliens, will be sold at auction by the alien property custodian July 29 at the office of the company in Milwaukee. The property was owned by Henry Best and Mrs. Clara S. Schlubeck, divorced wife of Jacob Heil. Both are now in Germany.

The Canadian Northern Railway company has sold an issue of $10,000,000 notes to William A. Read & Co. of New York.

CURTAILMENT IN LOANS SHOWN IN BANK FIGURES

Bills Bought in the Open Market Decrease $2,636,214.

Figures of the federal reserve bank of Chicago reflect a considerable curtailment in loans to member institutions. Borrowings of member banks on government collateral were smaller by $7,748,805. Bills bought in the open market decreased $2,636,214, and loans to member banks on security other than government obligations decreased $3,093,478. The total borrowings of member banks were lower by about $10,600,000.

Other federal reserve banks borrowed from the local institution to the extent of $2,970,000. The government increased its deposits with the local bank $15,906,651, making the total $44,025,837, the largest publicly reported.

U. S. Gold Stocks Heavy.

The amount of gold in the United States continues to rule high, regardless of exports. The stock of gold on July 1 is reported by the treasury to have been $3,095,077,467, an increase of $14,500,000 since Jan. 1. This is the highest point of the year with Great Britain, considering further exports of the metal to this country.

New York Bank Statement.

The New York associated banks' statement showing a decrease of $78,708,000 in loans afforded some reason for the higher interest rates that obtained in the call loan market early in the week. However, there was an increase of over $50,000,000 in demand deposits, while the aggregate cash showed but a small change. The increased reserve requirements through the gain in deposits caused a decrease of $6,881,060 in the excess reserve, leaving that item at $26,207,210. The figure is rather small, based on reserve requirements, but the money market has become accustomed not only to a heavily fluctuating but also a small surplus.

The treasury department withdrew $78,245,000, a fact which, while it does not figure in the cash reserve, reduced the loaning power of the banks by the amount named. Within two weeks the treasury has drawn from its balance $108,592,000. The figures follow:

RAINS RAISE COTTON PRICES

New York, July 19.—Heavy rains in the south, particularly in the eastern section of the cotton belt, coupled with buying attributed to Japan, and bullish trade reports from the large distributing centers, combined with an improvement in the corn exchange, advanced cotton prices sharply early in the day. This called out profit taking and recessions, but closing trades were at gains of 28c to 30c on the active trading futures. France has removed the import embargo on many goods, including textiles of all kinds. Trade reports show an advance of from 35c to 45c on 8 ounce tickings for the week. Prices follow:

Railroads Depend on Congress.

Many investors have asked this department recently if the railroad stocks are not "due for a rise." If a long period of depression makes a rise "due," they are. Whether they will get their dues is another question and only congress can answer it.

Since the government took charge of the roads more than a year and a half ago there has been a steady increase of gross earnings as compared with former years, due to a great advance in rates and to an increase of traffic. But no matter how large the gains in receipts, operating expenses have grown faster and there has been a constant decline in net. Each month for nearly a year past the railway administration has announced that operating costs had reached their maximum and next month would show an improvement, but when "next month" came it told a different story.

The reports for May, recently issued, show that a third of the roads did not even earn their operating expenses. Gross earnings of the "first class" roads increased nearly 10 per cent as compared with May, 1918, but net decreased 45 per cent.

While the lines are operated by the government, the taxpayers must make good the enormous deficits. The present plan is to return them to the companies at the end of this year. If they were to be returned in their present condition at least two-thirds of them might as well be handed to receivers directly as to be returned to the companies first. Various plans for rehabilitating them have been offered. The future of their stocks depends almost wholly on what is done along this line.

Otis Steel.

E. C. D.—The Otis Steel company and the Cleveland Furnace company are to be consolidated in a new corporation having $4,850,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, 411,668 shares of no par common and no funded debt. Average net earnings of the two companies for the last three years are said to have been $4,354,837 after war taxes. This will figure out at $9.75 a share on the new common stock. Neither of the constituent companies has made public much information in the past.

Westinghouse.

A. G., Champaign, Ill.—In the year ended March 31 last the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company earned 20 per cent on its $74,812,650 of combined preferred and common stock. Both issues share equally after 7 per cent is paid on common. Gross earnings showed a large increase, but heavy war taxes left net little changed from the preceding year. Only a small amount of preferred stock is outstanding and it is in a strong position. The common depends on continued good earnings.

Brief Answers.

M. L., Joliet, Ill.—The Havana Tobacco company controls several operating companies and is itself controlled by the American Cigar company. It has reported a deficit nearly every year for the last decade. In 1918 total earnings were $224,816, operating expenses $398,785, interest $375,000, deficit $549,469.

E. M., Flora, Ind.—The American Guaranty company has shown steady underwriting losses. Surplus has diminished slowly. As of Dec. 31 last it was $20,275. Last year the company earned $193,425 of premiums, paid $74,412 of losses, and $132,966 for expenses.

E. C. S., Milwaukee, Wis.—We cannot predict the course of the stock market.

PRODUCE TRADE

There was no change in the butter market yesterday, business being moderate. At Chicago 92 scores were 51½ as given by the bureau of markets, with receipts 11,538 tubs. New York was 54c and receipts 12,210 tubs. Boston, 54½c, receipts 6,634 tubs, and Philadelphia 55c, and 2,604 tubs. Cheese prices were unchanged from Friday with trade in all markets quiet.

A moderate business was on in eggs at 41c to 42c for fresh firsts. Receipts were 18,454 cases, against 11,398 cases last week. Cold storage stocks are 1,863,611 cases, against 1,460,314 cases last year. The four big markets have 3,831,793 cases against 3,115,973 cases last year. Butter stocks are 68,268,000 lbs., against 42,656,000 lbs last year. Live poultry prices were unchanged with small offerings. Fowls were 32c and broilers 36c to 42c.

Potatoes were in good supply with trade light at $3.50 to $3.90 per 100 lb sacks for southwestern stock. Receipts 66 cars with 130 cars on track.

The bureau of markets report 135 cars of watermelons on track and a firmer market. Another authority says there are 250 cars on track and 250 cars waiting in the outer yards. Cars were $150 to $200. Cantaloupe melons were in good supply at $1.60 to $2.60 for crates of 45. Fruits generally were plentiful with a liberal business.

Chain Store Organizations
Their Place in Our Industrial System.

SCIENTIFIC methods of production and distribution are factors which tend to prevent the cost of living from increasing to abnormal figures. In the past decade concerted efforts on the part of government, state and industrial leaders have been applied with a view to bringing the producer and the consumer nearer together, eliminating the middleman, and thus reducing the cost of the product to the ultimate consumer.

CHAIN store systems have contributed enormously toward the economical distribution of low-priced commodities of all sorts. The development of this class of business has been steady, with a normal increase, and those concerns possessing able management have made a signal success of their enterprise.

THE chain store organization is an indispensable part of our industrial system, able to purchase a multitude of standard commodities at prices much lower than those quoted to the average retail dealer. This is obvious in view of the fact that while the small dealer is obliged to purchase from the jobber, the chain store organization either manufactures its own product or else purchases directly from manufacturers.

THE chain store system operates hundreds of stores on a definite plan of organization. As it sells for cash, the element of bad debts is eliminated. As its cash position is always strong, it can enter markets at times when purchases can be made advantageously. With the elimination of bad debts the chain store system is able to do business on a smaller margin of profit than the retail dealer who is obliged to take that factor into consideration.

THE size and financial backing of well-managed chain stores enable them to operate under the highest degree of efficiency, with capable supervision, excellent sanitary conditions, proper display of goods, etc. Identification with a large and successful organization is an incentive to employees whose ambition for promotion is a guarantee of good relations between employer and employee.

FOLLOWING is a comparison of six preferred stocks of successful chain store organizations on the basis of earnings applicable to dividends and net quick assets for each share of preferred stock:

MERE looking at a tire in a dealer's store—weighing it in ounces—measuring it in inches—tell you nothing of what it will do on your car.

But apply the Goodrich Caliper of True Tire Value to it, and you at once gauge its service value.

Measure its price with the Goodrich List Price, and the adjustment mileage back of it with the More-Mileage Adjustment of Goodrich Tires—6,000 miles for Fabrics; 8,000 for Silvertown Cords.

If its price measures more than the List Price, the tire asks you to pay for something it cannot deliver.

If its adjustment mileage measures less in miles than the Goodrich More-Mileage Adjustment, it deprives you of mileage your money entitles you to get.

Measure any tire with the Goodrich Caliper, and you realize why the word is running like wildfire through the motoring world, "Goodrich has THE TIRES."

Goodrich is making the burliest, best tires the rubber industry has produced. Compare them and be convinced.

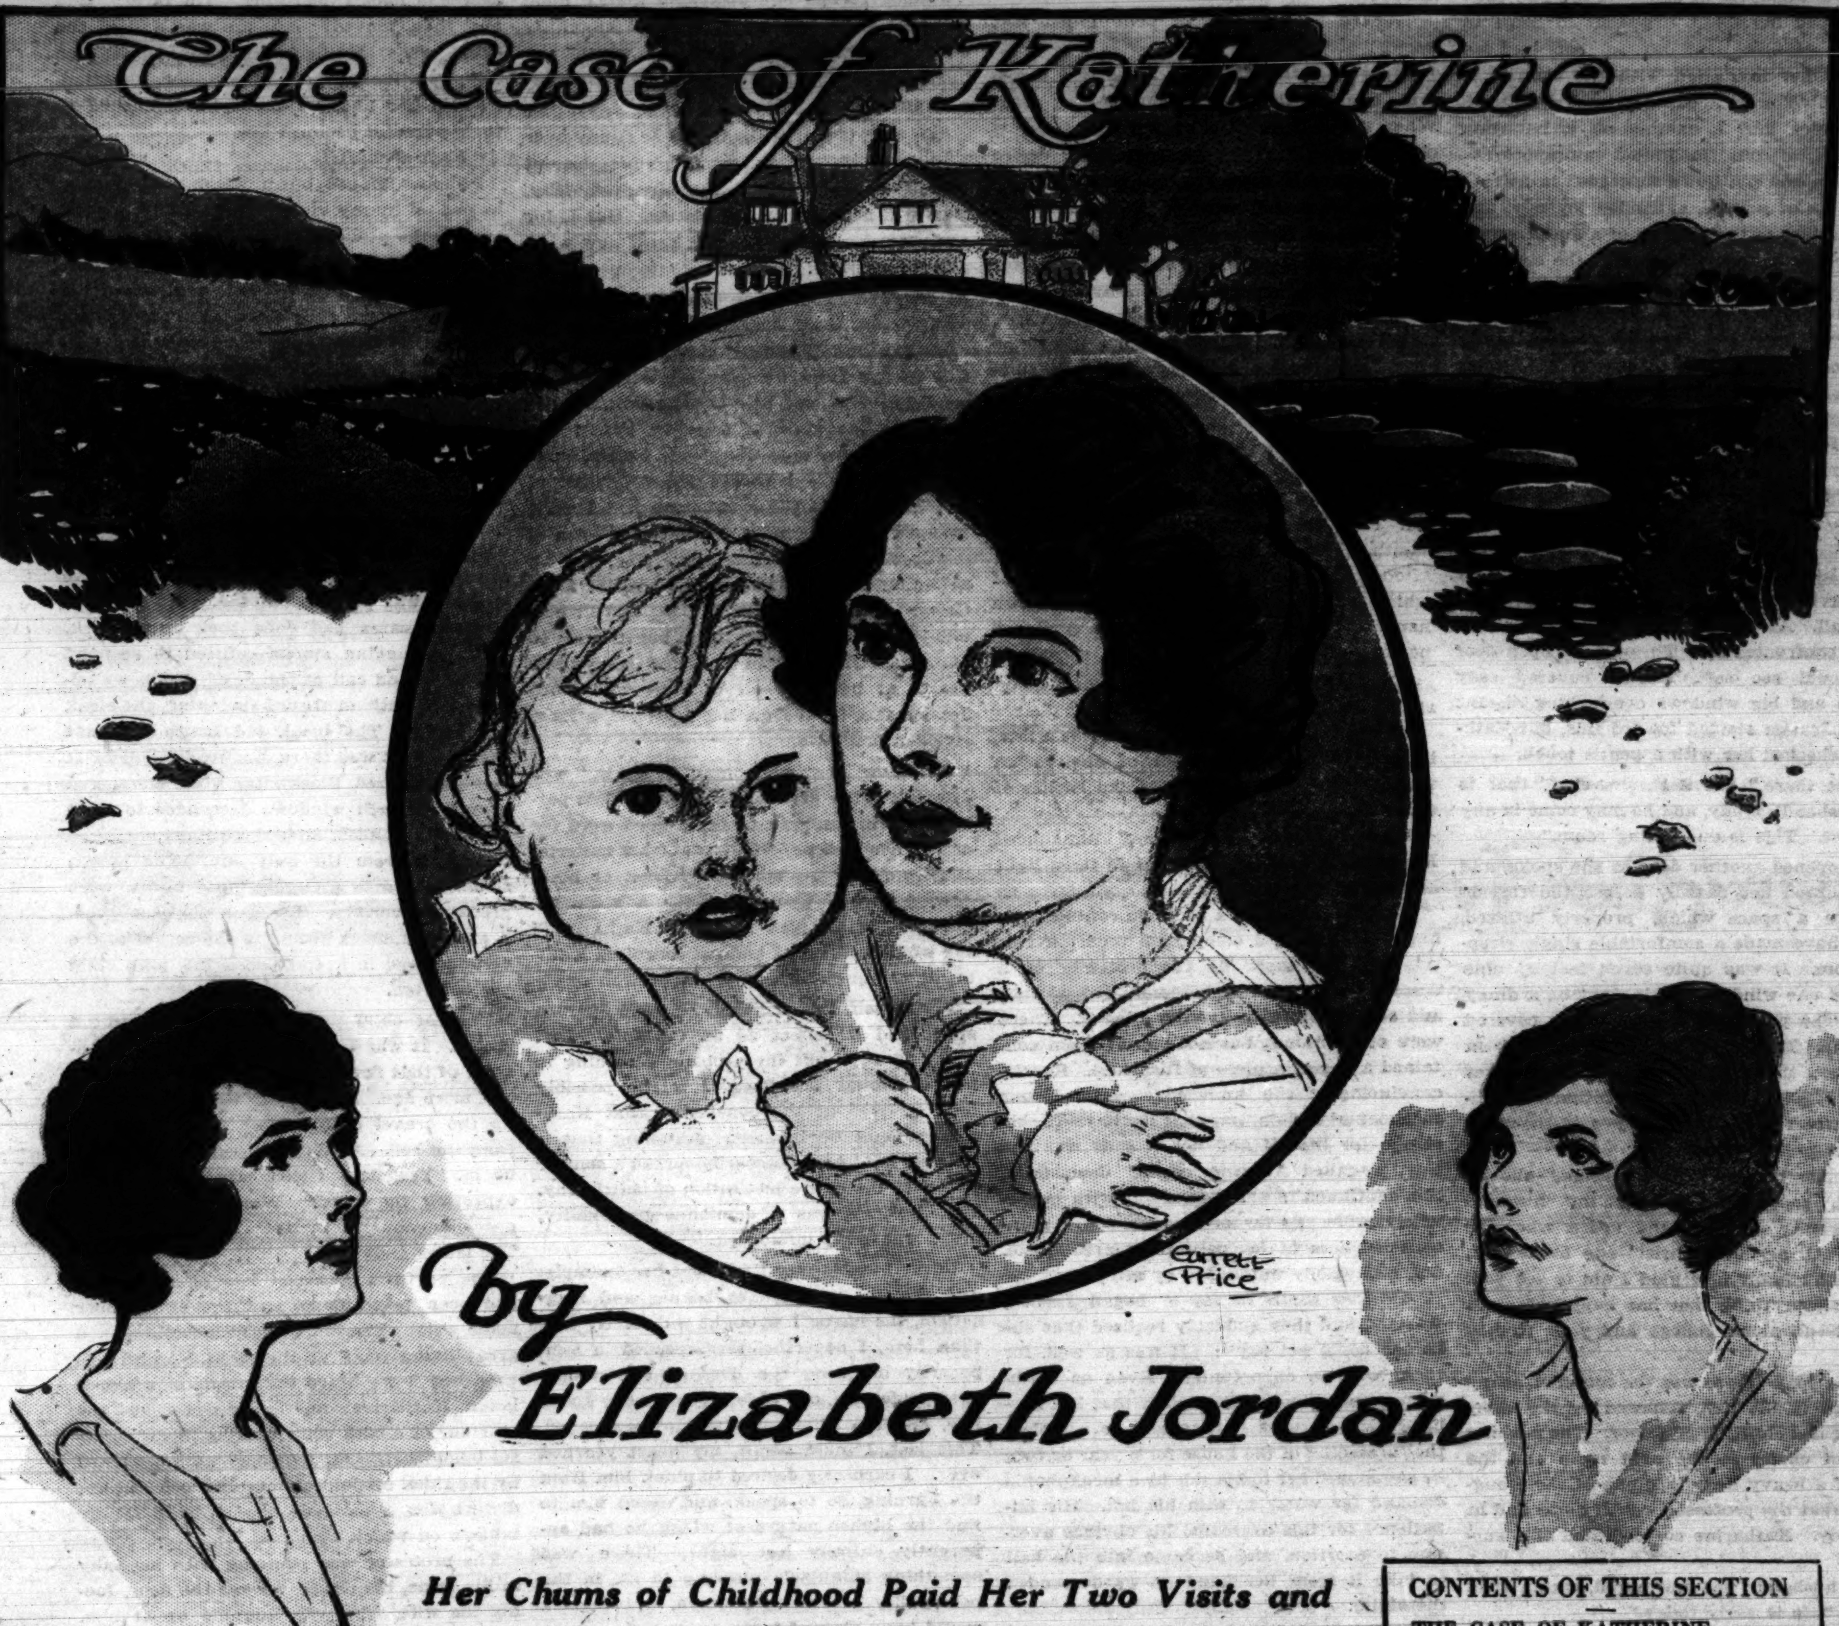
The Case of Katherine



by

Elizabeth Jordan

Her Chums of Childhood Paid Her Two Visits and on Both Occasions They Observed Everything.

CONTENTS OF THIS SECTION

THE CASE OF KATHERINE, the story of two girl chums who suddenly change their opinion concerning matrimony, by Elizabeth Jordan.

FACT FOR FICTION, in which a returned soldier tells his love story just as it happened, by Oney Fred Sweet.

THE TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR ARM, a baseball story about a veteran pitcher and what he did in a pinch, by Charles E. Van Loan.

THE RED SHAWL, a serial by Jack Lait.

THE TEENIE WEENIES, Dunce starts trouble, by Wm. Donahey.

MY memory of Katharine goes back to the morning when, at the tender age of 10, she was violently precipitated into our classroom. The motive power, we subsequently learned, was her brother Jack, slightly older than Katharine, whose nervous system had abruptly refused the ordeal of accompanying her into the presence of the teacher. Pushing the door ajar until the opening was just large enough to admit her, he thrust her through, following her fat figure for a second with one anxious eye and breathing audibly in his excitement. The next instant the cheerful clatter of his hobnailed boots echoed down the hall, followed by a whoop of relief as he emerged upon the playground.

It was Katharine's bearing as she stood, thus rudely projected into our lives, endeavoring to recover her equilibrium, and with thirty pairs of eyes fixed unswervingly upon her, that won my heart and Jessica's. Owing to a fervid determination of our teacher to keep us well in view, we sat in the front row, directly facing her. Having, even in our extreme youth, a constitutional distaste to missing anything, we undoubtedly stared at Katharine longer and harder than any of the others. We smiled, too, largely and with the innocent abandon of childhood; and Katharine smiled back at us as if she also tasted a subtle flavor of the joke, lost to cruder palates. Then she shifted her tiny school bag from one hand to the other, swept the room with a thoughtful glance, and catching sight of frantic gestures I was making, obeyed them by walking casually to an empty seat across from my own, where she sat down with deepening dimples and an air of finality.

Several moments subsequently our teacher, Miss Merrill, aroused herself from the trance into which she apparently had been thrown by the expeditiousness with which this incident was accomplished, and coming to Katharine's side, ratified the arrangement, incidentally learning the new pupil's name and receiving from her hand a card, written by the principal and assigning her to our special grade.

But long before these insignificant details were completed, Jessica and I had emptied Katharine's bag, arranged her books in her desk, lent her a pencil she lacked, indicated to her the boy most to be scorned and shunned, given her in pantomime the exact standing of Miss Merrill in the regard of her pupils, and accepted in turn the temporary loan of the spruce gum with which she had happily provided herself. At recess the acquaintance thus auspiciously begun ripened into a warm friendship, and on the way home from school that night we made a covenant of eternal loyalty and love, and told one another the stories of our lives.

Jessica's and mine were distressingly matter of fact. We were both supplied with the usual complement of parents, brothers, and sisters, and, barring the melancholy condition that none of them, of course, understood our complex natures, we had nothing unusual to chronicle. But Katharine's recital was of interest. She was, to begin with, an orphan, living with two brothers and an old uncle in a large and gloomy house we had often noticed as it stood with its faded back turned coldly to Evans avenue. Seemingly her pleasure and friends were few. Once a month she went to the cemetery to put flowers on her father's and mother's graves. Katharine herself seemed uncertain as to whether this pilgrimage properly belonged in the field of pleasure or the stern path of duty, but Jessica and I classified it at once and dropped an easy tear.

When we were 17 Jessica and I were told that we were to be sent east to college, and Katharine's uncle, first stimulating thought by pushing his spectacles back upon his brow, decided that she was already sufficiently burdened by education, and that the useful arts of the housewife should engage her attention forthwith. She should keep house for him and her brothers, he announced, until she carried out her proper mission in life by marrying and having babies. With this oracular utterance he closed further discussion by burying himself once more in his library, while Katharine told us his decision.

She had looked forward to the pleasing social aspects of college life, so she seemed slightly disappointed, did Katharine, and the end of her nose held certain high lights. But aside from this evidence of sorrow she made no protests against the peremptory masculine shaping of her future. Stricken to the heart, Jessica and I stormed, begged, implored, wept. Katharine opposed to our eloquence the impassive front of a pink sofa cushion.

"My uncle says it," she sighed, and was silent.

There being obviously little to be gained by prolonging this painful discussion, Jessica and I bore our outraged sensibilities to the calming atmosphere of our homes. And in due time, our trunks being packed and our farewells said, we departed to apply our thirsty lips to the fountain of knowledge flowing at the eastern college, leaving Katharine to embark upon her domestic career.

The great news of Katharine's engagement fanned into a fierce flame the warm embers of our friendship. O, joy, O, romance, O, young, young love! We wrote Katharine forty pages of congratulations, and Katharine coyly but fully replied. We could almost see her rosy blushes as she bent over the pages of her long letters to us.

Her future lord was a professor in the college in our native city, and, it seemed, though Katharine dwelt but lightly on the fact, somewhat past the first fine flush of youth. So much Katharine naively conveyed to us, with the further information that the wedding was to be early in February, because Prof. Heller, the happy bridegroom, seemed unaccountably to be in haste, and had bought a home, to which he was anxious to take her.

The wedding, according to Katharine's account, was in the nature of a brilliant social function. She found time during her honey-

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

OF COURSE THE DUNCE STARTED ALL THE TROUBLE. BY WM. DONAHEY.

ELIZABETH ANN lived in a big green house, which sat in a large and pleasant yard. She was six years and seventeen days old and, strange to say, there were no other children near her age who lived close by. Elizabeth Ann didn't mind it much, for she could always find something to fill up her time, but once in a long while she wished some little girl or maybe a little boy could come into her yard to play with her.

"Oh, my!" she said to herself one afternoon, "I wish a girl or a couple of girls would just drop out of the sky and play with me." And she looked up just as though she thought they really would come running right down out of the blue sky.

"Well, there is no use of sitting around and waiting," she sighed. "So I'll get some water and go out behind the house in the sand pile and make a cake."

Hurrying into the house, she found an old broken teacup, a spoon, and an empty lard can. She filled the cup with water and hurried out to the sand pile, where she soon set to work making a fancy cake.

Elizabeth Ann was a wonderful sand cake maker, and in a remarkably short time she turned out, onto a piece of board, a perfect cake. She set some pebbles around the top of the cake, and when it was finished Elizabeth Ann suddenly lost interest in her work and strolled off to the other end of the garden to see whether the peanut she had planted the day before had come up.

"I'll call that a pretty fine cake, that's what I will," said Paddy Pinn as he stepped up from behind some lilies of the valley near by and came toward the cake, followed by the rest of the Teenie Weenies.

The Teenie Weenies had been strolling by, and seeing the little girl at work, they had stopped to watch. The little folks walked about the cake, admiring the work, until the Dunce suddenly started a peck of trouble.

The Dunce, who always wanted to climb up onto things, had no sooner looked the cake over than he decided to climb up on top of it. Zip gave him a boost and he started to wiggle toward the top, when one side of the cake gave way and tumbled over Tess, who was standing on that side. She was almost covered with sand, but the Cook and the Old Soldier soon pulled her out. She wasn't hurt, but she was very angry, and she started after the Dunce with a fierce look on her tiny face.

"I'll teach you to be all the time climbin' around and gettin' sand on people!" she cried, as she started for the Dunce.

The Dunce was frightened at the angry look on Tess' face, and he started to run as fast as his legs would carry him. Tess grabbed a match out of Gogo's hand and charged after the Dunce, while the rest of the Teenie Weenies laughed until the tears ran down their cheeks.

Tess was a good runner, and she was gaining fast on the Dunce when that foolish fellow decided to climb a dandelion. He climbed to the top of a big dandelion and hung swaying there while Tess calmly sat down and waited.

"Just wait until you get tired hangin' there and then I'll get you," Tess said as she glared up at the Dunce. "When you come down I'll give you such a rap over the head with this match you won't want to be doin' any more climbin' for quite a spell."

Finally the General made peace between the two Teenie Weenies and the Dunce slid down to the ground, but he was careful to stay at some distance from Tess for a long time.

When Elizabeth Ann came back to her cake some time later and found it broken she wondered how it had happened, but she never imagined that the Teenie Weenies had a hand in its destruction.

moon to write us lengthy accounts of its splendors.

When we went home for our summer vacation our first caller, most properly, was Katharine. She was a subdued, rather chastened Katharine, whose thoughtful, slightly puzzled expression might have suggested to maturer minds that some, at least, of the vaunted joys of domestic life had thus far escaped her. She urged us to come to her at once—the next day, in fact—and we accepted her invitation with the alacrity it deserved. The next day was very beautiful, and Jessica and I, casting off a haunting suspicion of our individual unimportance which we had not quite succeeded in leaving behind us at college, expanded joyfully, and let ourselves to the charms of a sunlit world. The college was on the edge of the city, and Katharine's home was a short distance beyond it. It was quite a country place, this home, over the big, bare lawn of which an iron dog fiercely mounted guard. A weather beaten house confronted us, with a cold, forbidding expression.

We felt chilled as we opened the gate, but Katharine presented herself at the first click of its latch, and her welcome was so hospitable and eager that our temporary constraint vanished. Simultaneously we fell upon her neck; loudly we assured her of our envious delight; noisily we trooped into her hall. As we entered it a large, cheerful room confronted us. Through its open door we could see soft, leather covered easy chairs and big windows overlooking distant hills. Jessica started toward this, but Katharine checked her with a gentle touch.

"Not there," she said, gravely; "that is my husband's study, and he may come in any moment. This is our sitting room."

She opened another door as she spoke, and we followed her dazedly across the threshold into a space which, properly utilized, might have made a comfortable single sleeping room. It was quite seven feet by nine and had one window, looking out on a dingy barn. The painted floor was partly covered by a rug. Katharine's zither stood stiffly in a corner, three chairs backed themselves sternly against the wall. Katharine indicated two of these, and dropped on the third with her radiant smile.

"We use this as a sitting room," she remarked, casually, "because my husband needs plenty of light and space when he works. O, my dear girls!" she broke out, "you don't know how glad I am to see you! Tell me everything that has happened since we met—all about college and your friends there."

As she spoke there was the sound of heavy footsteps in the hall, followed by the noisy opening and shutting of a door. The pushing about of chairs in the next room and the drop of a heavy body into one of them suggested that the professor was at home and in his study. Katharine corroborated this surmise.

"My husband," she murmured, with a little blush. "He is early today."

The words were drowned by a roar.

"Katharine," bellowed a bass voice of startling depth, "bring my slippers!"

Katharine rose on the instant.

"You will excuse me?" she said, hastily. "Talk till I come back."

We heard Katharine's feet fly upstairs, down again, and into the study. Almost immediately she returned to us, her cheeks pink from her exertions.

"Now," she began, "I want to hear all about it—the nicest teachers, the chums who have taken my place."

The voice in the next room boomed out again.

"Kath-ar-ine!" it bellowed. "My pipe! It is upstairs."

Katharine departed for the pipe. Jessica and I indulged in the luxury of a long, comprehending gaze into the depths of each other's eyes. Katharine returned, and we all talked at once; for five minutes reminiscences and confidences flowed with the freedom of a mountain stream after a thaw.

"Kath-ar-ine!"

Katharine sat still. She was listening to the end of Jessica's best story, but one willing foot went forward tentatively.

"Kath-ar-ine!" Katharine should have heard that call though she lay with folded hands beside her mother 'neath the churchyard mould.

"Katharine, get me Haeckel's 'Wonders of Life.'"

Katharine got it, by the simple and effective process of going into the room where the professor sat and taking it from its shelf. We heard the soft murmur of her voice, followed by the rumble of his. When she returned to us, Jessica finshed her story in the chastened spirit which follows such an interruption, and there were ten minutes of talk. We forgot the bare little room; old memories softly enfolded us; the Katharine we knew and loved dominated the situation.

"Katharine!"

Katharine's soft lips were not smiling now, but she rose at once, and with a murmured apology left the room. We heard the suggestion of the rest of her task as she closed the door.

"Where is that box of pens I got last week?"

Apparently their lurking place was a distant one; Katharine's absence was long. When she returned she volunteered to show us the house. We surmised that her desire was to get away from the sound of that summoning voice, and even as we rose we realized the futility of such an effort.

The dining room, into which she led us for cake and tea, was almost comfortable. Its furniture, dark, serviceable oak, was a gift, Katharine told us, from her uncle. Twice as she served the tea she responded to a summons from the professor's study. Once he desired a handkerchief, and the second time he wished an important letter posted at once. His wife went out to the rural box which adorned the fence in front of the house and cast the envelope into its yawning mouth. Returning, she showed us her kitchen, an immaculate spot, the floor of which was evidently scrubbed by her own hands, for she mentioned that she employed no servant.

"My husband thinks we do not need one," she added, simply.

To the right of the dining room was a fine, bright, cheerful room, full of shelves on which stood innumerable jars and bottles of evil odor.

"My husband's laboratory," announced Katharine, proudly. "He has to have light and air."

Upstairs there was a bedroom containing a huge double bed; a companion room off this was evidently used by the professor as a dressing room and storeroom. His clothes and several startling trunks filled it. There were other rooms, but not one of them contained a rug or a piece of furniture. Slowly, convincingly, the knowledge entered our sentimental little hearts that Katharine's sole refuge for herself and her friends was the tiny, so-called "sitting room" downstairs. She continued to show us about with housewifely pride. So far as we could see, her unconsciousness of her wrongs was complete. She was wholly untouched by self-pity.

"Do you mean to say—" began Jessica, warmly, and then suddenly realized that she herself could not say it. It was as well, for there was no opportunity. Even as Katharine was beginning to explain that her husband did not think it necessary to complete the furnishing of the house for a year or two, he summoned her to his side by a megaphonic demand for water to thin his ink. His impatience for this overcame his obvious aversion to exertion, and he came into the hall to take it from her hand as we descended the stairs.

She introduced him to us, and he bowed gravely and with considerable dignity. He had a massive head, with iron gray, curling hair, and nearsighted eyes, which peered at us vaguely through large, steel rimmed spectacles. He surveyed us, not unpleasantly, but wholly without interest, nodded again, partly to himself and partly to us, as if our appearance had confirmed some dark surmise of his own, took the water from Katharine's hand, grunted an acknowledgment, and retreated to his fastness in the study. He had not spoken one articulate word. Even Katharine, smiling her untroubled smile, seemed to feel that something in the situation demanded a word of comment.

"He is not at ease with girls," she murmured, gently. "He has taught only boys, and he does not understand women; but he has a kind heart."

Jessica and I ruminated thoughtfully upon this tribute as we went away. We had learned through the innocent prattle of our hostess' busy tongue that she desired a garden, but that he thought it a waste of time; that she had suggested open plumbing, and that he declined to go to the expense; that she saw little of her brothers nowadays, as he did not approve of them; that her old friends came to see her rarely since her marriage, as, for some reason unaccountable to Katharine, they seemed not to like her husband.

We waited until we were out of sight of the house, and then seated ourselves gloomily on a wayside rock under a sheltering tree. A robin, perched on a branch above our heads, burst into mocking song. The sun still shone; I wondered how it could.

"Well, of all the selfish beasts and unmanageable brutes!" Jessica began, hotly. Jessica's language was frequently too strong for elegance and even at this exciting moment my sense of duty forced me to call the fact to her attention. I, moreover, essayed judicious weighing of the situation as the most effective means of cooling her off.

"If the secret of happiness is work, as most authorities agree," I reminded Jessica, "Prof. Heller's wife ought to be the happiest bride in this country."

Jessica turned one disgusted glance upon me, rose with dignity, and moved haughtily down the road to a street car which was bumping its way toward us on its somewhat uneven track.

"O, well, if you are going to be funny over a tragedy in which one of your dearest friends is the victim," she observed, icily, "we will not discuss the matter. But I, for one, have learned a lesson; I know now what matrimony is."

Jessica's pessimism on the subject of matrimony dated from that hour, and grew with each day that followed. Coldly, even as she had turned from the plea of Arthur Townsend Jennings, did she turn from all other suitors. She grew steadily in charm and beauty, and her opportunities to break hearts were, from the susceptible nature of man, of an almost startling frequency. Jessica grasped each one with what seemed even to my loyal eyes diabolical glee. She was an avenging Nemesis, hot on the trail of man. Grave professors, Harvard, Yale, and Princeton juniors and seniors, loyal boy friends of her youth who came in manhood to lay their hearts at her feet—all of these and more Jessica sent forth from her presence, a long, stricken procession.

"I know now what matrimony is," was Jessica's battle cry. If, in a thoughtless partisan spirit, I sought to say a good word for one of her victims, pointing out his material advantages or his spiritual graces, or both, Jessica turned upon me with a stern reminder. "Have you forgotten Katharine?" she would ask. As I had not forgotten Katharine, the question usually silenced me.

For myself, I must admit, Jessica's Spartan spirit had its effect as an example. Left alone to work out the problem according to my elemental processes, I might possibly have arrived at the conclusion that Katharine's domestic infelicity, assuming that it existed, need not necessarily spread a somber pall over the entire institution of matrimony. But Jessica's was a dominant personality, and I was easily influenced.

In my humble way I followed her example; and though, lacking her beauty and magnetism, the havoc I wrought was vastly less than hers, I nevertheless succeeded in temporarily blighting the lives of two middle aged professors, one widower in the dry goods line, and the editor of a yellow newspaper. This last, I must admit, my heart yearned over. I earnestly desired to pluck him from the burning, so to speak, and assist him to find the higher nature of which he had apparently entirely lost sight. There was something singularly pleasing to me in the personality of this gentleman, but Jessica would have none of him.

For we had been growing older, Jessica and I, and many things more or less agreeable had happened to us. We had been graduated with high honors, we had spent four years abroad in supplementary study, and we had then returned to the congenial task of bringing education up to date in our native land. We taught, and taught successfully; and our girls went forth and married, or studied or taught, and came back to show us their babies or their theses, according to the character of their productiveness. We fell into the routine of academic life.

Our visits home were rare, and there had been no time in any of them for a second call at the home of Prof. Heller. Seven years after our return from Europe, however, Jessica decided that she needed a rest and a summer in her native air. Moreover, she had just given Prof. Adams his final conge, and he had left her in high dudgeon. I sapiently inferred that Jessica had found the experience something of a strain. Twenty-four hours after the newspapers had chronicled the exciting news of our arrival, Katharine called on us.

We gasped as we looked at her. Was this, indeed, Katharine—this rosy, robust, glowing, radiant woman, with shining eyes and with vitality flowing from her like the current of an electric battery? I looked at Jessica's faded complexion, the tired lines in her face, the white threads in her dark hair, and my heart contracted suddenly. I knew how I looked—vastly more tired, more faded than Jessica, for I had started from a point nearer to these undesirable goals. We three were about the same age. There were six months at the most between us. Who would believe it to look at us together?

Katharine seized us in turn, and kissed us on both cheeks. To me there was something life-giving in the grasp of her strong, firm hands, in the touch of her cool, soft lips. She insisted that we come to see her and at once. When would we come? We had no excuse now, she pointed out, and if we needed a rest, the farm—her home—was the best place in the world for rest. With a faint access of hope I heard her. The farm? Had she, then, moved? No, she was still in the same place, Katharine explained, but the city had lurched off in another direction, leaving her and her family undisturbed in their peaceful pastoral life.

"Kath-ar-ine!"

I almost jumped, but it was only a memory, helped on by my vivid fancy. I had tried to picture the peaceful pastoral life, but all that responded was the echo of that distant summons. Jessica, however, was explaining that we would come, very soon—next week—yes, Tuesday, of course. Jessica subsequently inquired of me, with the strong resentment of the person who is in the wrong, how I expected her to get us out of it. It was something that had to be done. Obviously, she said, it was one of those things to do and have done with.

Tuesday came, and we made our second visit to Katharine's—fourteen years to a month from the time of our first. Again the weather was perfect, but the years and professional cares had done their fatal work, and our lagging spirits refused to respond to the jocund call of the day. Again we approached, with an absurd shrinking, the bleak old house. The bleak old house was not there; nay, it was there, but transformed. It was painted red. Blossoming vines clambered over it; French windows descended to meet its wide verandas; striped awnings sheltered its rooms from the July sun. The lawns, sloping down to a close clipped hedge, were green and velvety. The iron dog was gone. A great hammock swung in the corner of the veranda, and in it tumbled a fat, pink child and a kitten.

The fat child proved that all was not a dream. It was Katharine reborn—the Katharine of that first day in school, twenty years and more ago. Rather unsteadily we walked up the gravel path, rather uncertainly we rang the bell. A white capped maid ushered us in. Yes, Mrs. Heller was at home and expecting the ladies. Would the ladies be gracious enough to enter? The ladies would. The ladies entered.

The partition between two of the rooms had been taken down and the entire floor made over. There was a wide hall, with a great living room at the right. As we approached it we heard the gurgle of a baby's laugh, Katharine's answering ripple, and the murmur of a bass voice buzzing like a cheerful bumblebee. Our footsteps were deadened by the thick carpet, and our entrance did not disturb for a moment the pleasing family tableau on which we gazed.

The professor was standing with his baby in his arms, his profile toward the door, facing his wife, who was laughing up at him. The infant had grasped a handful of his father's wavy gray hair and was making an earnest and gratifyingly successful effort to drag it out by the roots.

Heller's face, certainly ten years younger than when we saw it last, was alight with pride in this precocious offspring. Seeing us, he tossed the baby on his shoulder, holding it there with one accustomed arm, and came to meet us, his wife close by his side. They reached us together, but it was the professor who gave us our welcome. This time he needed no introduction.

"My wife's friends, Miss Lawrence and Miss Gifford, is it not?" He smiled, extending his big hand to each of us in turn, and giving our hands a grip the cordiality of which made us wince. "It is a pleasure. But you will excuse this young man?" He lowered the baby to his breast as he spoke, while his wife fell upon our necks in hospitable greeting. "He has no manners, this young man," added the father, sadly, when Katharine had thus expressed her rapture on our arrival. "He would yell if I put him down, and he has lungs—ah, but he has lungs!"

He busied himself drawing forth chairs for us, apparently quite unhampered by his small burden. We contemplated the baby and said fitting things. He had cheeks like beefsteaks, and eyes that stuck out of his head with what appeared to be joyful interest in his surroundings. Katharine exclaimed over a sudden discovery:

"But you haven't taken off your hats!" she cried. "Hal, give the baby to Bridget and take my friends' wraps and hats up to the guestroom. I don't want Miss Lawrence to climb stairs."

The professor obediently summoned the nurse, dropped the baby, burdened himself photographs in the center of the foremost page. There was the star, Princess Sabina, a flashing likeness of her, centered, and grouped about her were smaller cuts of Jan, of her late royal father, of a scene in Grodnia taken while the bolshevik riots were on, scenes from the house where the two shootings had taken place, and——

Hello! Hallam's weary eye was startled with a portrait of himself. Why? Being one of those unpresuming personalities who never can understand why any one should be interested in them, he was a bit puzzled; he was even slightly vexed. Beneath the insert was his name, and beside the layout, in one of the notches of its irregular form, was an article devoted to him and to how he, with almost incredible ingenuity, perseverance, second sight, and reportorial skill had "stuck" to the case for weeks until he had come in at the death not only to give his paper an unparalleled "scoop," but to take an active hand in saving the life of the princess and turning over the murderess to the authorities.

Hallam shook his head in disappointment. That fulsome "boost" flattened the edge of his whole pleasure. He strolled to the managing editor's desk, laid the paper before him, pointed at his picture and the panegyric about himself, and said:

"Why?"

The chief stood up and placed his hand tenderly on Hallam's shoulder.

"Don't be fussy, Bob," he said. "I know you don't relish such as that. But in this instance you not only got news and wrote it, but you made it. In the matter of good faith to the readers we cannot do otherwise than give you full credit. Now be a good boy—news is news. We never praise without warrant and never spare—we tell what happens. This cannot be told without dwelling heavily on your share in it. We are proud of you, but when you do a stunt like this what we think is of small moment. Millions of people must weigh your end of it and say whether we are bragging because you are one of us or playing you because you are front page material."

"Two killings are enough for one page," said the head of the staff, with a smile. "But I promise not to headline you any more, though you will, of course, do the rest of this case, which will run for months—the follow-up stuff, the trial, the effect on bolshevism here and abroad, the afterclap in Grodnia which you can expand upon with your full knowledge of all the fine points when the cable matter gives us the skeletonized doings, and so forth. Since the princess is living at your house, I presume you will see her often and remain in her confidence."

"Gee—I hope so," said Hallam, with so much unguarded and boyish vehemence that the older man, seasoned and sharpened by years of quick analysis of emotions, expressions, plausibilities, and possibilities, looked up and studiously searched the face of the youngster whom he loved.

"Say, Bobby," he asked, low and earnestly, "does she feel that way about it, too?"

"No. That is, not now. Maybe—some day. She was brought up to marry a prince——"

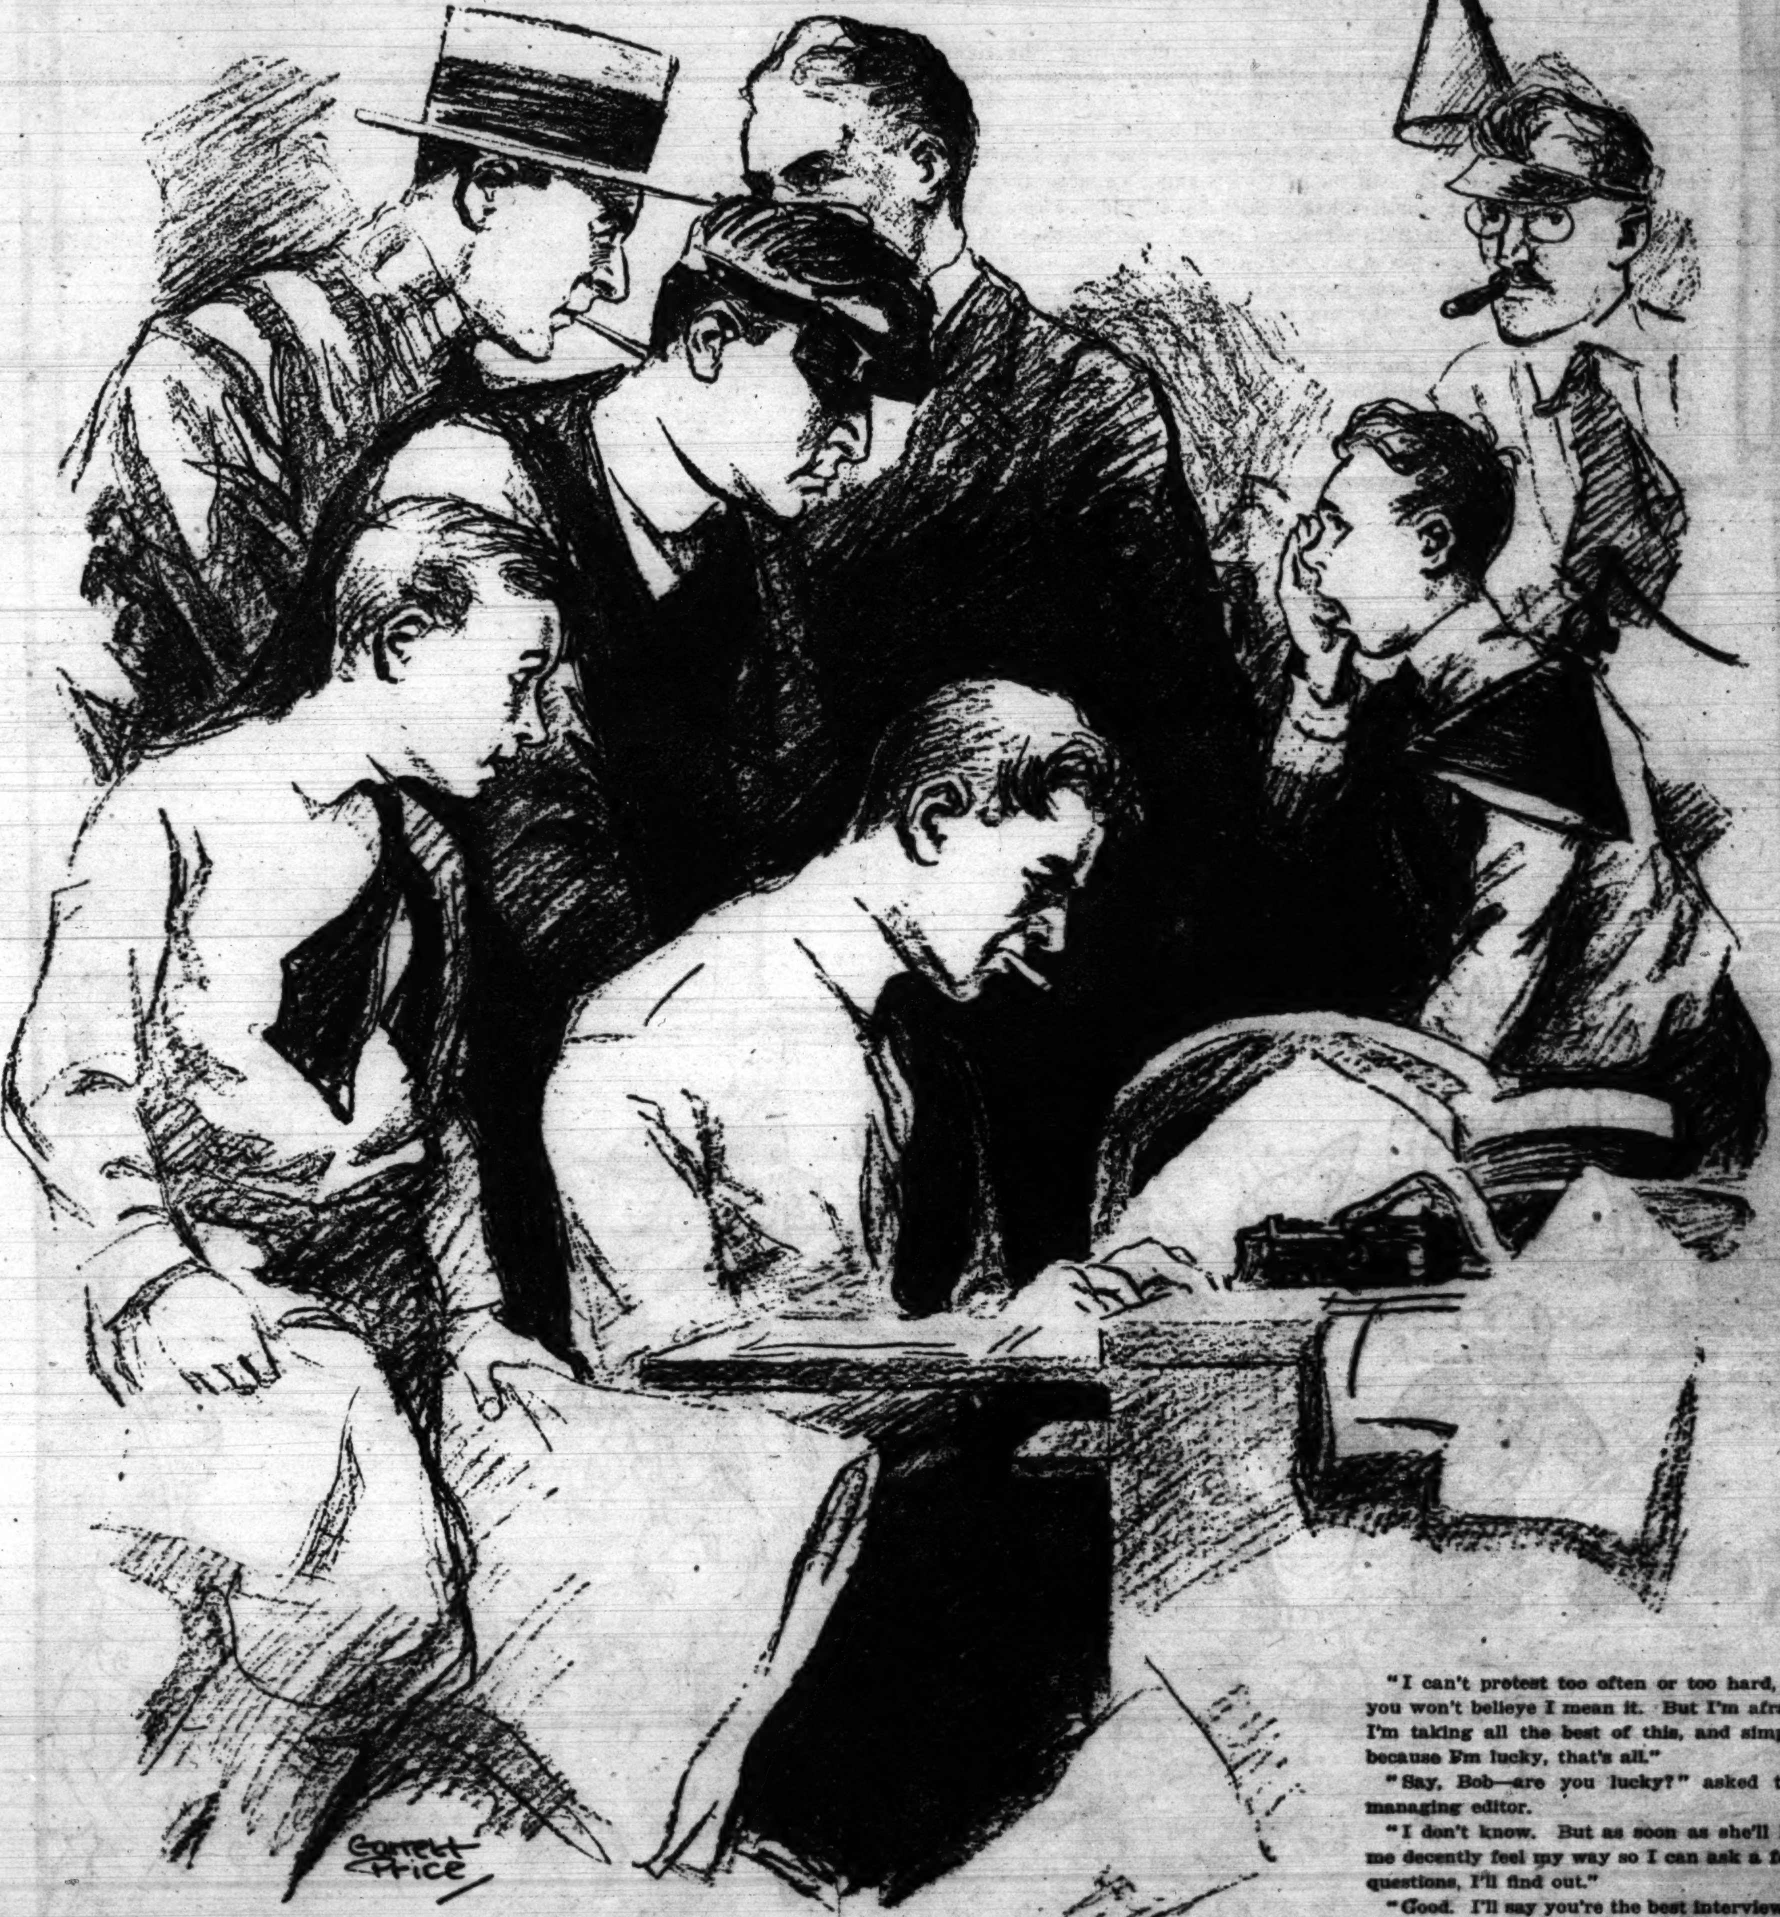
"There you are. I hope she gets you."

"Thanks. Am I off?"

"Well, I should hope so. I can't boss you tonight—never tried very hard, anyway, but I'd like to see somebody order you around right now, in this shop."

"Please don't talk that way, chief. I'm only one of the boys. Just because I happened to be in on a 'break,' for which I was throwing down the paper by my long absence instead of really serving it with intent to be useful to it, is no reason why I should be a sacred cow here. I won't be treated like that. I'll be on the job at 1 this afternoon to report for my assignment."

"It will be waiting for you. So will a healthy raise and a bonus. Republican ingratitude is proverbial, but this is a democratic newspaper."



He was spinning out ream after ream of the amazing Princess Sabina story.

"I can't protest too often or too hard, or you won't believe I mean it. But I'm afraid I'm taking all the best of this, and simply because I'm lucky, that's all."

"Say, Bob—are you lucky?" asked the managing editor.

"I don't know. But as soon as she'll let me decently feel my way so I can ask a few questions, I'll find out."

"Good. I'll say you're the best interviewer I ever had. And when you get the answer—if it's the right one—remember that it's a great story, and don't fail to turn it in at this desk."

"Believe me, if I get the answer you're thinking of, I'll tell the world."

"Tut tut. I want it exclusive. You're not going to throw down the old sheet on the best romance story of years, are you?"

"No. If—if there's anything to tell that has any news value, I'll cork it tight and let you spring it."

"Attaboy, Bob. I withdraw my promise to keep you out of the headlines. News is news."

"Good night, chief."

with our garments, and ambled off with the tread of a peaceful elephant. When he returned, with the eager look of a retriever waiting for another stick, his wife promptly met his hopes.

"Arrange the easy chair for Miss Lawrence, dear," she said, "comfortably, and put an ottoman under her feet. I want her to rest while she is here."

The professor did it, while we gazed. He also inquired feelingly as to the state of Jessica's health, showed a sympathy almost human in her replies, and placed a pillow behind her back. Subsequently, during that call, he did these things:

He answered the telephone half a dozen times, faithfully repeating to his wife the messages of her various friends, and carrying hers back, as she declined to be torn from us long enough to talk to them herself.

He rounded up the remaining two children and presented them for our inspection, straightening his son's shoulders with an experienced hand, and tying with consummate skill the bow on his little girl's hair.

He went to the garage and ordered the family automobile, that we might drive later in the afternoon.

He searched for and found the morning newspaper, thoughtlessly dropped in the waste paper basket by the maid, and he read aloud to us a paragraph to which Katharine had referred chronicling the achievements of a classmate of ours.

He brought to Katharine, at different times and from remote parts of the house, one white shawl, six photographs of the children, an essay written by their son, aged 10, two books, a bib to meet a sudden need of the baby, and Katharine's address book. He did these things and he did them cheerfully, and with the unmistakable ease of frequent repetition. I glanced at Jessica. The expressions of incredulity and amazement to which she had freely yielded during the first half hour of our call had given way to a look of deep reflection.

Subsequently, Katharine showed us her home. The room that had been the professor's study was now part of the large general living room. The laboratory was now Katharine's personal sitting room. Through its French windows we saw Katharine's garden blossoming like the rose. Jessica asked the present location of the professor's study and laboratory. She subsequently admitted to me that she should not have done it, but that to leave the house without the information would have been a hpysical and moral impossibility. Katharine looked at her vaguely, as one seeking to recall a fleeting moment of the long dead past, but the professor responded with gratified alacrity.

"You shall see it!" he cried, and like a jovial schoolboy he led us up to the third floor. There, indeed, was his study—a hall bedroom, much crowded by his desk and easy chair; and off it, in a closet, were his beloved bottles and chemicals. I felt a throb of sympathy for the professor, but he was evidently blissfully ignorant of any reason for such a sentiment.

"Mother and the babies need the rest," he smiled complacently. "They must not climb too many stairs," and he led the way back to comfort with unconsciousness of the painful contrast between past and present conditions that made Jessica and me carefully refrain from meeting each other's eyes.

The children, when they espied him upon our return, uttered shrieks of joy. The baby sprang to his arms, the little boy swarmed up his legs. The picture of Prof. Heller as a perfectly trained husband and father was complete.

In silence, after our prolonged farewells, Jessica and I left the house. In silence we entered the trolley car; in silence we rode home. At last I voiced a sudden suspicion.

"Do you think," I asked hopefully, "that it was all a—a—well, that she persuaded him to do it just this once, for our edification?"

Jessica shook her head.

"I thought so at first," she conceded, slowly. "That in itself would have been a miracle—one I'd never believe if I hadn't seen it with these eyes. But everything disproves the theory. Do you think she could have trained those children to advance and retreat like a Casino ballet? On the contrary, it's evident that they literally live on him. They've worn the creases off his trousers! Didn't you notice where the creases left off and the sliding place of the babies began?"

I reluctantly admitted that this detail had escaped my observation. Jessica sighed.

"Incredible as it is," she summed up, "it's all true. It's the real thing."

"It opens quite a vista," I observed, thoughtfully. "If you would like Prof. Adams' present address, I can give it to you. He is in the Adirondacks with his sister Mollie, and I had a letter from her this morning."

Jessica looked at me and urged me not to be vulgar. Her thoughtful expression did not lift.

"If Katharine can do that with that man," I murmured, reflectively, as we entered the house, "I really believe you could work wonders with Adams. He would probably do the cooking and marketing—"

"If you're so impressed," remarked Jessica, in incisive tones, "I wonder you don't yield to the prayers and tears of your editor man."

My reply made Jessica sink into a hall chair which was fortunately at hand.

"I am going to," I said, placidly. And I did.

Jessica's nature being less womanly and yielding than mine, her surrender was a matter of longer time. In the interval I quite forgot her unimportant affairs, being wholly absorbed in the really extraordinary values of my own. Two weeks before the reopening of college, my fiancé, who had come west to spend his brief vacation with me, was seated by my side one evening studying the admirable effect of a ring he had just placed on my finger. It is singular how fraught with human interest such moments can be, and Edward and I failed to hear Jessica as she opened the door. She looked over our heads as she spoke to me. Her face was rather red, but her voice and manner expressed a degree of indifference which I am convinced no human being has ever really felt on any subject.

"Did you say that you could give me Mollie Adams' address?" asked Jessica.

Fact for Fiction by Oney Fred Sweet

An Old Acquaintance Calls and Interrupts the Short Story That Was to Have Been.

THIS is not the story I intended to write when I started out. I had several pages of quite another story launched, when I was interrupted by an old friend of mine, just back from overseas.

"Don't let me interfere with what you are doing," he insisted.

I looked at the two gold stripes on his sleeve. "A year of it over there," I remarked. "You know what the war was like."

"That war had to happen just the way it did. Everything had to happen just the way it did," he answered, clearing his throat, a bit embarrassed. "I wasn't keen for going into it. I was drafted. They had me in a camp down south for a while, and then I went over with a Tennessee regiment of national guard. We sailed on a British cattle freighter and the crew was partly Chinese. It was a dirty old boat, and we were attacked twice by the subs. I was so seasick that I didn't care whether we were hit or not. That's what makes it all seem so wonderful. What if I'd sailed with another bunch, come back at a different time?"

If I had interrupted him then, he might not have gone on. He might have ended with a few stereotyped remarks about the war in general and gone his way. But I knew he had a story to tell. I could see that he wanted to unburden himself, providing what he had to say would be received with sympathy. He was no fiction character, no movie puppet. Sincerity radiated from every inch of his six feet. His eyes were clear and his jaw was firm. But 26, and his hair was sprinkled with gray.

I looked back to the typewritten page on the machine before me, looked up at the khaki clad youth of real life.

"Well," he went on, "we were platooned with the British. I thought I wasn't going to like them, but I did. We had scraps among ourselves. One of those Tennesseeans killed a British soldier in a fight on our side of the lines, and they gave him fifteen years. It was those bombing planes that Jerry sent over while we were there in the Ypres sector that made my hair turn white. I wasn't exactly scared. The whole thing was simply a job, but there was always that nervous tension. It was while lying there in the pup tents hearing those things come over that something happened to me—something happened inside myself. I don't know whether I ought to tell you all this. It's so like a dream now, the whole thing, when you get back here."

He was inclined to change the subject. Started showing me his souvenirs. An iron cross taken from a dead German sergeant, slips of French and German money. "You can see from the engravings how the French were idealistic and the Germans materialistic," he explained. "Came almost bringing my rifle back, but got cold feet when we got to the port. I hated the army—hated it. I was fed up on war for all time. That's what the British said, 'fed up,' but I'd liked to have brought back that rifle."

"But the war changed you," I reminded him. "Just how?"

"Well," he went on, "things that used to seem so important to me suddenly became trivial. You know I had a girl when I went away. I had been going with her for ten years. She wrote right along. We were going to get married when I got back. I tried to think of her when I was lying there at night in the pup tents when the German planes were going over. Those planes sounded as if there were three cylinders missing. You could tell them from our own. You'd hear a bomb near you, and you'd feel sure the next one was going to be sure and hit you. You'd lie there expecting it, and then the next one was always farther away. And when I tried to think of my girl those nights—the girl I thought I'd loved for ten years—— Well, I told Sergt. Boden about my girl. He was an old-timer. I showed him her picture. He asked me if I'd rather marry her than any other girl I'd ever met. I hesitated, and he said right away that I wasn't really in love with her at all. He made me sore when he said it. I was intending then, all along, to come back to her."

"I think I know now," I smiled. "You met one of those French girls."

"Say," he scoffed, "those French girls and their beauty is all propaganda. The peasants that weren't painted didn't look good to me, and the ones that were painted looked worse. I don't want to talk about France and Belgium at all. They are too disillusioning."

"You were anxious to get home when it was over," I ventured.

"That's the funny part about it," he puzzled. "I was anxious until a day or two before we got our discharges. Then down there at that demobilization camp in the south they were going to draw lots to see who out of the bunch would stay on for three weeks to handle office work, and for some reason or other I said I'd stick—volunteered to stay. Can you beat it? As anxious as everybody was to get home, and me with all the folks and a girl up here waiting?.

"It was the third night after the bunch had gone, and I was lonesome. I went downtown and was walking aimlessly along the street when I thought I'd go into the Y. W. C. A. for a cafeteria lunch. I went up the steps and then came back, thinking maybe only girls patronized it. 'No,' I said to myself, or something said to me, 'I'll go back and make sure.' The secretary at the desk said that men ate there, too. I don't remember noticing her much then. But I went back there the next night, and the secretary and I had a few words' conversation. It was at that second meeting that we both felt as if we had known each other all our lives. It wasn't like the gradual getting acquainted of two strangers. And it was only because she had put off her folks, who wanted her to go on a trip to Atlanta with them, that she happened to be there. Don't tell me it wasn't all intended. My God, suppose I had married that other girl before I went across; suppose I hadn't come back just when I did; suppose I'd been discharged with the rest. O, my God!"

"You are sure it is real love this time," I cautioned.

"Sure?" he gasped. "Why, I never knew what to write to that other girl. Since I've left the south I've written three letters every day, and each one of them has needed extra postage. Sure! She hasn't a thought that isn't just the way I think. She doesn't say a word but what is just what I would want her to say. Those three weeks I was there we went strolling every night except one, and that one night we were both miserable." He rather reluctantly fumbled in a pocketbook that he carried in his blouse. "I want to show you her picture. It doesn't do her justice. Just a snapshot picture."

The picture was rather blurry.

"That background there," he explained, "is the ruins of an old home that Gen. Sherman burned when he marched to the sea. Some of those Tennesseeans in my regiment didn't seem to know the civil war was over yet by the way they talked. I hated to have a 'noncom' bawl me out in that southern accent. She's got it, too, but the way she uses it she makes it sound pretty. She's got a few freckles. I wouldn't take away one of those freckles—not one. I wouldn't change her in any way. I wouldn't have her a bit different. Her face is clean, nothing on it or on her eyebrows. Don't you like to see a girl with her face washed clean that way?"

There was no halting the confession now. "But do you really know her, and who she is? It was an accidental meeting. You've let her know, perhaps, that you're well-to-do, and your prospects."

"I know I'm not worthy of her," he flared back. "No one could be worthy of her. She has never gone with any one before. She had charge of the girls there in the building—had to see that their callers left by 10:30. But here's the queerest thing. Not queer, either. It was all intended. I always did have a dream girl. And she had a name. It was Mae. And that was her name. It made me feel queer when she told me. I never really expected to meet a dream girl. I expected to compromise. I tell you it was just as if she had known me all her life. When I told her about how I'd felt over there, she understood. I told her I felt as if I wanted to start out new in every way. I told her I wanted to see the folks, but that I didn't care to go back to things as they had been. I told her the homesickness had gone—that I would be happy anywhere 'way off with her. And she said she didn't care where I went, she would be willing to go."

"The southern moon was shining on those strolls you took," I suggested somewhat cynically.

"Yes, but you know I never would be influenced by moonlight. I have never been sentimental. But the moon was shining, and the mountain laurel was in full bloom. Magnolias, too. But I remember best the rainy night. I got all soaking wet going to see her, and she dried out my blouse and sewed the buttons on tighter and sewed the insignias and service stripes on my sleeve. 'You poor old private, you,' she laughed; 'you poor old private!'"

He touched the buttons that her fingers had touched with needle and thread. "How many girls would think to do a thing like that? She had so many little peculiarities that she was unconscious about, and I liked every one of them. There wasn't a thing she did or said that didn't just suit me. And those freckles, I wouldn't take away one of them."

"The other girl," I intruded.

"I've thought about her, too," he replied thoughtfully, "but if I married her we would both be miserable. That wouldn't be fair to her. The year over there did it. I can't express it, but somehow things had to be on a firmer foundation. I could always picture that other girl of mine giving me a limp handshake when I came back. Not that I would want her to make over me, but I would want her to understand that I had changed."

I wanted to know just how he proposed. For I had started a love story when he dropped in and the page in the typewriter had been before me all the time that he had been talking. And after you've written fiction for a few years your trade is apt to be the thing uppermost in your mind.

"Well—er—well, it wasn't anything stereotyped. We simply began discussing plans. There was nothing 'put on.' There wasn't the least doubt in either of our minds about it. We're simply going to be married this fall, that's all. And if it hadn't been for the war, if I hadn't been drafted, if I hadn't landed at Charleston instead of New York—I wanted to land in New York—if I hadn't volunteered to stay over and be discharged later, if I—— O, you can see it was all intended. I didn't expect to tell you all this, but I got started and it was on my chest. Ain't it a queer world? Ain't it odd, my going with a girl for ten years, and then going over there and getting these gray hairs, and then landing off down south there to find a girl that was waiting for me just the same as I had been really waiting for her? There is something wonderful about our lives, isn't there—something big? I ought not to have interrupted you. You were busy there at the typewriter when I came in."

I turned back to the typewriter when he had gone. And I took the story that I had started about an imaginary hero and heroine and tore the pages into bits.

THE RED SHAWL

SNYNOPISIS.

Revolution sweeps Grodnia. The king is killed by a mob, and his daughter, Princess Sabina, escapes in the garb of a peasant. An aged priest, Father Pokoff, accompanies her in flight. The two meet an American newspaper correspondent, Bob Hallam, who bribes guards to permit them to cross the border. Naroush Dupchinsky, a bolshevist, is assigned to seek and kill the princess. He takes passage for America on the same boat with the Princess Sabina, who is passing as a peasant girl, Sophia Gorev. Struck by the girl's beauty, Dupchinsky makes love to her, much to her distress. Chaos reigns in Grodnia, and Count Jan is sent by leaders of the old régime to find the princess that a marriage between the two may be arranged and the queen put upon her throne. He meets Hallam, en route home, confides his mission, and asks his aid. The princess reaches New York and goes into hiding. Dupchinsky annoys her. He boasts to her his mission, and she finally promises to marry him "when he has killed the princess." Nastia, the bolshevist's forsaken sweetheart, trails him to New York. Jan and Nastia both discover the princess, causing her great alarm. Hallam appears on the scene again. The princess rejects Jan and tells him that she will make no contest for the throne. As Dupchinsky is about to kill the princess, he himself is killed by Nastia. The princess, Nastia and Hallam are arrested and taken to police headquarters.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

THE EXCLUSIVE STORY.

OFFICERS McGONIGLE and Edwards were not unnecessarily rude. But murder is nothing to play with in this country of order and quiet. With avowed regrets to their friend Hallam they took into custody the princess, Nastia, Father Pokoff, and Hallam himself, and McGonigle accompanied them in an open machine, leaving his partner behind to turn the bodies of Jan and Dupchinsky over to the coroner's man.

Hallam reassured Sabina, who sat beside him in the car, that he would have her released on her recognizance—or his—before midnight, and that the priest would be freed with her.

"Thank you—once again," she whispered. "How can I ever thank you enough for all that you have so generously done for me?"

"I'll tell you when we have a calm half hour together," he breathed back. "Each time we meet so much happens that we haven't had much time to speak of personal things. But your statements tonight gave me much—much—may I say courage?"

"You may not. You never needed anything to give you courage."

"Hope, then?"

"That is better. Those who are brave and do things sometimes are modest and dare not hope things."

Hallam proved his courage forthwith. He squeezed her hand!

And when a girl is a princess to the world, and an ethereal angel to the man, moreover, and he is no hard hided lovemaker who has acquired an unbecoming ease with women, squeezing a hand in such a situation could be called no less than heroism. Sabina was not so brave. She withdrew her tiny hand from his, withdrew it gently and gradually, but withdrew it.

The touring car yanked up before the station on its brakes. McGonigle took Nastia by the elbow and led her to the entrance. He was not afraid of the others and permitted them to follow without ceremony.

The captain greeted Hallam warmly and began to add his apologies for the annoyance.

"Sorry to have to take you in," said the captain.

"Who's taken in?" asked Bob, pleasantly. "These are my prisoners, all except McGonigle."

And Hallam showed his secret service credentials.

"I was working on a bolshevik investigation for the immigration department when my case and I both ran into this murder mess. I was arresting—or trying to arrest—a notorious Grodnian anarchist, when this girl came up behind me and blew a few pills into him because of an incidental love affair."

This gave the dilemma a new horn, and Hallam gave the new horn a new twist.

"I'll turn the girl, Nastia, over to you as a federal prisoner temporarily," he said. "I'll take these others, who are only witnesses, into my own custody and will be responsible for their appearance anywhere and at any time that the police, the coroner, the district attorney, or any other officials require them. Good enough?"

"O. K."

"Thanks. Please see, then, that this girl is not questioned by any one or approached by any one. Her friends, this lady and this priest, will see that she has counsel in the morning. She is not to be reached by reporters or any others tonight, please. So long."

Sabina's eyes opened at the wonder work of her friend Hallam. Accustomed as she had been to official fixing, used as she had been to being allowed to pass where others were checked, she still marveled in this forbidding atmosphere, this strange place in a strange land, that Hallam could so easily open sesame himself and her through the bonds of the apparently proper and certainly regular authorities of a city of five millions.

She spoke a few words into Nastia's ear in Grodnian, assuring the girl that whatever she and Father Pokoff could do for her comfort and toward her defense would be contributed. She hesitated a second, then added that whatever Hallam could do would be at her disposal, too—she felt that she could safely guarantee this, and Hallam unquestionably could do a great deal.

McGonigle, looking a shade sheepish, led Nastia back into the police car to take her to the women's detention prison. Hallam summoned a taxi, handed the girl and the father into it, tossed an address to the driver which was unfamiliar to his guests, then joined them as the vehicle made off.

"I have taken the liberty," he explained, "to order us driven to my mother's home. I am certain that you could not spend the night in the—where you have been living."

"It is good of you. We accept gratefully," said the priest.

"You see," said Hallam, "I had to turn Nastia into custody, of course. She must be formally tried, though I think that a jury of Americans will send her out free and acquitted. As for you, I could not think of leaving you behind after what happened, even though I might have induced McGonigle to consent.

"Now, with Nastia safely in lavender, you shall be snugly installed in the one place where I know you will be welcome and as comfortable as our humble establishment permits. I must leave you almost immediately when we arrive, as I have much to do tonight."

"For Nastia?" asked the princess, naively.

"Yes—but only indirectly. For myself, first of all, I suppose, though in honest truth I am not worrying much about myself. For my paper."

"You will write the story tonight?" asked Sabina.

"Will I? Lovely lady—twenty-four hours is a thousand lifetimes on a newspaper. This is the most memorable 'beat'—a beat is an exclusive story—in half a century. I was there when it happened. I saw everything—had been seeing the preliminaries for days at close range, had seen the primary preliminaries thousands of miles from here months ago.

"I alone, of all newspaper men, have from the lips of Princess Sabina, herself, her renunciation of her royal claims. From her own lips I have been honored with her own viewpoint on the historic importance of this extraordinary episode. This is more than a story—it is ten stories.

"No other newspaper will have more than fragmentary facts. I have bottled up Nastia, the only other being who could furnish details or even give a salient hint as to the soul of this tale. No one else is in position to do more than scratch its surface as a mysterious double murder. Jan and Dupchinsky will probably be partially identified from the papers found on them by the coroner, but the facts will be confused and the full truth is impossible for an outsider to piece together tonight, though all the shrewdest reporters in town get on the chase, as they undoubtedly are, even now."

"It is as you say. It should be a great feather in your cap, Mr. Hallam," said the princess, not entirely displeased.

"You see how you can help me—how you have helped me?" asked Hallam.

"O—then that was what you meant—earlier—tonight—when——"

"Please. Pardon my interruption, but since you are kind enough to ask I must not waste a second in replying: No. That was not what I meant at all. And I deeply beg of you that you will not think harshly of me because I can give thought to a newspaper story—something which may even turn out to be of advantage to myself—at a time such as this, a climax in your life, undoubtedly the great crescendo hour of my own—and in this I do not mean as a newspaper man.

"But I dare to think that perhaps you will not misjudge my zeal. A man is pledged to his work, to his calling. On newspapers, especially, we are made to cherish a sense of loyalty to our institutions which is more than that spirit manifested ordinarily by men in commerce toward theirs. This means as much to me as winning a great battle single handed would to a soldier, because it means as much to my paper as the other would to that soldier's flag. Am I forgiven?"

"Right heartily—and thanked," answered Sabina. "It is the utmost desire of my mind that the world be acquainted with the truth in this matter before it becomes so garbled that the underlying fundaments of its significance are clouded. You will be doing my Grodnia—that is to say the country which gave me birth—and the entire world an immeasurable service, I am sure."

"You give me too much importance, I am afraid," said Bob. "But I shall endeavor to realize a little of it."

And again he was about to squeeze her hand; but this time he refrained. She was now his guest, and he could not presume as he could when they were both prisoners. Such distinctions as this made Hallam, the happy, snappy American boy, a paragon of good manners, chipper and cheery as he usually was. Kindness is the keynote to etiquette—or should be. He did not squeeze her hand—but lo! She squeezed his.

He fancied that she did, anyhow, when he gave her his hand to help her from the coach to the walk before his mother's home.

And Hallam was not given to overconfidence in such elusive calculations as women's favor.

Mrs. Hallam was awake. She never retired before her Bob came home when he was in town. She came to the door and saw, to her amazement, a man in clerical vestments and a dazzlingly charming girl in the doorway with her son.

"Mother, dear—this is—she," he said. "Princess Sabina, my mother. Mother dear, Father Pokoff."

Mrs. Hallam was no fishwife. The widow of a distinguished physician, herself a woman of fine education, she was not ill at ease in the society of strangers. But the suddenness of the meeting with a princess quite staggered her.

"My—my boy has—has so often told me so much of you," she hesitated.

"Of me?" asked the princess. "What was there to tell?"

Father Pokoff smiled at the innocent faux pas of Mrs. Hallam, for Bob, who had breezily stood before kings and calmly cross questioned them, was blushing.

The priest and the princess were soon made at home within. Bob in a few quick phrases acquainted his mother with the principal happenings of the day, then he surrendered his friends for the night to her hospitality and ran for the taxi, ordering the chauffeur to break all the known records to the editorial office.

The local room was in a panic when he dashed in, out of breath. The double killing had "broken" an hour earlier with a first hint that two foreigners had been shot in a lower east side house. That information, naked, was not essentially exciting. Stabbings and shootings in the poorer districts are not infrequent, and unless these affrays have atmospheric or unique "angles," they go for brief mention as vital statistics of a great municipality.

But a hint had come in that one of the dead seemed to be a count. No element of a story is more eagerly seized upon in a democracy than a title of nobility upon which to hang a news account. The additional feature of news merit lay in the sex of the alleged slayer. If a man shoots a man and the standing of the individuals or the scene of the tragedy or any other component germ gives to the item the value of a column of telling, then it is worth three columns by the same measures if a woman shot, was shot, or directly inspired the shooting.

The downtown mystery had already monopolized the available resources and the concentrated activities of the city editor's force when Hallam dashed in.

"Saved!" cried the night city editor. "O, Bob. Just in time. Just the man I want. Big shooting down on——"

"I got it," said Hallam. "Was there when it came off. Had a half-Nelson on the big bird when he was plugged, saw the other one go down, arrested the girl that killed 'em both, and salted her for the night. Princess and a priest were present—took them to my house where nobody'll get at 'em. Killings were due to love affair gone wrong, which only topped big international bolshevik plot on one side and royalist plot on the other. Princess renounces pretensions to throne. All exclusive—all set. Dig out photos Princess Sabina of Grodnia, pictures of riots when her father was assassinated, pictures of Count Jan of Grodnia—we've got 'em all. Anything else?"

The phlegmatic desk man—desk men either are or become that way—almost fainted.

"Don't string me," he gasped.

"String my eye! How much space we got?"

"The whole paper—for that kind of a yarn."

"Easy," said Hallam, and grabbed a bundle of "copy" paper and made tracks for his typewriter.

Editorial room details, young fiction writers are taught to understand, make poor reading. This probably is not true, but is due to an unwritten rule of editors, established through the generations as an instrument of self-defense against novices, who, having served their apprenticeships on the dailies, break into the magazines; and, invariably, the first story each novitiate turns out is a "newspaper yarn," because the trained reporter has learned in his training that he writes best what he knows most about, and he naturally knows most about the world in which he has moved, to which he has given of his blood and his sweat and his heart's squarest devotion.

But a rule is a rule, and, therefore, this narrative shall not steal too much of that precious thing known as "space" to tell of the mad whirl of editors about Hallam's machine through that long but all too short night when he was spinning out ream after ream of the amazing Princess Sabina story in all its phases and ramifications.

Sub-editors seeking infinitesimal information for headlines and picture captions, main editors checking him back on statements which were so thrilling that they seemed inaccurate, telegraph correspondents imploring him for special grains of data that might be of local interest to their faraway papers, though of no moment in the main running account—these and many more harassed him in all good intent as he plowed through page after page, muttering back an answer now and again over his shoulder in a monosyllable.

The other reporters, helpless in this monumental and epochal "beat" to add even a mite, for the whole thing was "cleaned up" on every end by Hallam, stood by and grouped about, rushed for wet proofs to follow the growing galleys of type as they came up from the composing room, and bit their thumbs—not in envy, for reporters do not know that; but in nervousness because a whopper of a tale was coming through and they couldn't pitch in to make it bigger, to make it better—for their paper.

A thousand times that night one whispered to the other:

"No use talking. Bob Hallam is the luckiest reporter that ever lived."

And a thousand and one times came back an answer something like this:

"Luck nothing! The goods. Bob Hallam's the best reporter that ever lived."

And so the paper came up at last. Every man of the staff remained that night to reach for a copy when the flying delivery boy strode in with the first fifty off the first rotary.

Some one handed one to Hallam, whose hands had dropped to his sides as he sat, exhausted and limber, blinking at his now silent "mill." The eight column headline looked blurred to him in all its yet moist blackness and its altitudinous type.

Ten editors had toiled and counseled over its phraseology for hours—there was so much to tell, and headlines allowed so few letters in which to tell even a partially adequate digest of the sensational, involved, historical, local, world-wide, romantic, political tragic story.

It said:

PRINCESS RENOUNCES THRONE AS GIRL MURDERS COUNT AND "RED."

A trifle feeble, Hallam thought. But it told the "news."

His tired eyes lighted as he read it again and saw that his suggestion had been followed—that the resignation of Sabina and her declaration of independence from all the fetters and fetishes of royalty topped the edition. This would please her.

From the headlines, past the "lead" of the main report and over the varied keylines and introductions of the divisional stories on selected radii of the general narrative he ran his glance, then to the "layout" of

The TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR

This is the first of a series of short stories by the late Charles E. Van Loan which will appear in this section of The Sunday Tribune—wholesome, thrilling, out-of-door stories of the type which made their author so famous. You will find them stories that stir your pulse, that bring to you a whiff of fresh air from the diamond or the smoke-laden atmosphere that hangs over the squared circle.

Life behind the scenes is always interesting, and Charles E. Van Loan looked behind the scenes of sport for his stories. He not only knew sports but loved them and saw the clean, bloodstirring side of them. You cannot afford to miss reading any of this series.

WHENEVER a recruit joined the Blue Jays—that famous minor league club which sends so many youngsters to the big leagues and takes veterans in exchange—the first thing that the recruit was likely to ask was, "Which is him?"

Nobody pretended to misunderstand that question. The players would point out a tall, thin man with a wrinkled forehead and hair turning gray at the temples, and the recruit would look his fill with reverence and some awe in his eyes. "Him" was none other than the great and only Bruno Smelzer—"Bruno of the ten thousand dollar arm"; and our fathers cheered themselves hoarse over him.

Bruno lasted several seasons as a big leaguer and then slipped quietly away to the minors—the training school for comers and the graveyard of the has-beens.

He signed with the Blue Jays because of the warm climate of their home town.

For the first few seasons the old timer found that his arm was still equal to the task of mixing curves and speed for nine innings; but after that he depended more and more upon his head, coaxing his ten thousand dollar arm with every artifice at his command. Perhaps no man ever made a more exhaustive study of the art of cutting down the number of pitched balls to the minimum and lasting nine innings with the least possible expenditure of energy. Bruno was a past master of every annoying trick by which a pitcher "sneaks over a strike ball" upon a dangerous hitter; and he lay awake at night planning new strategies, always with an eye to saving his arm as much work as possible.

The curve ball, of course, was hardest upon his arm, so as time went on he pitched very few of them—and then simply to prove to the batter that he still had a bender. When Bruno stopped to spit the catcher knew that the curve was coming—and it broke Smelzer's heart to throw one.

Charlie Grubb was the manager and team captain for the Blue Jays, who held his job in spite of the fact that he was always at war with the owner, Dave Bullen. Charlie did not have any particular love for Bruno and would have been glad to rid himself of the veteran; but the only time he mentioned this to Bullen he ran headfirst into a stone wall.

Grubb was furious. He complained that Bruno would upset the regular routine of the pitchers who worked in turn, but by special dispensation Bruno became a law unto himself.

Bruno figured that he should pitch thirty times a season, and he prepared himself for each contest as carefully as a debutante preparês for her coming out party. This preparation, which never varied, was quite a ceremonious affair.

When the early birds—and every team has two or three baseball "bugs" who show up at the clubhouse at noon—found all the doors and windows closed, and were saluted upon entry by a withering blast which would have done credit to a Turkish bathhouse, they knew that Bruno was "readying up for a game." He was sure to be sitting by the stove, stripped to the waist and soaking in the terrific heat like a salamander.

The other players complained of the heat in the clubhouse—and well they might, for the weather was usually hot enough to suit any one—but Bruno never paid the slightest attention. One o'clock was the hour set for "limbering up." He would rise and put his left arm through a gentle course of calisthenics, bending the elbow and stretching the muscles for half an hour. Then out would come a two quart glass jar of the precious "dope" with which Bruno would smear his left arm from wrist to shoulder, not forgetting the back muscles.

The Blue Jays of seven years ago will never forget what happened when Major Bones, newly appointed as official rubber, joined the club. Major Bones was a young Negro who had worked in a Turkish bathhouse long enough to get the idea that what he did not know about massage treatment was not worth bothering to learn. He was also ambitious to please, and it shocked him to see one of the players rubbing his own arm. The major leaped to the conclusion that Bruno was doing his own work because the former rubber had been incompetent.

"Jus' you lemme have that ol' ahm, suh," said the major by way of introduction. "I'll show you how I ust' rub Misteh Kid McCoy!"

Smelzer grunted in surprise and went on kneading and pinching his biceps. Major Bones pressed his suit warmly. When he arrived at the direct statement that no mere ball player could rub his own arm and do the job properly, Bruno, who was a peaceful soul and loved quiet so well that he would do battle for it, picked up a chair and knocked Major Bones head over heels through a locker door.

"She's there today, boys!" he would say. By which he meant that the ten thousand dollar arm was ready to earn its salary.

Then, of course, Grubb had no alternative. Smelzer would pitch and Sullivan would catch. A strong friendship existed between Smelzer and Sullivan. Both were veterans, and Sullivan had taken infinite pains to learn Smelzer's peculiarities. With Steve Sullivan behind the bat Bruno's little strategies reached their highest power, and away they would go, with Bruno doing the signaling and Steve hanging out a set of false signals for the coachers to see and tip to the batters.

By years of practice Bruno had acquired alarming proficiency in one trick which required Sullivan's collaboration. Ordinarily foul balls against the grandstand netting were tossed back to the catcher by players from the bench. When Bruno worked Steve Sullivan did his own retrieving. When Steve picked up the ball he would toss it back to Bruno, who would at once step into the box ready to pitch. Sullivan, returning to the plate, would pick up his mask where he had dropped it—always behind the batter and from six to ten feet away from the plate. As Steve picked up the mask he would address some remark to the batter, calculated to extract a reply. If the batter turned his head to answer Sullivan would drop the mask and dive into position, for the turn of the batter's head was Bruno's cue to slam the ball over for a strike. Managers howled, team captains protested, but there was nothing in the rules to prevent Smelzer's throwing the ball, and if Sullivan cared to dash over and take one without his mask, that was Steve's risk.

Charlie Grubb, second baseman with the team for six years and playing manager for four, found his trouble at last. A recruit from the wilds of Wyoming literally elbowed the boss out of his place at second. Charlie had no wish to become bench manager, and he hung on as long as he could; but he could not conceal the fact that he was no longer hitting in the .275 class, and to make it worse his legs were going back on him. McRae, the Wyoming recruit, was not only a sensational infielder, but he could hit like a Delehanty and he was a streak on the bases.

In the end the manager was forced to retreat and McRae got his chance—and made good.

To make the situation worse for Grubb, the Blue Jays struck a phenomenal winning streak which carried them through the first division and to the top for the first time in four years. As Grubb had been at considerable pains to make enemies out of the newspaper men, the sporting writers at once pointed out that but for Grubb's obstinacy and bullheadedness the team might have been in front much sooner.

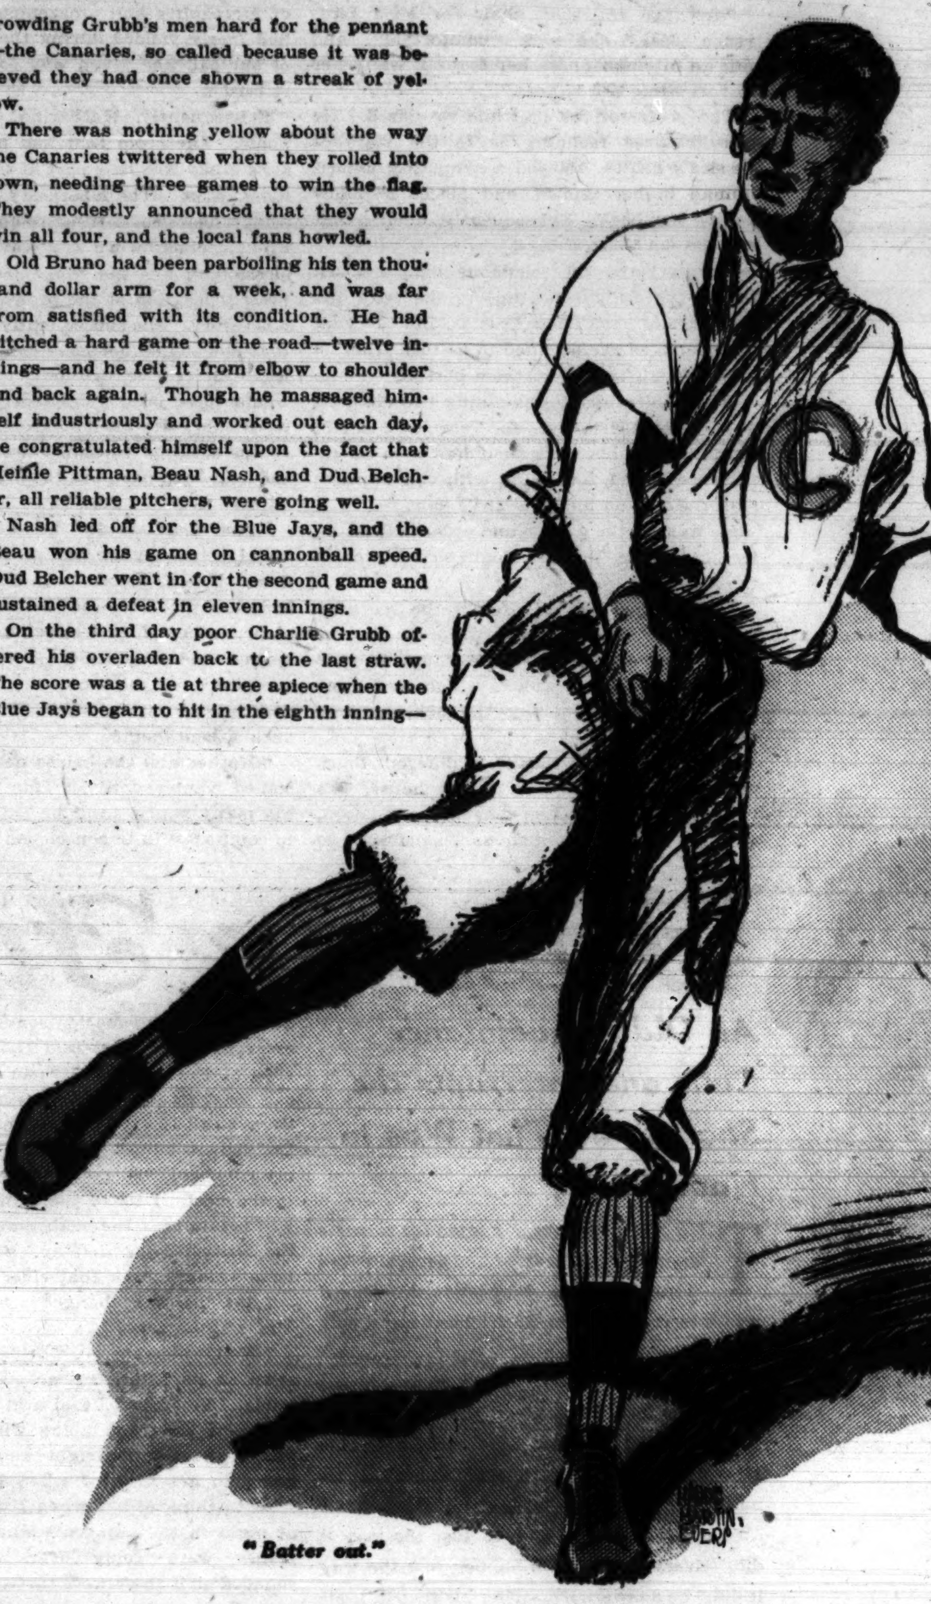
This was the situation when the Blue Jays came winging home for the four games which were to close the season. As luck had it, the four games were with the club which was crowding Grubb's men hard for the pennant—the Canaries, so called because it was believed they had once shown a streak of yellow.

There was nothing yellow about the way the Canaries twittered when they rolled into town, needing three games to win the flag. They modestly announced that they would win all four, and the local fans howled.

Old Bruno had been parboiling his ten thousand dollar arm for a week, and was far from satisfied with its condition. He had pitched a hard game on the road—twelve innings—and he felt it from elbow to shoulder and back again. Though he massaged himself industriously and worked out each day, he congratulated himself upon the fact that Heinie Pittman, Beau Nash, and Dud Belcher, all reliable pitchers, were going well.

Nash led off for the Blue Jays, and the Beau won his game on cannonball speed. Dud Belcher went in for the second game and sustained a defeat in eleven innings.

On the third day poor Charlie Grubb offered his overladen back to the last straw. The score was a tie at three apiece when the Blue Jays began to hit in the eighth inning—began to hit with one out and Grubb coaching off third base. McRae and Skeets Tilford, the two heaviest hitters on the team, were coming up. McRae slammed a fast ball into center field and was off around the bases like a deer. Jimmy McLennon, the Canary center fielder, played the ball off the fence, and when McRae was between second and third the dullest fan on the bleachers saw Jimmy relay to Wingo Jones back of second base.



"Batter out."

Grubb lost his head completely and signaled McRae to keep on to the plate, and the boy had no choice but to obey the manager. Wingo Jones whipped the ball home thirty feet ahead of McRae—as needless a slaughter as was ever seen on a professional diamond.

Coming from any coacher in the world, the blunder would have been inexcusable; coming from poor Charlie Grubb, it nearly precipitated a riot, and the demonstration swelled tenfold when Skeets Tilford drove out the single which should have scored McRae from third. And if that was not enough, the Canaries banged out the winning run in their half of the ninth. Grubb's error of judgment picking the kindest name for it—had thrown away a cinch on the pennant, and Heinie Pittman, who had pitched a remarkable game, came near weeping in the clubhouse.

The next morning Dave Bullen was called out of his bed to answer the telephone. He was informed that his manager was seriously ill at his hotel. The overwrought nerves had given way under the strain of months of criticism, abuse, and innuendo, and the doctor in charge of the case promptly killed any hope that the manager might be able to appear that afternoon at the park.

Bullen was at his wits' end. He had no experience in managing a club, and Piggy Powell, who had been acting as team captain, was really no more than the mouthpiece through which Grubb had issued orders from the bench. In despair, the owner went to the clubhouse. It was 11 o'clock in the morning, yet there was the aged Bruno pottering around in his capacious locker.

"You're the man I've been looking for," said Bullen.

The Canaries sent in their pet and pride, Whitey Collier, and the Blue Jays fell upon him like a flock of chicken hawks. In the third inning they rattled out a volley of safe hits and piled up four runs. Whitey went to the bench and Oscar Petersen replaced him in the box. The hitting stopped abruptly.

In the fifth inning the hitting started on the other side of the diamond. The Canaries were gauging Nash's speed and meeting it solidly. With the bases filled, one man in, and one out, Bruno flagged the Beau and sent Belcher to the rescue. Luck helped Belcher to get the next two men at the cost of no more than an additional run. Score: Blue Jays, 4; Canaries, 2.

In the sixth the Canaries continued to hit and drove in their third run on three singles. Brilliant fielding cut them off just short of a tied score. Steve Sullivan, who was catching, came back to the bench dripping wet.

"It's the speed, Bruno," he said. "These fellows are hitting speed today. Now, if we only had a man to go in there with a dink ball——"

Smelzer moved over and questioned Belcher.

"I pitched my head off to every man in that inning," complained Dud; "and if you think there wasn't anything on the ball, ask Steve. They hit it just the same. Why, that Wingo Jones lit on that break ball of mine so hard that it nearly picked Piggy off his feet. Good thing he held it, eh? O, these fellows are only lucky—that's all. They're

"Three innings to go," thought Bruno—"three innings."

"Steve!" he called. Sullivan moved over and sat down by the acting manager. "I'm going to warm up for a minute," said the old man. "Delay this inning all you can."

Bruno and the change catcher sliped out of the side gate as the last of the sixth began.

"Is that old fool going in?" demanded Nash, still smarting from the peppering which he had received.

"Yo'u shut up!' snarled Sullivan. "These fellows have been murdering speed today. Bruno will make suckers of 'em. See if he doesn't."

"Can you do it?" asked the catcher anxiously when Smelzer came back to the bench. "How's the arm?"

"Sore," said Bruno briefly. "I'm taking an awful chance. Steve; but if I leave Dud in there they'll just about knock him endways next inning. I guess the old girl will stand three innings all right, and the control's there. That's the main thing. We'll work that mask trick on 'em if we get a chance. I haven't tried it against this club since June."

When Umpire Burke made the announcement at the beginning of the seventh, there was a feeble cheer from the stand. The fans had an enormous respect for the aged Bruno, but they did not like to see him gambling his venerable southpaw against a pennant. Baseball fans like to see speed and wide-breaking curves, and Bruno had neither. The Canaries welcomed the announcement with derisive hoots and jeers.

"Well, here's grandpa!" they shouted. "Old man, what are you going to do with that ten thousand dollar curio?"

Bruno set his spikes in the box and began to pitch. It was the first time for many years that he had gone into the box knowing that his arm was not "right." He was grinning cheerfully when he slipped over the first strike, but the smile soon faded from his face. The ten thousand dollar arm, so long coddled and nursed and petted like a spoiled child, was sending in its sharp protest. Bruno set his jaw with a time lock and thanked whatever gods he knew that the "old control was still there."

The nervous fans chirked up marvelously when the first hitter splashed out, via third base, and the second one fouled to Sullivan. The third batter—and this was the demon Jimmy McLennon, whose hitting was taking him to the big league next season—lined a single into center and presumed upon his luck to the extent of attempting to steal second base. The Honorable Stephen Sullivan came up on his toes with a perfect throw, and the chesty outfielder perished in a cloud of dust and a whirl of arms and legs—Sullivan to McRae.

The Blue Jays succeeded in getting two men on bases in their half of the seventh, but Billy Keith, the first baseman, sent a line drive fairly at the shortstop's head. Instinct caused that young man to throw up his hands to save his face—and the ball stuck, was passed on for a double play, and the side was out.

Bruno wriggled through the eighth inning somehow. He was holding the Canaries, but his arm was totaling the cost for him as well as a cash register might have done the job. Every ball cost him an effort, and the pain in the shoulder was becoming unbearable. The redoubtable Wingc Jones doubled after two men were out, but the next man poked a weak infield fly, and Bruno trudged back to the bench with the blessings of the multitude thundering after him.

"I'll be all winter getting the old girl back into shape again," he mourned to Sullivan, as he slipped into his thickest white sweater and selected his bat. Bruno at the bat was more or less of a joke, and Oscar Petersen refused to waste time with the old man. He curved three strikes over for Smelzer, and Bruno limped back to the bench. Not for anything would he have taken a hard swing at a ball. Two more Blue Jays were plucked in quick order, and Sullivan helped to peel off the pitcher's sweater.

"Well, Steve," said Bruno, "it looks as if this one run lead will have to do us!"

"One run is a whole lot when you ain't got it," said Steve philosophically. Judging by the "crabbing" on the visitors' bench, the Canaries thought so too.

Corson, their catcher, was the standard bearer of their forlorn hope. "Rube" Corson was a dangerous batter if he could get a ball anywhere between his waist and his knees. A high ball he could do nothing with.

With exasperating precision, Bruno lobbed over two strikes, each one fully as high as the law allowed. Corson thought they were too high, and barked at the umpire. Then he waited, swearing savagely under his breath.

"Why, Clarence!" said Sullivan, in a high falsetto. "Shame on you! I believe you're angry!"

Corson waggled his bat up and down and took a good spikehold. O, what he would do to one between the belt and the stockings! Murder! Corson waited, nervously chopping circles with his bludgeon, glaring at old Bruno. Bruno's face was toward the plate, and Brúno was in position to pitch, but his eyes were lowered and his face wore an expression of deep thought. Corson seized the oportunity to paw another hole in the ground and rub his right palm against his thigh, in order to take a firmer grip on the bat. Without looking up, Bruno stepped suddenly forward and over came the ball, taking Corson entirely by surprise.

"A peach!" said Umpire Burke. "Yer out!"

The Blue Jays on the bench howled with delight, the infield sent up a scattering volley of yells, and the fans hopped up and down. Corson went back to the bench, tearing up the turf with his lagging spikes, for all the world like a bad little boy dragging his feet in a dusty road.

"A-h-h-h-h!" he growled when his teammates began to blister his tough hide with reproaches; "who'd have thought that old stiff would have the nerve to pull that bush league trick in a tight game like this?"

The pitcher was next on the list, and Harry Keane, manager of the Canaries, sent in a substitute for Petersen—a big, rawboned outfielder named Merrill. Merrill was overanxious and very nervous, and Bruno kept him waiting a long time. Then he sent up such a feeble looking cripple of a ball, such a discouraged, wabbly sort of a ball, that Merrill afterward swore that he saw the trade mark on the horsehide turn over nine times on its way to the plate. This gave him plenty of time to think what he was going to do to that trade mark, which was Bruno's idea, a "floater" being the most effective ball in the world against a nervous hitter. About the time that Merrill really made up his mind to tear the trade mark loose he fouled that dinky offering over the grand stand.

"Huh—strike!" said Burke.

Merrill thumped the plate with his bat.

"Mercy!" said Steve Sullivan. "You're angry, too, aren't you, Eddie? I'll bet you won't hit the next one at all. If you could hit hard enough to earn your one-twenty-five a month, Keane wouldn't have been playing you on the bench all season!"

Now, it was a sprained ankle that sent Merrill to the bench, and Sullivan knew it. The big outfielder spluttered incoherently—and over came the ball. Merrill collected himself for another giant swing—and flew out back of second base.

Rayburn, the second baseman, seeing that he was going to get nothing but strikes, chopped at the first one and dropped a Texas leaguer over on the third base line and half way between two fielders. He could not have placed it better had he used a messenger boy, and the throw to second did not come near catching him. Two bases on a Texas leaguer!

"Sap" Halsey, the right fielder, also smashed at the first ball, and drove a vicious liner toward first base. Billy Keith knocked it down and chased after it, and Bruno, his aged legs working like drumsticks, raced over and toed the bag ahead of Halsey, all in vain, for Keith could not make the toss in time. Result: Halsey on first and Rayburn on third, ready to sneak home on a fumbled throw to second, a passed ball, or a hit.

Jimmy McLennon, the .325 hitter and prospective big leaguer, tossed away two of the three bats which he had been swinging, and advanced to the plate. He was the worst man Bruno might have been called upon to face in this crisis.

The veteran stood still for several seconds, glancing from first to third, as if watching the runners. Bruno was thinking hard. Here was a man who was almost certain to hit any sort of a ball that came over the plate. Pittman had been warming up for two innings, and Heine had at least a sound pitching arm, but he was young and had nerves. Bruno was an old man, without a nerve in his body, unless those were nerves which were sending fiery pains through his left shoulder.

"No," thought Bruno. "No. It was put up to me. I'll stick. And I won't walk this bird, either! The next fellow is a good hitter, too."

The veteran stabbed the turf with his spikes and spat courageously. He had not pitched a curve ball thus far. It was likely that the Canaries knew it. Halsey would steal on that first ball, anyway; but would Keane have the nerve to send Rayburn along to the plate on a double steal? Bruno doubted it. Keane would be more likely to place his dependence upon Jimmy McLennon's bat. Bruno signed Sullivan to hold the ball and let Halsey go down. It was gambling upon what McLennon might do, but Bruno felt reasonably certain that the batter would wait for Halsey to reach second base.

Attempting a curve with his arm in its painful condition seemed like burning up the fag end of the ten thousand dollar wing, but Bruno set himself and let fly, and out of the corner of his eye he saw Halsey start down on the pitch. The ball went twisting across the outside corner and McLennon swept his bat over the plate, taking the one chance in a thousand that the movement might confuse the catcher and make him miss the ball. Steve whirled toward third base with his arm raised for the throw, but Rayburn dodged back to the bag, and the stage was set for trouble.

"Now, then, Jimmy!" shouted Keane. "We've got this old man just where we want him! Lay on it, boy! Lay on it!"

The home fans became silent. The few Canary rooters present set up a valiant twittering, a very small noise in a great and apprehensive hush.

Bruno hitched at his belt—it was his sign for his "break" ball. This time, with desperation to lend the wrist its old time snap, the ball broke for him—and McLennon misjudged it. His pile driving smash tipped a foul against the wire netting of the grand stand.

Mechanically Steve dropped his mask behind McLennon and trotted after the ball. Would the old fellow have the nerve to try his best trick in a pinch of this sort?" Two strikes and no balls! Was there a chance to heckle McLennon into that instant's inattention? Sullivan threw the ball back as soon as he picked it up, and Bruno took it with one hand. That was the sign. Yes, the old fellow was going to try it! Steve Sullivan had some nerve himself, but he stole a glance at Rayburn, crouching off third base like a greyhound in leash, and he thought of what might happen if there should be a fumble at the end of that blind jump behind the plate. Steve had no great supply of imagination, but for an instant he had the feeling that his belt buckle had been turned to ice.

Bruno, standing in the box, knew that this was his only hope. There was one more effort in his tortured old ten thousand dollar arm, and all he asked was the chance to make that effort, and speed enough to sneak that ball over the plate—somehow.

Sullivan came slowly back toward the plate, in order to give Bruno time to set himself. McLennon was motionless, save for a slight oscillating movement which he imparted to the bat.

Steve squatted behind the batter and picked up his mask, half raising it to his face.

"You're the terrible hitter who's going up to the big league next season, they tell me," said he with a sneer. "You can hit some in the bushes, but once you get up there, Christy Mathewson and the rest of those boys will take that big bat away from you, and you'll be so light without it that you'll float!"

McLennon half turned his head.

"O, you be——"

It was all over before any one found time to yell. As McLennon took his eyes off the pitcher, Steve jerked the mask away and leaped forward like a panther. McLennon swung back again, but the mischief had been done. The last thing the demon hitter heard before the storm broke was the thud of the ball in the glove and Burke's yell:

"Batter out!"

Half an hour later Dave Bullen tore himself away from the wine party at the corner place. The mayor was there, and many prominent citizens, and they were all very happy. The owner found the Blue Jays in the club house, singing like linnets and scuffling in the shower room, where they were living over again the excitement of the last inning—that is to say, all but two of them.

Smelzer was sitting in his chair in front of his locker, his left arm pressed tight against his side and his right hand clasped over his left shoulder. He had hot removed his sogged uniform shirt. Sullivan stripped to the waist, was sitting beside him.

Bullen walked over to Bruno's corner.

"Bruno," said he, "that was the greatest—why, what's the matter?"

The old pitcher looked up, his face twisted with pain.

"My arm!" he said. "My arm!"

"He threw it away in that last inning," said Sullivan. "I saw Chris Townsend do the same thing five years ago—go in with a sore arm and kill it off in one inning."

"She's gone this time, Dave," said Bruno miserably. "Just as sure as I'm sitting here, I felt her go sailing clean over the plate when I threw that last ball. These young fellows may hurt their arms and come back again, but—I guess I'm all done, Dave."

"Well," said the owner slowly," I wasn't figuring on pitching you next season, anyway. I'm sorry I didn't tell you before, but Grubb's contract expires this month, and I had you picked out for his job."

"Manager!" gasped Sullivan, for Brune seemed unable to rise to the occasion. "O, pretty soft! Pretty soft!"

"Yes," said Bullen; "and even if I hadn't had you in mind right along, Bruno, I'd have given it to you on the strength of what you did for me today."

"Me!" said Bruno. "Why, Steve here had as much to do with that as I did. All I had to do was lam that ball over—Steve had to take a burglar's chance on stopping that strike! If you're handing things around, pass something to Steve Sullivan here!"

"Good idea!" said Bullen. "You're the manager now. Why don't you raise Steve's salary?"

"By grab!" said Bruno, "I will!"

It was dusk in the club house. The players had gone to their home. The floor was covered with discarded uniforms, empty liniment bottles, old stockings, and worn shoes. Maj. Bones, older and wiser, was singing softly to himself as he moved about, packing up the articles of his trade. Several times he paused and looked over in the corner where Bruno Smelzer sat, passing his hand mechanically over his bare left shoulder. There was a strong smell of alcohol in the room, and eucalyptus oil.

At last the major ventured over toward the corner.

"Mist' Smelzer," he asked, "ain't they something I can do fo' you?"

The new manager of the Blue Jays looked up. He had been twenty years into the past, dreaming of the time when his arm had brought ten thousand dollars.

"Eh?" he said. "What did you say, major?"

"I says, ain't they something I kin do befo' I go home?"

Bruno stood up and shook himself, swinging his bare left arm by his side.

"Why, yes," he said. "Major, I wish you'd see if you can do anything with this arm of mine."

"Yes, suh! Yes, indeed!" said Maj. Bones, with a grin.

Movie Stars and Producers Are Seaching the Country for New Suitable Scenarios—Read How This New High-Paid Art Is Easily Mastered.

THE moving picture industry is facing a famine—a famine in story plots—photoplays. Prices undreamed of a few years ago are being paid today—$500 to $1000 and more for 5-reel dramatic scripts; $100 to $500 for clever short comedies. For the studios—around Los Angeles alone—need approximately 3000 new stories each year. Producers must have material—new plots, especially written for the screen.

And now a plan—the first to be endorsed by the leading stars and producers—has been designed to teach you how to prepare your ideas for the screen. The plan was created by Frederick Palmer, formerly of Universal—the man who wrote 52 scenarios in 9 months—more than one a week—all accepted. Mr. Palmer furnishes you with a handbook and cross references to scenarios that have been PRODUCED. Both drama and comedy are represented. Since we started a little over a year ago, many of our students have sold their plays, some for as high as $1,000. A number of our students have already taken positions at the studios.

KATHERINE MAC DONALD first made her bow to the screen in—I think—a Douglas Fairbanks picture. She made good and has been in pictures ever since.

Miss MacDonald was born in Pittsburgh and went to a Pennsylvania college. Not long after her graduation Mr. Fairbanks met her and was struck with her beauty. He asked her if she'd like to try pictures and she said she would. She appeared in "Riddle Gawme" and "Shark Monroe" with Mr. Hart, if you remember. Her latest work has been in "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," in which she has been highly praised.

Blue eyes and blonde hair hath this lady. Her height is five feet 8 inches and she weighs 134 pounds.

MILTON SILLS! At last the photographer "got" him. Dear knows it took long enough to get an honest to goodness picture of him—so shy he is, just like David Powell!

And now, here's about him. Born in Chicago and educated at the University of Chicago. Stage career? For eight years he was leading man working for Belasco, Shubert, Brady and Frohman. He started his screen work with Goldwyn, and since that time has made pictures for various studios—Fox, Goldwyn, Select, World and Universal. His last work was done for Famous Players.

This handsome and shy screen asset is a great home lover, they tell me—loves his books, library and, I do believe I heard, his wife and son. He's six feet tall, weighs 180 pounds, has light hair and gray eyes. Yum!

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York.

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame. It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you use this pure, harmless rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. If your dealer refuses to get you a package, you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th Street, New York. Save this notice.

The SCUTTLING of the GERMAN FLEET

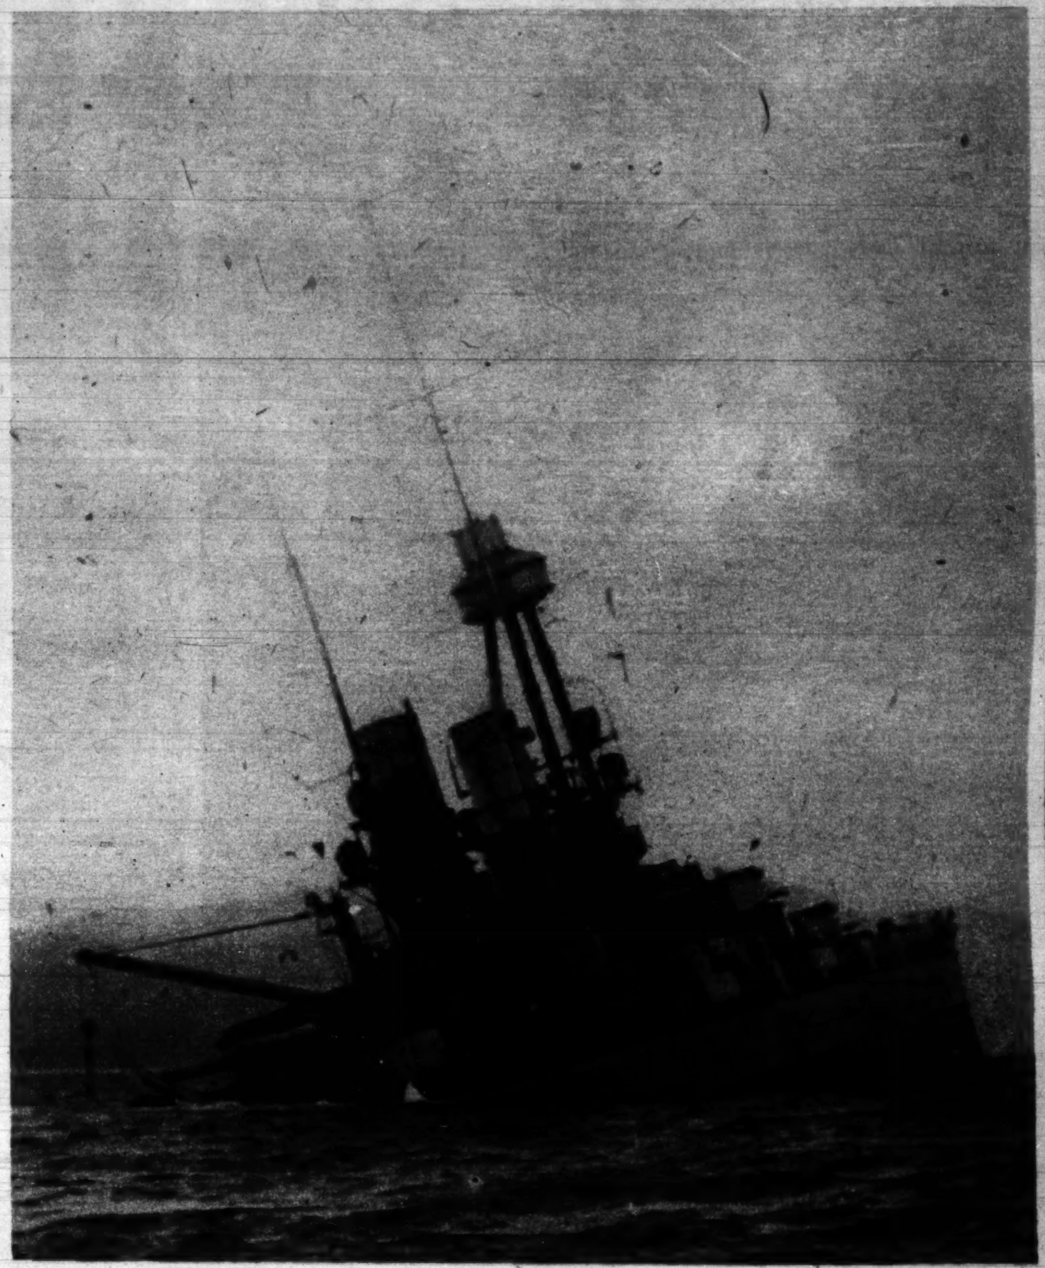
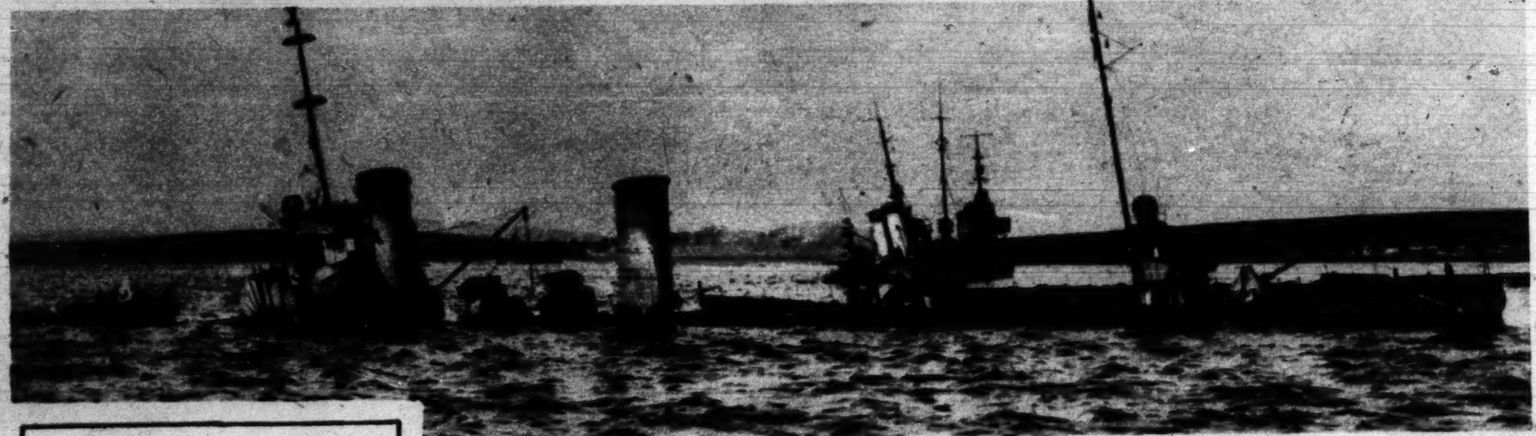
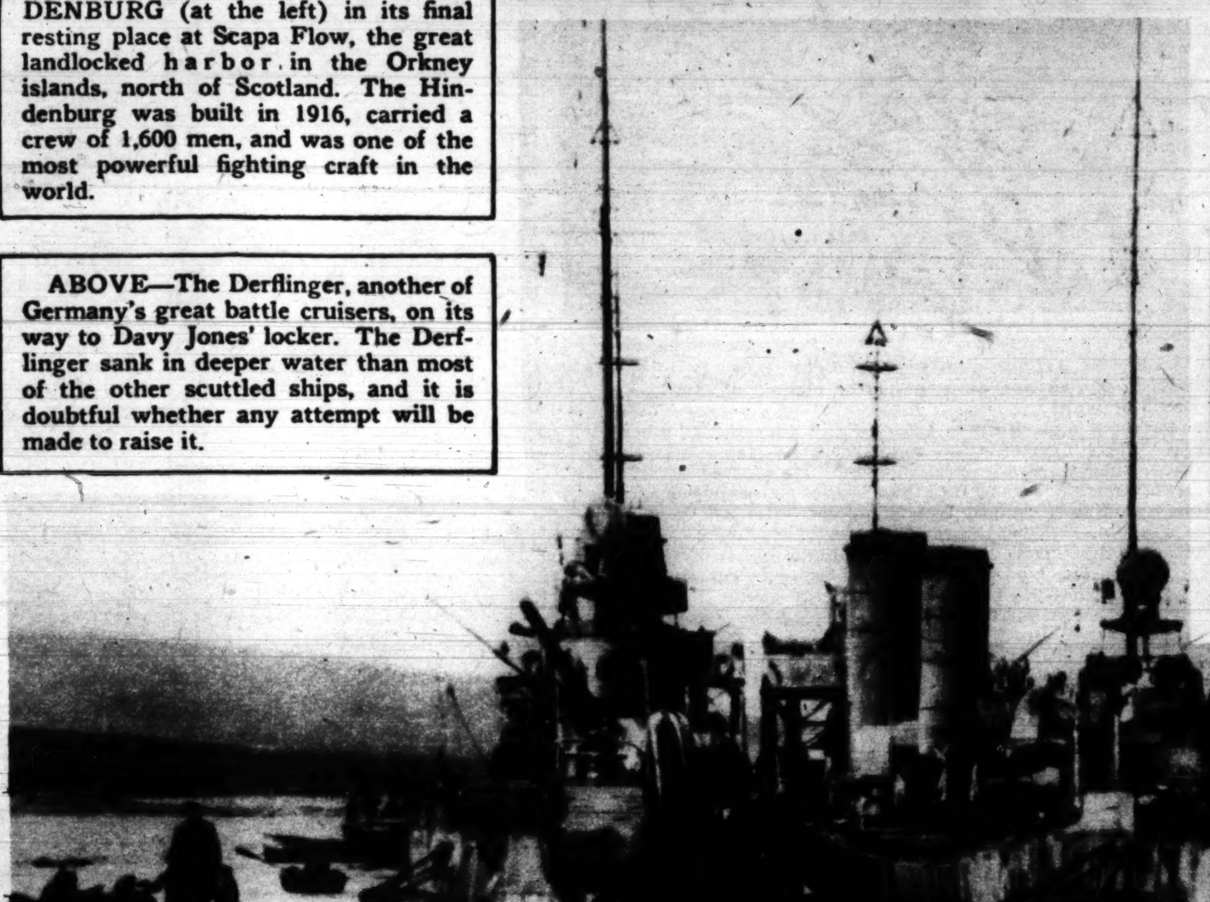
ABOVE—The Derflinger, another of Germany's great battle cruisers, on its way to Davy Jones' locker. The Derflinger sank in deeper water than most of the other scuttled ships, and it is doubtful whether any attempt will be made to raise it.



THE BAYERN taking the plunge shortly after her crew had opened the seacocks and pulled away in small boats. This 28,000 ton monster was the largest of the ships turned over to the allies under the terms of the armistice.

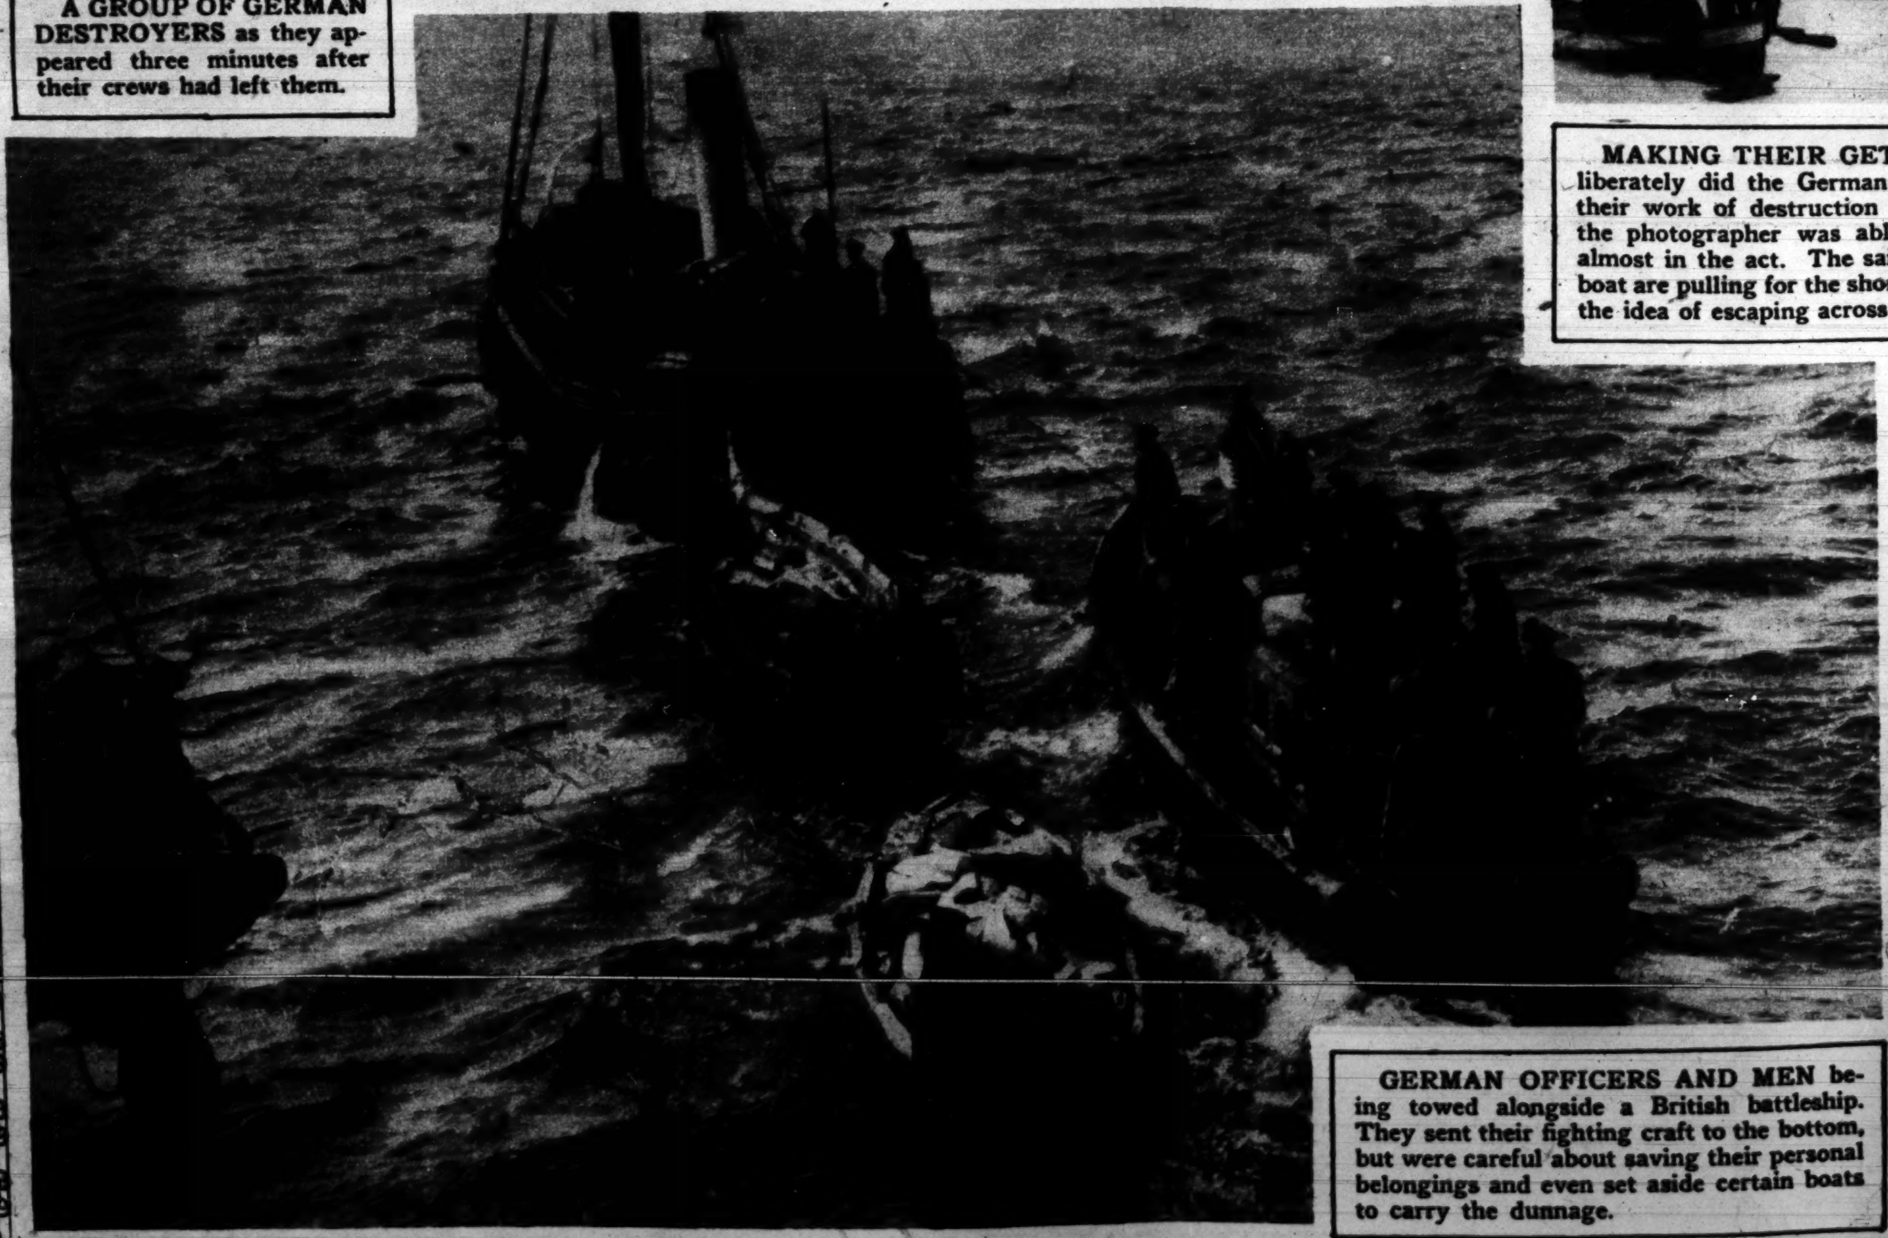


A GROUP OF GERMAN DESTROYERS as they appeared three minutes after their crews had left them.



MAKING THEIR GETAWAY—So deliberately did the German crews set about their work of destruction that in this case the photographer was able to catch them almost in the act. The sailors in the small boat are pulling for the shore, evidently with the idea of escaping across country.

BELOW—One of the German crews lined up under British guard like a lot of guilty schoolboys. Despite their thorough preparations, some of them got a ducking and turned up wrapped in blankets.



GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN being towed alongside a British battleship. They sent their fighting craft to the bottom, but were careful about saving their personal belongings and even set aside certain boats to carry the dunnage.

Many Are The Styles In Skirts

By Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

IN the two left hand models in the center group, one is a pale pink georgette trimmed with bands of pink tricolette and the other an apricot tinted georgette inset with filet lace. The figure at the right of the center group wears an accordion plaited white rajah silk with insets of black satin. At the extreme right we find an elaborate skirt in which white georgette combines with white silk. The other seated figure wears white gabadine.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.) There is one sea of style where the Pariscope seldom shows itself. It is that of the separate skirt and blouse. True, the Parisienne invented the casaque, the blouse in serial form, and lately she has been specializing more or less in this domain. But the separate skirt and the "tuck-in" blouse—ah, this is typically American. It is so much so that it is almost our national uniform.

We have progressed a long way, however, from the days when the "thin" skirt was a sort of tailored poultice. More and more coquetries appear each year in this garment. And in place of the oppressive piques and linens and ducks, which used to usurp summer skirtdom, we now have creations of silk that look as if Queen Mab had been rag-timing and all the fairies taken to jazzing their cobwebs.

To be sure, there must always be a few of the practical plain white skirts in every woman's summer wardrobe. Cotton gabardine might almost be said to be the roast beef of our separate skirt menu. And, though its place is now rivaled by the cooler dotted Swiss and organdy and dimity skirts, which have advanced to such a firm place in fashion, the gabardine skirt is a classic.

The seated figure at the right is wearing a new model of gabardine skirt. Nothing startling, but then one does not expect this kind of white skirt to go off like July fireworks. It shows an effective arrangement of the popular horizontal tucks, extending even to the belt and the little crescent shaped pocket. With this is worn a blouse of yellow organdy with filet collar and cuffs.

Speaking of the tuck-in blouse, it would seem as if the newer tunic blouse had done little to eclipse the popularity of its more established relative. The tuck-in blouse is really used for less formal wear than the casaque. The truth of it is, too, that this type of waist permits the skirt to be a little bit more of a heroine. For, whereas the beauty and agility of a separate skirt are hidden by the long blouse; whereas, indeed, the ornate casaque demands a plain type of skirt, the under the girdle type permits all kinds of skirtotechnics.

These tuck-in blouses are often of flowered georgette and oftener of organdy. The latter material comes in white, in pastel shades, and in more violent colors such as, of course, jade green. Various sets of berthas and cuffs often go with one waist and these are generally of organdy or mull. Such sets at present show only delicate hand embroidery and hand stitching, as against the more elaborate models of another season.

The white silk skirt still reigns. Favored materials are either of Baronet satin or of one of the rough weave silks, like rajah. At the right of the center group is shown a new model of a white silk skirt—this of rajah, accordeon plaited, and inset with diamonds of black satin. And, by the way, with a white skirt it is now considered dashing to wear bright blue silk stockings. The shoes are, of course, of white canvas or buckskin.

But, though many skirts are of white silk, colors are selected by many smart women. These colors chiefly are green, orange, rose, and lilac, and with a skirt of this kind one wears most becomingly a transparent white tunic blouse and a floppy Leghorn hat, trimmed with flowers or ribbon to match the skirt.

Of course, the coolest and most practical and most spectacular of separate skirts are of georgette, either in white or color. In the middle of the center group we show one of these georgette skirts, this with a tunic, which is set off by a wide band of filet lace. The color used here is a lovely apricot. And, by the way, lace of various kinds is much used on the more elaborate kind of skirt. In fact, ribbon quillings, insets of other materials, lace—well, what have we already said about coming a long way from the sail-like plainness of those old-time tucks and piques?

It would seem, indeed, that no skirt had to make up its mind definitely about what material it was going to be. One sees all sorts of "half and half" mixtures nowadays, and in this connection we present the last skirt—the one worn by the seated figure at the left. Here the upper portion is formed by white georgette tucked and scalloped, and there, where it joins the under section of white rough weave silk, embroidered in white thread. This is worn with a graceful mantle of black satin lined with jade green, and upon that, O so maidenly hat of black horsehair, we find merely jade green ribbon.

The separate skirt this year is neither an ankle policeman nor an indulgent stranger. It is neither narrow nor wide. And, as to length, well, would you believe it, that is really sensible? Perhaps the preferred one is about six or seven inches above the ground.

And how about our true and tried friend, the sweater? This garment is generally now of wool in preference to silk or fibre. Worn with white satin skirts, it may be jade, turquoise, purple, or a soft shade of pink. It is most popularly of the slip-on variety and a narrow belt of either white or black kid often confines it. The smartest shade just now seems to be a soft light brown. Worn with white kid belt, this is much more stunning than those murky black things of a year ago.

As for sleeves, they are now nearly as varied in style as the skirts. You see the sleeve which has taken the ultra short line of Paris and you see the long sleeve ending in a bizarre cuff. And then of course there is the three-quarter sleeve—we shall never be able to get away from that, try as we will.

As for the new silhouette, that is already being seen in different shapes and guises. There is not much change in the soft pliancy of the general effect, but the new bodice shows its lines quite plainly without fitting it. It has a deep point in the front, and while it is not at all like the tightly corseted eighteenth century figure it is at the same time a radical departure from the severely straight lines of the chemise dress.

Concerning the hats which are promised for next month there seems to be a golden mean struck between the diminutive hat of late autumn and the large and drooping hat of early summer. Indeed we are beginning to see what might be called the large small hat. Sometimes it is cloche shaped, sometimes it is draped on the lines of a tiara, and again you see it with a brim which is long in the front and short in the back. Taffeta and satin holds its own for most of the draped shapes, while one still sees a large number of velvet and satin bows.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

AS IN KING ARTHUR'S DAY.

My love story is as chivalric and adventurous a tale as any of the round table episodes of King Arthur—looked at in moonlight sentiment. From a practical standpoint it is a prosaic affair, but I'll bet any of the knightly romances like Roland and the dark tower would sound the same in a police court.

I am the son of a pirate, although I haven't known it long. Before my father died he always was silent when it came to discussing his boyhood days in Sweden. He married mother in Iowa and we lived in an out of the way town in that state. After his death we found some letters in Swedish which nobody in the family could read. Translated they revealed to us that he had a brother living in Sweden and that father had run away from home—for reasons he didn't want known.

War began and I went to France. After the armistice came an order allowing any man to get discharged in Europe if he desired. That afforded me a good chance to look up the Swedish relatives.

In I burst on them and whew! what a cool reception! Uncle Peter was a well-to-do old crab. He said my father was a disgrace to the family—a pirate who had run away to escape hanging. It seemed that dad had helped confiscate a small boat when a young man and got into all sorts of hot water. In this country it would have been an under-graduate escapade, but in Sweden the laws are stern.

His ward, who did the interpreting, was a beauty! She had those soft blue eyes and golden hair, so characteristic of the north and her mild manner concealed a lot of ginger and spirit.

It wasn't long before Uncle Peter saw I was in love with Mary and forbid me the house. I hung about town and we had secret meetings. She was well educated and smarter than most of the villagers. In her bosom was that old viking desire to see the world. It was not long before I proposed. It wouldn't do to tell Uncle Peter.

So an hour before the midnight train left I crept up through the snow beneath her window with a ladder. She softly raised the double windows and joined me. I had rescued my fair lady from the ogre and Castle Doubtful!

Like any of the soldiers bringing back foreign brides we came to this country, and New York made Mary's eyes open with wonder. If Uncle Peter pursued us we escaped him completely.

I suppose people are asking how do the soldiers like their European wives by now? Mary has proved herself a master economist. In Sweden even the well-to-do live simply, washing off their doorsteps, and making cheese and butter. It seems queer to her not to have to do it, but she's learning our ways. A Swedish or French girl is a Godsend to a fellow on a small salary.

And to think, if my father hadn't been so secretive about his confounded piracy and had not made me curious about his folks, I might have missed Mary!

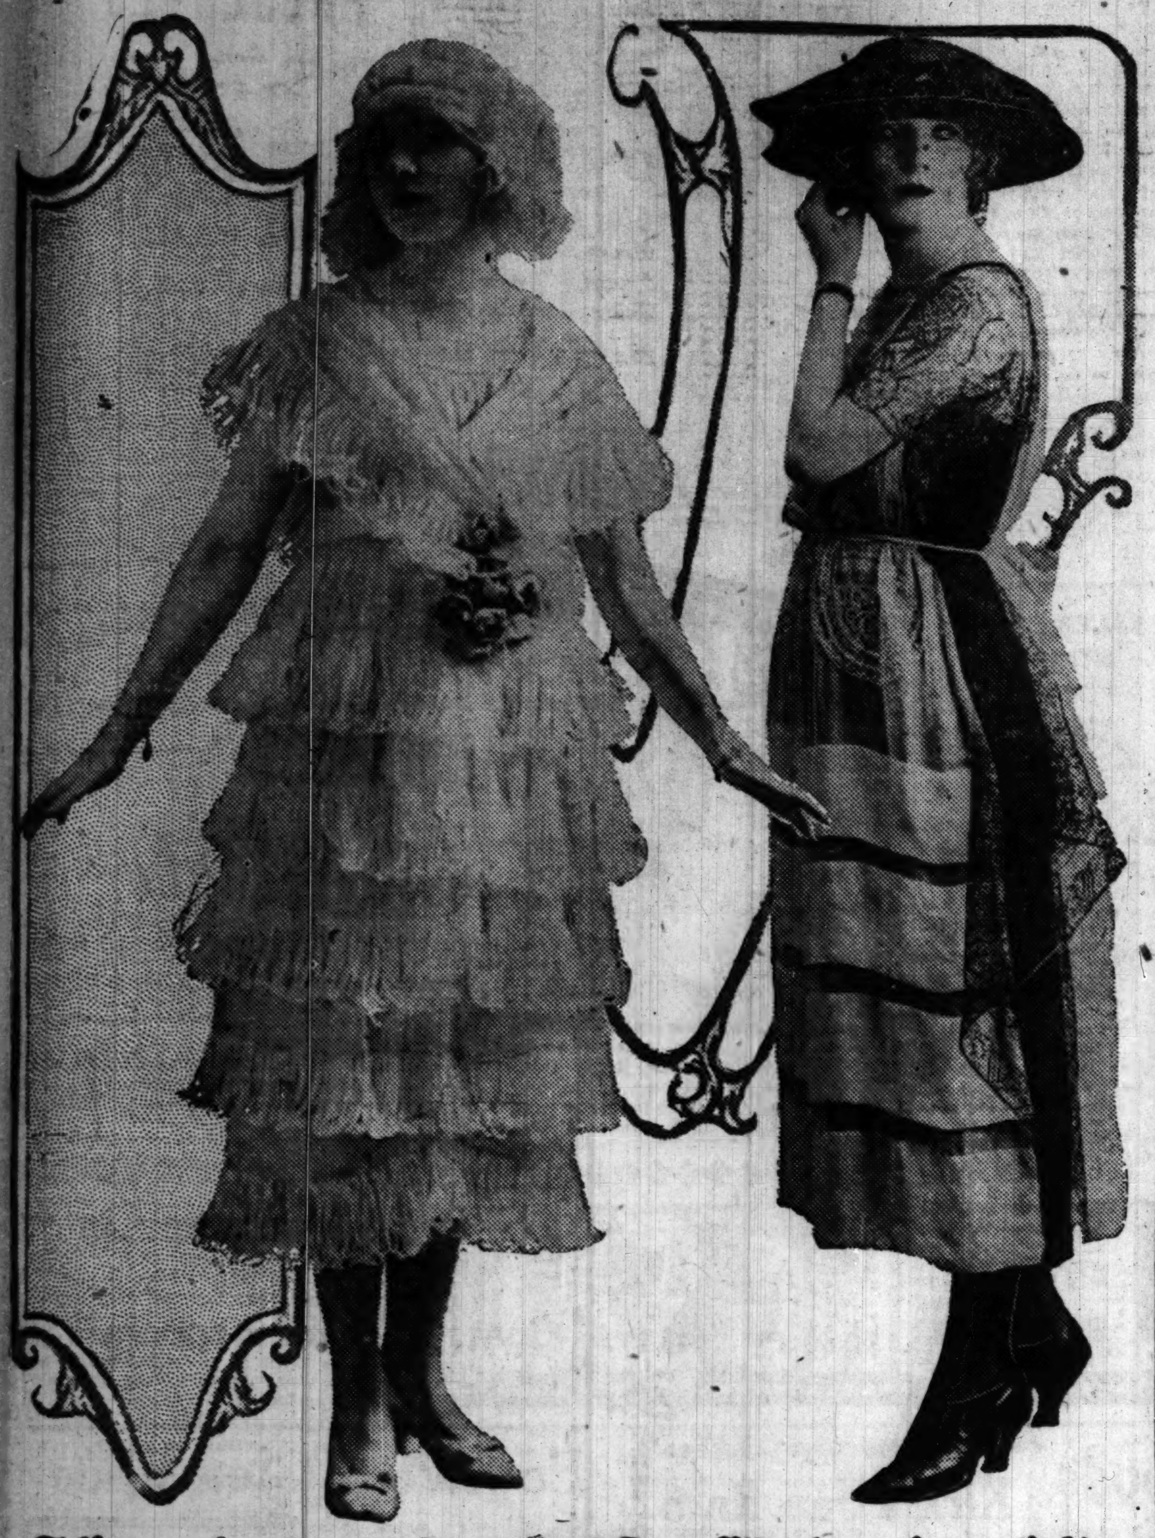
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By MARY BRUSH WILLIAMS



Tollman (second model described) Drecoll (last model describeb)

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—A ruffle that makes you look thin! It sounds like a patent remedy that ought to be passed on by the pure food, the medical, or some other society, and registered as safe to use. So it must be analyzed and approved, but official sanction in this case comes not from America but France, and not from France but Paris.

Such a ruffle has been discovered, and it is being used here with a vengeance. It is the thing now to be trimmed—not longitudinally but horizontally trimmed. As the French women average about a foot less in height than the American, they have had to battle to keep their perpendicular measurement at all.

It is said that in getting up their creations the French designers habitually turn to ancient documents. This time, I think, they must have drawn their inspiration from another source. Just such a trimming as the red ruffle which the poppy wears is this new conceit of the French lady. The petals of the lady, the ruffles of the poppy; you are likely thus to confuse your designations. Only, the lady is like a hothouse cultivated double flower. She wears her petals in tiers.

Not a touch of fullness must creep around the base of the ruffle. It must lie absolutely flat around the base of the skirt, and merely widen, never gather; and it must fan and undulate as the lady walks. Her rows of petals must not overlap, but each successive one must well clear the other and reveal the slim silhouette, the delicate corolla, so to speak, to which it is attached. I do not know whether a poppy cuts its ruffles on the bias, but this is the technical device by which the lady gets her effect.

A Mere Rag of a Gown.

A costume so designed was the most distinguished that I saw last week at the races. It was in gray charmeuse—a mere rag of a gown, we should say in America, looking as if three yards of material would amply cover it; only, of course, it wouldn't, to hear the French house tell you when they go to make your gown. Those bias ruffles use up such miles of material! At any rate, you could crumple it into your auto trunk and take it on a week end trip. The blouse had short sleeves, a V neck cut lower in the back than the front, and vanished into a narrow belt at the waist line. The skirt consisted of four such fanshaped ruffles, each of which was carefully plotted not to interfere with the other.

The robe was stunningly reinforced, stamped with the mark of distinction by a cape of exactly the same material. It, too, was made up in four rows of petals, exactly as was the skirt. The lower two overlapped the two upper tiers of the skirt. Sometimes the wearer drew those two lower ruffles tight around her, making a narrow line between knees and waist and leaving the big shoulder ruffles to spread wide.

A delightful costume it made with a wide black hat drawn low over the wearer's forehead and massed across the back with the paradise plumes which are the feature of the day. It is a costume which the French call "easy to wear," and, even with the war over, this is an important feature. What with transportation strikes and other unpleasantnesses, women are not wearing delicate finery to the races.

The costume described is by Chanel, and gives promise of being popular through the fall and winter. It and the accompanying sketch from a costume by Joseph Paquin show the use of this ruffle trimming, but scarcely adequately, as it displays itself to best advantage when one walks.

Corsets Clinically Dead.

This horizontal trimming is in a fair way to hold over into the fall. It has its basis in the big fashion fact of the day. Corsets, so long in their passing, are now pronounced clinically dead. As they go out, hips inevitably come in. On a brown and yellow tailored suit of Renee's the other day, the only ornaments were the pockets which bulged over the hips, making them look about a mile wide.

The accompanying picture of a dancing frock by Tollman indicates the tendency for ruffles to widen, and it demonstrates, too, the rage to which ostrich trimming has spread. During the war, never an ostrich feather appeared, and now it is everywhere, with a definite promise to carry over into midwinter, at least. They are used instead of flowers—great bouquets of them, and little touches here and there, as you know.

This dress is of pale, pink tulle, flounced with the material and each ruffle edged with ostrich feathers of deeper hue. The fischu ends under the high waistline, which the French insist on, and is caught with a cluster of dark red rose buds and blue leaves. It demonstrates what you already know—that the French are reluctantly allowing a softened neckline to return, but they will not permit the trimming to go on extraneously. It must connect up definitely with some trimming on the skirt. This one is fluffed along its edge with pink ostrich feathers.

Hits Long Waist Line.

Here is a bad piece of news for you at home. That long waist line which the American women have clung to for two years after the French have evacuated it is definitely threatened. Round the hips, where the American woman wears her waist line, Callot has launched a dress with a hoop, like the one you used to roll in the park when you were a little thing. Only, just by way of giving one a really slender appearance, this one is trimmed in a wreath of flowers.

Smart houses are insisting that it will be straight, with only a slight enlargement below the waist line. They are rather looking to the women of America to help them thwart the movement toward an ugly outline. They say that it is going to bring about a civil war in dressmaking establishments. Remember that the battle is not always to the strong, but to the steadfast and the brave, and that many a war is won by the support of those back of the battle line. Remember that with the threatened silhouette you could never travel here, because your clothes would not go in the trunks you are allowed.

Foundation Material Dull.

Meantime there is an important news item connected with foundation material. It is no longer shiny, but dull. Satin as a foundation is dead and crepe de chine has risen to replace it. The accompanying afternoon dress by Drecol shows a tight underlining and the fuller horizontally trimmed overdress covering it. The cascade down the side is of black lace. The model is valuable for showing two other tendencies, the belt so narrow that it is almost a string and the bow in the back. Belts are either almost invisibly narrow or very wide, and bows are cropping out unexpectedly as trimmings. I shall show other demonstrations of them another week.

Meantime space permits but one other mention. Women are busy with their winter furs. The coats and capes are magnificent and luxurious, with wide, large collars. Only real furs are used. Imitations are absolutely not permitted. Such of the wraps as are finished are going with their owners to the seaside to act as evening coats. The women are commenting on their economy in thus using them—and so, indeed, it is conservative of them, as many of these garments cost as much as others of us are able to save up for the fortune of our lifetime. Fifty thousand dollars is regarded as a conservative price this year. The women are indeed abstemious not to have two or three.

And don't let anybody tell you that capes are passe. I shall enlarge on this subject next week.

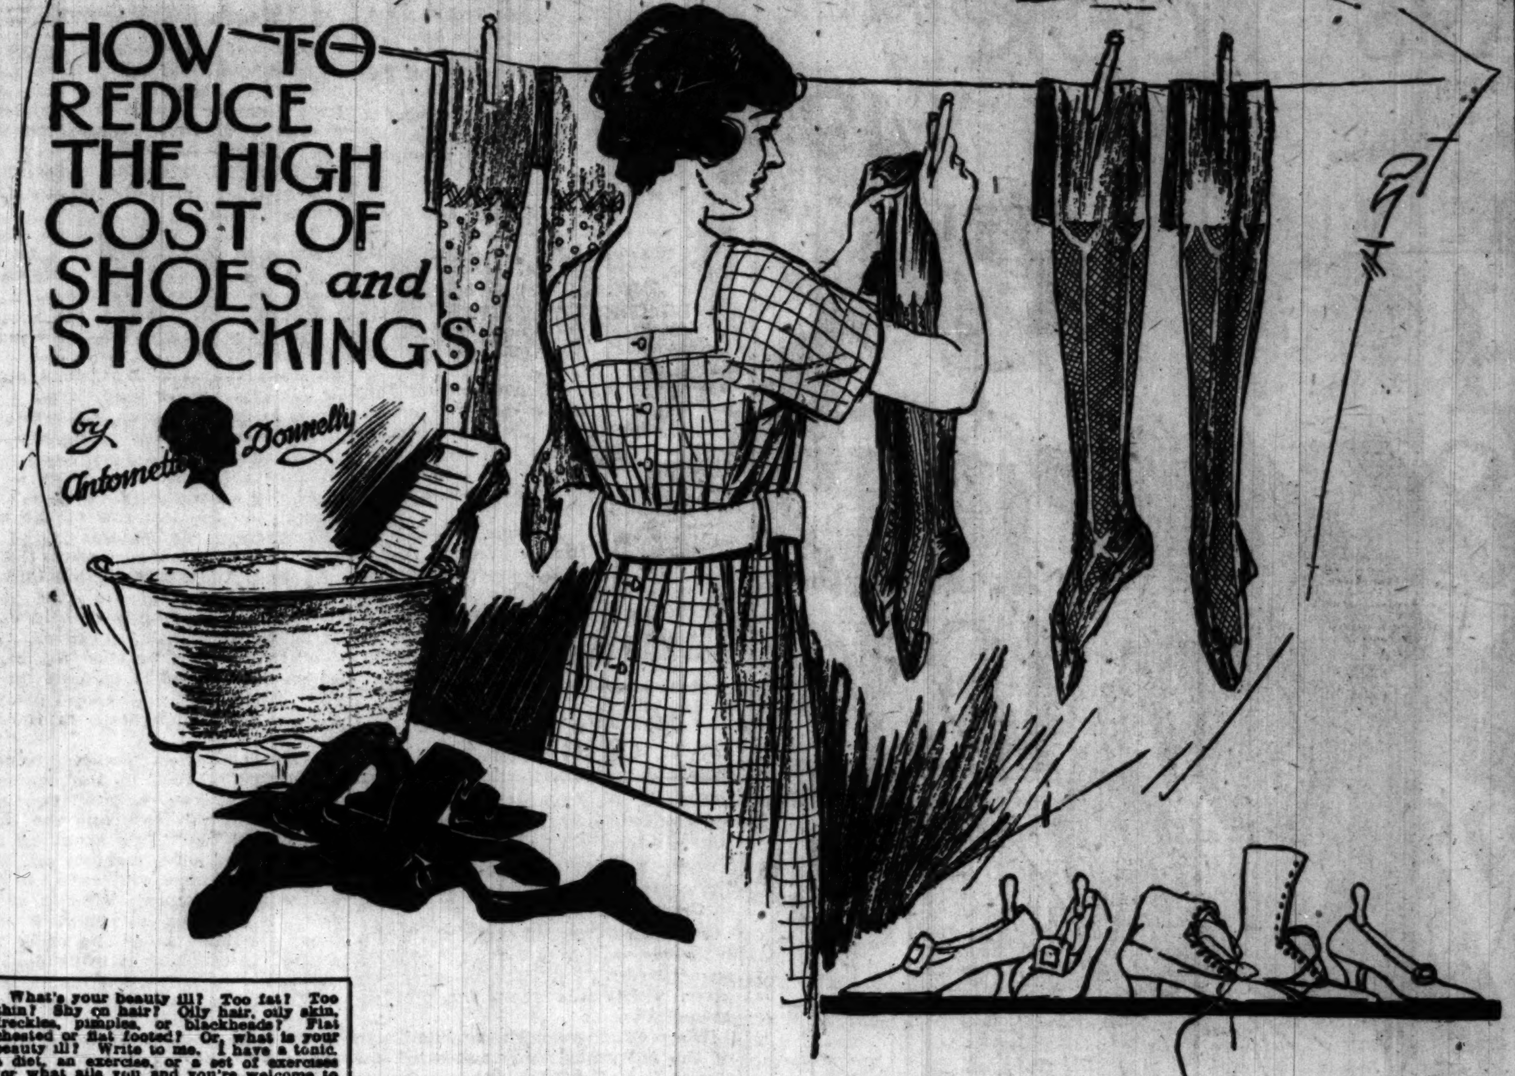
Lift Off Corns!

Doesn't hurt! Lift touchy corns and calluses right off with fingers

Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon that old, bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off, root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug!

Tiny bottles of "Freezone" cost but a few cents at drug stores



HOW TO REDUCE THE HIGH COST OF SHOES and STOCKINGS

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WITH silk stockings at about two a pair and shoes a fitting complement in price and fragility, you may be interested to learn something on how to prolong the life of these necessary adornments.

I heard the other day of a remarkable feat in the way of shoe and stocking life promulgation, instanced by four pairs of silken hosiery and two pairs of shoes having served successfully and faithfully for three years. No, the wearer was not an invalid at all, but she knew how to care for "expensive pets" and she cared for them. But I may add by way of consolation for the rest of us that she is a dainty little lady with not many pounds to carry about and a pair of exquisitely dainty feet.

The fates have not been so kind to all and at the present moment the business of how to make one pair of stockings outwear three former pairs is vital. There are features of washing them every woman does not know, but should in order that the cost may be reduced in the year's output for hosiery.

Silk stockings should be treated as a favored feature of the family wash. So much so that it is recommended they be given a day apart from the vulgar cottons and linens and other commonplace features of the laundry tub. For the reason that what is good for the latter may be death to the former. And above all time and individual attention must be given to each stocking.

White or colored silk stockings should never be soaked. They should be washed out quickly in warm water and a good white soap and rinsed well in clear water. Then they should be put in a coarse towel and wrung out as dry as possible before hanging up to dry. Nor should they be hung in the sun to dry. Neither should they be ironed. Following these instructions you will not find yellowed or faded or spotted stockings at the end of the wash.

You will prolong the life of your black silk stockings if you soak them overnight in cold water before wearing them the first time.

Silk stockings should be washed after each wearing.

Now about putting on a stocking and preventing rips that are often started by running the large toe against the cross thread. There is a right and wrong way of putting them on. Don't run your foot into the stocking with it held out at length. Instead, boot it, which is the technical expression for the right way. With both thumbs inside the top of the stocking gather with the fingers right up to the toe, holding the gathering and stretching the stocking wide enough at the ankle and toe to allow the foot to slip right into the toe end of the stocking. If you stick your foot in at the top of the stocking your big toe or some rough epidermis on your foot will jab and loosen up a thread for a Marathon run. It is much the same principle as putting your hand into a glove correctly.

There is a double welt at the top of the stockings, below which garters never should be fastened. If necessary, double the welt to shorten to fit the garters. Then get the garter straight with the weave of the stocking.

If you will sew a piece of narrow tape over the toe of your stocking you will keep your big toe from breaking through, or you may reënforce the toe by a darning cross stitch.

You must realize that silk breaks easily under any kind of friction; therefore the heel of the shoe has to be adapted to relieve all possible friction, and a trick found to have worked well is a tiny patch of black velvet pasted or glued on the inside of the shoe heel. But that is principally for a new low shoe.

Get stockings long enough to save both toes and hose. If you wear a shoe sized 2 or 2½ or 3 you should buy an 8½ stocking; a 3½ or 4 shoe calls for a size 9 stocking; a 5, 5½, and 6 shoe calls for a 9½ stocking; 6½ and 7 calls for size 10; for larger feet there are 10½, and outside sizes for the stout woman.

Seamless hosiery is not as neatly shaped as the seamed stocking, by reason of the fact that they are made as large at the ankle as at the top, and just pressed into shape over a board. They wrinkle easily at the ankles.

Did you know the smart thing in stocking wear with sport shoes is stockings to match the sweaters?

About shoes: The shoe trees are a necessity in summer time, even more than in winter, to preserve the shape of the shoes.

The value of reheeling immediately there is a turn down on the side saves the shape of the shoe by months. Having them cleaned often is a leather saving as well as a self-respecting thing to do.

Brown shoes wear better if they are shined before they are worn.

LAURINE: IF YOUR EYEBROWS are so scant and blonde as to be indistinct, why not help out with an eyebrow pencil delicately applied? Practice applying it delicately, however, before you venture forth. Follow the line of the eyebrow and use restraint so that you err on the too little side rather than on the overdone side. Then every night apply vaseline to the eyebrows with a tiny brush. It takes time to accomplish results, but time will do it.

I want first to thank you—then to beg your indulgence for another week in which to go over your letters and award the prizes. Your response has been so overwhelming—so much beyond anything anticipated—that it has been impossible for the judges to read even half of your letters before today. This work must not be done hastily or carelessly. A great many of the letters are so good that they will have to be read over many times and compared and discussed most carefully before the awards can be made. Nothing less than this careful consideration would be fair or just to you.

This contest has demonstrated several things completely and conclusively—women do appreciate sincerity and frankness in business—they respond to it most generously and intelligently—and they do know something about advertising.

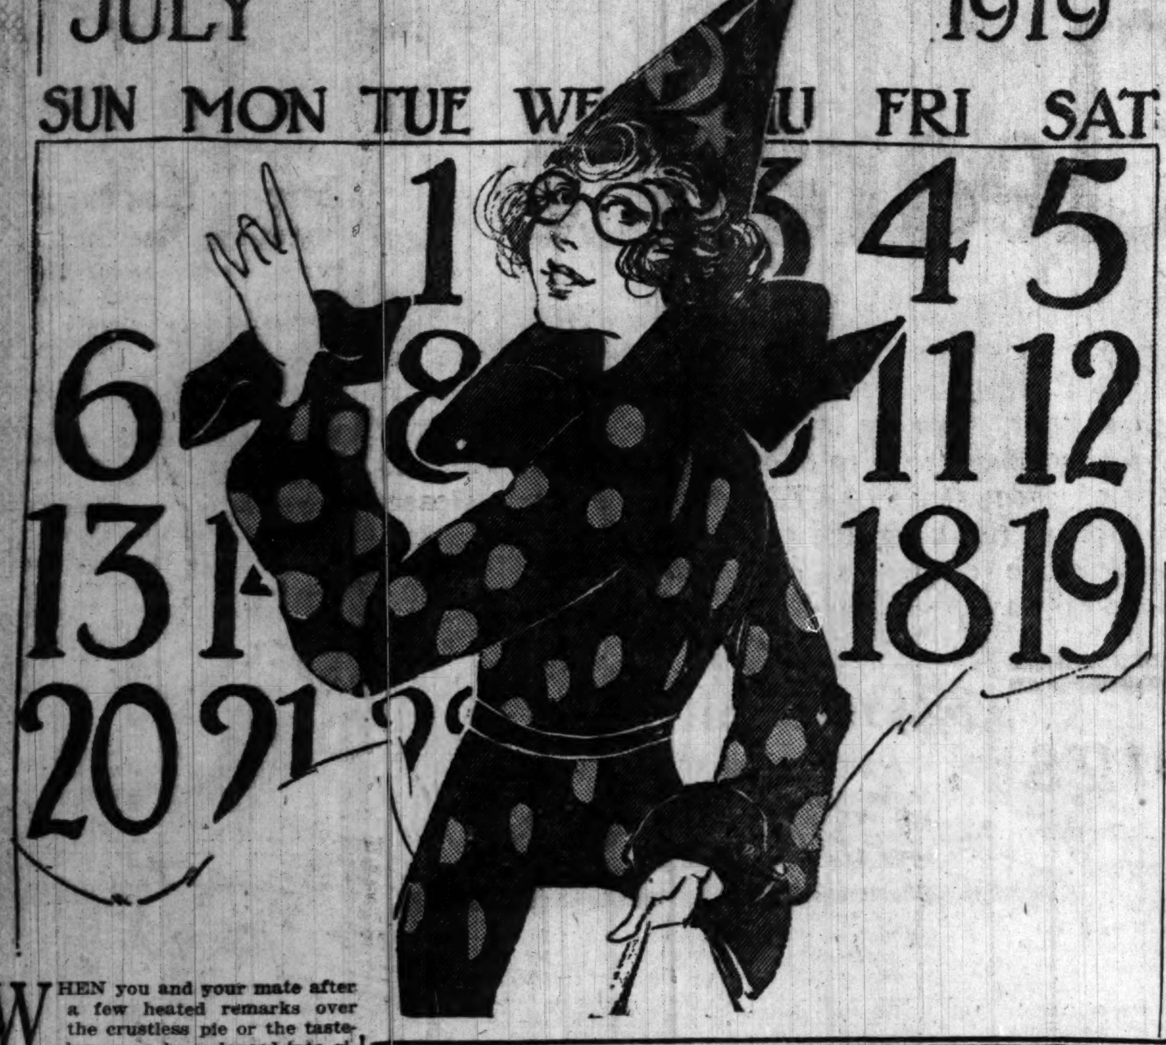
"WED ON MONDAY ALWAYS POOR"



WHEN you and your mate after a few heated remarks over the crustless pie or the tasteless soup have lapsed into silence while your minds try to discover a reason for your ever having married, I don't suppose it ever occurred to you to lay the blame of your troubles to the fact that you chose Friday for a wedding day.

Or if your life has been a succession of chasing collectors or being chased by them, suppose you never thought Monday was to blame.

But here we have it—the reason for a lot of things that do not go right all because the proper wedding day wasn't Wednesday or another than the one you chose. At least, so says the book on superstitions, folklore collected from many climes and many sources on the day you promised to love, honor, and obey.

Now list' to what the big book says:

Wed on Monday, always poor;
Wed on Tuesday, wed once more;
Wed on Wednesday, happy match;
Wed on Thursday, splendid catch;
Wed on Friday, poorly mated;
Wed on Saturday, better waited;
Wed on Sunday, Cupid's wooing;
Wed in the morning, quick undoing.

In most countries Wednesday is acclaimed the luckiest day of the week to be married.

If you marry a minister you must marry on Sunday for luck.

It is unlucky for a widow to marry a widower on Saturday evening, for the bridegroom will not live two years.

It is unlucky to be married on St. Joseph's day.

To be married on Easter the new couple may look for the life to grow constantly brighter.

A wedding on your birthday will end unhappily.

To be married on the birthday of either of your parents indicates many children.

Never be married on celebration days.

"They who wed in the sunrise light Together shall see the dark of night."

Some people in England consider the best time to be married before breakfast between 8 and 9 o'clock.

For a wedding to turn out well the contract must be signed before noon.

In the Orkney islands the bride selects her wedding day so that its evening may have a growing moon and a flowing tide.

A wedding after sunset betokens to a young couple a struggle, then happiness; to middle aged or old couples, separation or death.

Ovid says:

Led maid or widow that would turn a wife
Avoid the scorn that's dangerous to life.
If you will mind old saws, mind this: I say
'Tis bad to marry in the month of May.

The Scots believe that because the ill-fated Queen Mary married Bothwell in May, it was thought to cast an evil eye upon all who married in that month.

A couple married on the 4th of July will live a life that is largely homeless.

The popularity of June for weddings is due to the pretty omen that Juno takes an especial interest in marriage and she protects and blesses all who are wedded in June.

The girl who becomes a bride on Christmas day has nothing to fear.

If a widow marries a second time in the same month in which she was married before she will be a widow twice.

The nineteenth year of age is an unlucky year to marry in.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN.

Mrs. C. P. Adams, president of a bank at Dallas, Tex., is the only woman who has the right to sign a $10 bill.

Ruby Benning of Portland, Ore., is the youngest girl river boat captain in the world.

Miss Ethel Caldwell of Marshall, Mo., is the first woman in that state to serve on a murder jury. The prisoner was given ninety-nine years for first degree murder.

When Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army addressed the Grand Lodge of Elks at an executive session in Atlantic City, she achieved the distinction of being the first woman ever accorded the honor.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

By Clotilde.

BASKET WITH COVER.

When the reed has been soaked until pliable, with a sharp knife shave one end to a point. Wrap this point for an inch or so with raffia, and bend around in a circle. Wrap again and take a stitch into the first row, and so on around, wrapping several times [away from the person], and then taking a stitch.

In all stitch work the reed should be damp enough to be pliable, but not wet enough to make the raffia wet, for in the latter case the work will be rather loose when it gets dry. Be careful to make the stitches run the way the raffia is wrapped, so they will not be too plainly seen. When a strand of raffia is almost used, wrap a few times around the reed, and over that wrap the end of a fresh piece and then take a stitch.

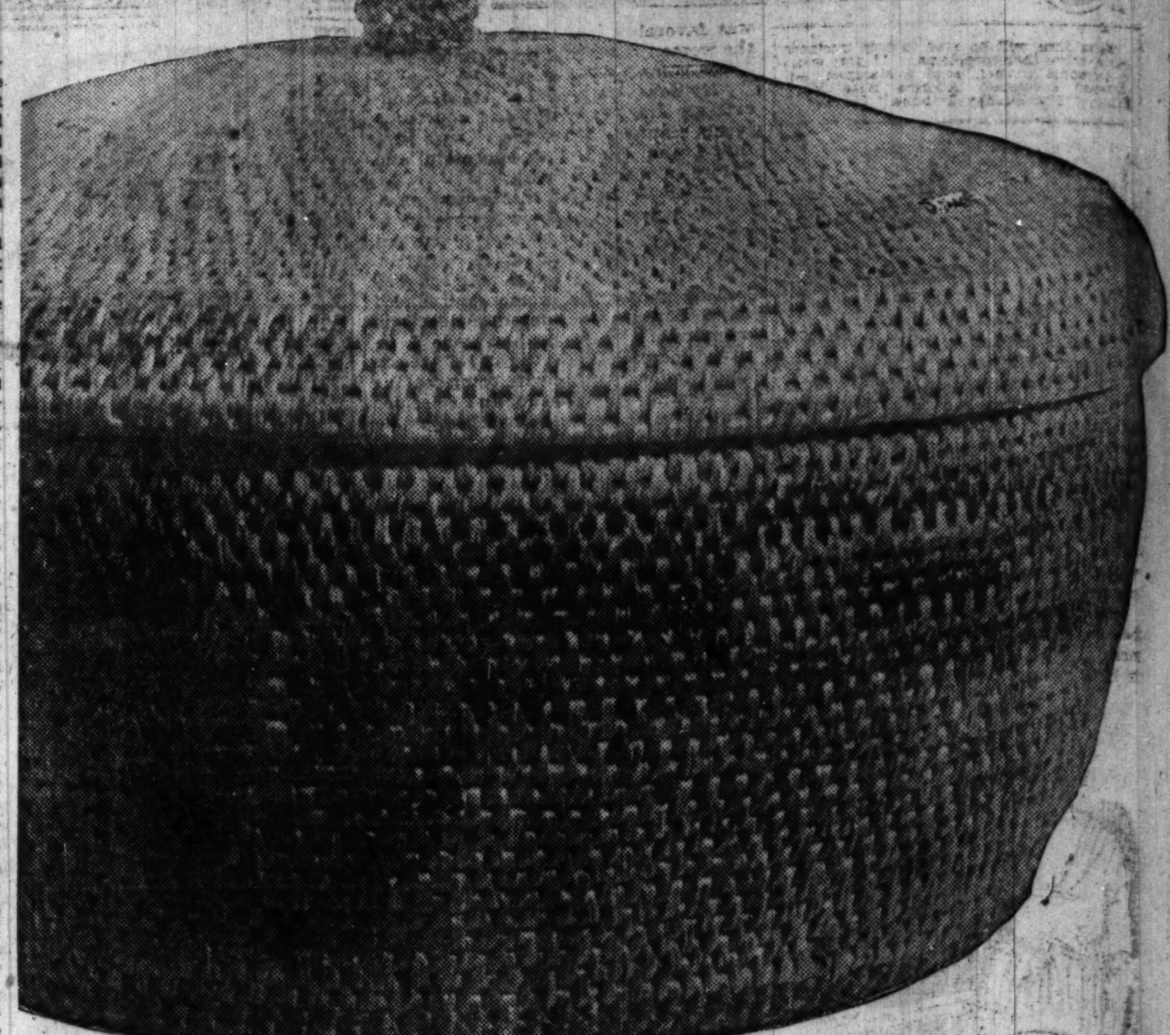
When it becomes necessary to use a new piece of reed in the course of making a basket, shave off the upper side of the old piece and the under side of the new piece about an inch from the end, piece together and wrap a couple of times with raffia, to hold before it is stitched. When a second color is desired, lay an end of it along the reed under the raffia with which the stitching is being done for an inch or so before desiring to use it.

When four rows have been stitched on the side, divide the last row into four equal parts, and follow the design.

The body of the basket is made of the natural colored raffia, and the design is worked out in purple and yellow.



For the cover of the basket, make a flat, or slightly sloping mat, like the base of the basket, starting the flower design in the center of the cover; crochet a small button of purple raffia, and fasten them in the center of the flower. Make the cover as large as the base of the basket, then turn the reed gradually over the edge so as to fit over the basket and stitch about six rows.

Dimensions of basket: Base, or bottom, measures 6½ inches; depth of basket, 4 inches; cover of basket make to fit over basket.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Mary King

THINKING THINGS.

ONE'S imagination, if allowed to run riot, is capable of playing tricks which sometimes lead us into embarrassing or unhappy situations. Fortunately most business girls are too busy and not sufficiently self-centered to imagine that every word and action of their associates concern them. But occasionally, as in the case of the writer of the following letter, an oversensitive imagination, when allowed a free rein, results in many miserable hours.

As this experience has undoubtedly been the means of curing the sensitiveness of one business girl, the telling of it in her own words may help others:

"Dear Miss King: I don't know whether other girls are as imaginative as I am, but if they are, a recent experience of mine might help them, as I believe it has helped me.

"Up to a few months ago I was happy and contented in my job. I have been with my present employers for three years, and up to recently got along nicely with all the people in the office.

"About two months ago I was promoted to secretary for the manager. My salary was raised on taking the new job, and I considered myself one of the lucky ones.

"I shared an office just outside the manager's with two other women, both older than I and of longer experience with the firm. They were cordial and kind to me when I first came in and they helped me as much as possible with pointers about my new work. I was favorably impressed with both of the women and made up my mind that I was going to like them.

"My new boss was fine. He was considerate and respectful and courteous in his manner toward me. I was sure that I was going to be successful and happy in my new work.

"After I had been in the new office a few days the boss' wife came in to see him. When I told her he was out she went over and chatted with the other women for a while. As she was leaving one of the women introduced me to her, but she merely nodded and went out. After she had gone I recalled having heard a bit of gossip about the manager's wife being jealous concerning her husband, and I decided that her manner to me had been frigid and unfriendly.

"Thereafter whenever she came into the office she either nodded coldly to me or else, as I thought, pretended not to see me. If the boss happened to be out during one of her calls she always spent a few minutes in conversation with the other women in the office.

"One day as the three of them were talking in low tones I thought I heard one of them mention my name. From then on I was miserable. I imagined the boss' wife was pointedly unfriendly, and I imagined a change in the attitude of the other two women in the office toward me. Every time they talked together I felt that I was the subject of their conversation. I trembled every time I saw one of them in conversation with any one from my old department for fear they were saying unkind and untrue things about me.

"The situation got on my nerves and I was on the point of giving up my job, as I felt that I couldn't ask to be transferred, when one of the girls from the other departments said to me one day: 'Why don't you like the women in your office?' I answered: 'Because they don't like me.' She then told me that they had both said they liked me and wanted to be nice to me but that the second week I was in the office I started acting queerly toward them, that I stopped speaking to them, and when they spoke to me I answered in a snippy and unfriendly way, and they came to the conclusion that I didn't like them.

"I was surprised but relieved to learn that they had no unfriendly feeling toward me, and went back to the office that day feeling more like my old self. I discovered that my associates were only too nice to me when I chatted with them.

"A day or two later, I learned that the manager's wife was in the hospital and had had a serious operation. One of the women in the office told me that she had been worried and ill for the last few weeks since she learned that she must undergo the operation, and greatly to my shame, I realized that the seeming unfriendliness on the part of the manager's wife was nothing more than an abstraction due to the coming ordeal.

Fowl Cholera and Tuberculosis

By Frank Ridgway.

DURING the months of July and August everything along the line of poultry raising should be humming. Just now poultry raisers are dealing in the future, and their future depends on the good work done now, especially in the selection of breeding fowls. Good profits always depend on healthy, vigorous birds that are kept for breeding purposes. Poultrymen will soon begin culling out the flock and keeping the good individuals for breeding stock next year. In doing this they should be careful to eliminate all diseased fowls.

Two of the most dreaded diseases among poultry are tuberculosis and fowl cholera. If the flock is afflicted with tuberculosis complete destruction of every bird is the only safe method. Half way measures are futile in fighting this disease, as there is no treatment that will avail against tuberculosis in poultry. The only practical course is to kill off the whole flock and immediately disinfect all houses and runs.

Tuberculosis of fowls is a chronic contagious disease characterized by the development of nodules in various organs of the body, but most frequently in the liver, intestines, and spleen, according to specialists of the United States department of agriculture. It is readily communicated to most species of birds and to several species of mammals, but it is almost impossible to transmit tuberculosis of man and cattle to fowls. Parrots and small caged birds are susceptible to human tuberculosis, however, and are often affected with it.

How Disease Is Spread.

This destructive disease is generally introduced into the poultry yards by fowls purchased from infected flocks or by eggs of diseased birds that are obtained for hatching. It may be carried from neighboring flocks by small birds and animals passing from one yard to another. The liver and intestines are nearly always severely affected and consequently the germs are numerous in the intestinal contents and are scattered with the droppings. The introduction of a single diseased bird may infect the greater part of the flock within a few weeks.

The eggs of diseased birds frequently contain the germ and when the young chickens hatch from such eggs they are infected with tuberculosis and soon the whole flock with which they run has the disease. The infertile incubated eggs are often fed to chickens, and the whole flock may become infected in this way.

External symptoms of the disease in poultry do not usually appear until the advanced stage of development has been reached. Then the birds begin to show a gradual loss of weight, wasting of muscles, paleness of the comb, and toward the end dullness and sleepiness. Often the joints and legs become inflamed and enlarged and external tumors appear. Occasionally the skin over the swollen joints breaks and pus containing the germs is discharged. Swellings and bony enlargements of the joints are invariably suspicious. When this is noticed kill the bird and examine the liver, intestines, and spleen and look for whitish or yellowish spots over the surfaces. These contain tubercular masses when cut into.

If such conditions are found it is advisable to kill every fowl that has been exposed, no matter how valuable they may be, for all of them become carriers and distributors of the disease. The birds that have died or are killed, as well as all of the accumulated manure, sweepings, and scrapings of the poultry house and yard should be completely destroyed by fire.

Fowl cholera is equally as dangerous though not as common, as tuberculosis. But drastic steps must also be taken in combating this disease. Like tuberculosis it is a contagious disease and is easily transmitted from flock to flock by means of sick fowls. It is also spread by wild birds, or by persons, animals or utensils which have been on infected premises. A yellowish coloration of the droppings, specialists say, is an early indication of the disease. Soon diarrhoea develops, considerable fever is shown and the bird loses its lively appearance, separates itself from the rest of the flock, and appears dull and sleepy. It no longer searches for food, but sits with head drawn down to the body or turned backward and resting in the feathers about the wings. The plumage soon loses its brilliance, the wings droop, the appetite is diminished and the thirst increased. The comb and wattles may be dark bluish red, or they may be pale and bloodless.

All fowls exposed to the disease should be placed in a pen to themselves and kept under strict quarantine. The symptoms of stricken birds are readily noticeable. The affected birds become weak, drowsy, and often sleep so soundly during the last day or two of their lives that it is difficult to arouse them. When they move it is with a stagger forward for a few steps in an uncertain manner and with dragging wings. The crop is generally distended with food and apparently paralyzed. The weight and strength of the bird rapidly diminshes, it breathes with difficulty, sits with beak open, and the breathing may be heard several yards away.

Finally the weakness is such that the beak is rested on the ground, and a little later the bird dies. In acute cases, however, no symptoms are seen. The bird may be found dead under the roost or may fall at the feeding trough and die in a few minutes.

Killing Is Best Treatment.

Cholera may destroy the greater part of a flock in a week and then disappear, or may linger for months, adding an occasional bird to the death list. The time between exposure to the disease and appearance of symptoms is from two to five days, while the fowl may be sick from twenty-four hours to ten days. If the bird is examined after death red spots are usually found on the the surface of the heart, which gives it the appearance of having been sprinkled with blood, inflamed areas on the surface of the intestines and enlargement of the liver and spleen may also be noticed.

Since treatment of the affected birds is almost useless, the aim should be to prevent, so far as possible, the spread of the infection. The first fowls showing acute feverish symptoms should be destroyed to guard against contamination of the grounds by infected blood. The carcasses should be burned or deeply buried. The healthy fowls should be moved to new quarters, if possible, and carefully watched for signs of the disease. Houses and runs should be thoroughly cleaned frequently and disinfected with a 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid, a 2 per cent solution of compound cresol, or a reliable coal tar disinfectant in proper dilution.

The drinking water may be made antiseptic by adding one dram of permanganate of potash to each gallon.

The man who handles only a few chickens in his backyard need not be discouraged, for if the grounds and houses are kept clean and plants are allowed to grow where the fowls can gather green food and insects, there is little danger of these diseases. However, it is necessary to use every precaution in buying fowls to renew the breeding stock.

BUILDING OUR OWN.

RECENTLY a woman friend, who has saved about $1,500 and who wants a home of her own, asked how, with this amount of money as a starter, she could acquire a lot and build a modest but comfortable house. The rent of her apartment has been advanced considerably during recent months, and she believes that with her capital and the amount she now is annually expending for rent, coupled with careful economy, she can secure a real home, designed as she wants it. But she did not know how to finance her venture.

There are several ways in which a person with $1,500 can secure a lot and build a home. The one most popular is to buy outright a site in one of the newer subdivisions, and the promoters will build a home and allow the owner to pay for it in monthly installments. Another is to secure the cost of the building from a building and loan association.

Both of these methods are excellent, but they have limitations. In the first place, the locality is picked by the real estate owner rather than the person who is to build. Borrowing from a building and loan association requires that the house shall not cost more than around 60 per cent of the value of both the house and lot when the building is completed. As the home of average size now costs around $5,000 to build, the prospective builder is practically stopped right here, unless he has more than $1,500 to start with.

There has been developed, however, during the present home building movement, another plan of financing home builders that will permit the family with $1,500 to secure a home that will cost, lot included, about $6,000.

To begin with, the lot should not cost more than $1,000. A more costly lot is too expensive for a house that costs $5,000; in other words, the "overhead" in taxes and interest on the investment would be too high. For this amount a well located thirty foot lot, with a depth of from 125 to 165 feet, can be secured in the suburbs of large cities, while in smaller towns a larger site can be secured for $1,000. This leaves a balance of $500 to be applied on the building itself and $4,500 to be paid to the contractor who erects the house. If the latter is well established in business he will build the house for $500 in cash and an agreement to complete the payment when the building is finished.

In the course of six weeks or two months after the excavation is started the home will be completed, ready to move into. The builder will have installed the heating plant, and the "built in" fixtures, such as a buffet in the dining room, and the bookcases that are ranged along either side of the fireplace in most modern homes. Then comes the final settlement.

The total investment now is $6,000. Half of this amount can be borrowed from a bank at 6 per cent on a first mortgage, for, say, five years. Thus $3,000 is secured to pay to the contractor. The balance due the builder is $1,500. To secure the payment of this balance he takes a second mortgage on the property, with a provision that principal and interest shall be paid in monthly installments. The total interest at 6 per cent on $1,500 for five years, payable, both principal and interest, in monthly installments, is $225. Thus there is $1,725 to be paid in sixty installments of $28.75 each, or $345 a year. Besides there is the annual payment of $180 interest on the $3,000 borrowed on the first mortgage. This adds $15 a month to the $28.75 that is paid to the contractor, making the total $43.75. Also there are taxes, insurance, and repairs to be reckoned with.

The following table will show the annual payments and other fixed charges on the home during the first five years, at the end of which time the contractor will have been paid in full:

Interest and principal payments to contractor	$ 345
Interest on $3,000 borrowed from bank	180
Taxes (approximately)	35
Repairs (at 1 per cent of building cost)	50
Insurance (approximately)	25
Total	$ 635

To this must be added the amount in interest the original investment of $1,500 would have earned. While 6 per cent is more than the average investor with this amount to loan gets, $90 may be added to the annual $635. Thus, lacking a few cents, $53 per month must be paid, and adding the $15 in lost interest, the cost is $60.50 per month.

While this figure looks high, it should be remembered that the home owner is saving $300 a year; that amount is being applied annually to the principal, bringing the monthly cost of the house to $35.50, which is mighty low rent for a $6,000 home, built to suit the tastes of the owner in exterior appearance and interior arrangement.

At the end of five years the owner can take a long breath and, by paying $180 annually, the interest on $3,000, he can buy some of the things he has had to do without, while he really pays in rent for his own home $15 a month. At the same time he should be paying himself interest of a like amount on the $3,000 he has invested in the home. By setting aside this amount, he has something that will reduce the principal of the mortgage, while by continuing to pay $32.50 per month for ten years he will have his $6,000 home clear of debt.

Let us see now what it has cost him to own his home that fifteen years ago cost $6,000:

Original investment	$ 1,500
$725 a year for five years	3,625
$390 a year for ten years	3,900
Taxes, insurance, repairs for ten years at $110 a year	1,100
Total	$10,125

It will be noted that no allowance has been made for the interest that the money invested in the home would have earned during the fifteen years, but interest has been allowed on the original capital of $1,500. That is easily taken care of by the difference in what was paid monthly during the last ten years and what the same house would have cost if rented.

Now let us consider whether or not the builder is the gainer by going ahead and securing a home of his own.

During the fifteen years he has actually expended $10,125 to secure a $6,000 home. In other words, in fifteen years he has paid out $4,125 for a place to live—rent, if you desire so to call it. Divided into monthly payments, the cost has been $23.25.

Rent for a house is fixed at 10 per cent on the investment; for apartments at 12½ per cent, the latter covering the cost of heat and janitor's services. While these figures may vary some, they are average. With 10 per cent as a basis a house and lot costing $6,000 would command $600 a year, or $50 a month. Simple subtraction will show how much the builder has gained.

What sort of a home can be built now for $5,000? The accompanying perspective and floor plans, furnished by the editor of Farm Mechanics, Chicago, shows a house that can be erected for that amount. Building costs vary in different localities, being controlled by labor conditions, the cost of transporting materials, etc., but that is a fair average for the home shown. Building restrictions will not permit of this house being erected within the "fire limits" of a city, but it is suitable for suburbs.

This is a strictly modern five room house with a large living porch, or sun parlor. The long sweep of roof, the dormer projection, and the stucco walls give it an exceptionally attractive exterior, while the rooms are large and compact.

The dimensions of this house are 24x28 feet, which is the proper width for a thirty foot lot. Both the living porch and the living room are the width of the house. The porch is twenty-four feet long and eight feet wide; the living room is twenty-three feet long and twelve feet wide. The porch walls are almost continuous windows, which in summer can be replaced by screens. At one end of the living room is an open fireplace, and at the other are built-in bookcases under the high windows. The dining room is 12x14½ feet and has a built-in buffet. The kitchen is 10x11½ feet and has a large pantry, with doors opening into both the kitchen and dining room, a step-saving arrangement.

The stairway to the second floor opens out of the dining room. On the second floor are two good sized bedrooms and the bathroom. It also will be noted that there are three large closets on this floor.

The house sets on a concrete foundation and the basement has a cement floor. The cost includes the hot air furnace, installed in the basement.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

IN YOUR FRIEND'S CAR.

THERE is a small courtesy which those of us who ride often in kind friends' motors should practice, and of which many of us may be unaware. This is the custom of allowing our host or hostess always to sit in the right hand seat. In town cars, the chauffeurs' speaking tubes—on which the owner of every closed automobile depends—are usually affixed nearest that seat. Moreover, this is, by almost universal consent, considered the proprietor's own place, the vantage point, as it were, from which he may, if he likes, keep his watchful eye on the traffic or give his orders. In itself this may seem an insignificant and trifling detail, but it is just such little politeness that thoughtful people never neglect, thereby adding to the general welfare and comfort of everyday existence.

J. G. N.: You are correct in thinking that there are two ways of using one's knife and fork without making any "faux pas." The American method is to cut the meat with one's knife and fork [the latter in the left hand], then to lay down the knife and transfer the fork to the right hand before eating. The English usually retain their forks in their left hands, as you say, sometimes employing their knives to assist in putting their food on their forks; but no well bred folk ever "plaster" their food on to their forks—a fault all too easy to acquire in adopting the English and continental method.

MRS. J. P.: Yes, it is in the best taste for a widow to use the same name on her visiting cards after the death of her husband as she did during his lifetime. "Mrs. John William Smith" is the accepted form for such cards.

* *

A. M.: Since the man is an old friend wishing to keep in touch with you, and since he does not know your new address, it would be permissible to write him a note, when you have the opportunity, to inform him of your whereabouts. In general, however, it is better to let men take the initiative in such matters.

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

Dropped the Last Minute.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am just 16 and have been corresponding with a boy friend for about two years and have always found him interesting and agreeable company. But a few nights ago I asked him to take me to a party. He agreed to take me but at the last moment he called me up and told me that he wasn't going. He didn't have any excuse except that he didn't want to go because he wouldn't know any of the fellows. Do you think a fellow that would drop you like that at the last moment is worth corresponding with? EDITH."

No, Edith, if he had no apology to offer you may be sure you are better off without his friendship and his correspondence. I think I would just strike him off the list.

Barely Spoke to Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 and in love with a boy of the same age, and he acts as if he were crazy over me. On the Fourth of July I was with my girl friends walking around through the park and I happened to run into him and his boy friend, and he said I barely spoke to him, and he's ignored me ever since. How can I square myself? I would like your advice on this subject. BELLE."

He's a sensitive child, isn't he, Belle? If you spoke to him as you have done on every other occasion, that's all you can do and I wouldn't encourage any more pettiness on his part by apologizing or anything like that.

A Boy She Loves.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 15, and there is a boy whom I love and I do not know whether he likes me or not. Do you think it would be proper to ask him to take me to a party if I know he hasn't another date? "

"DIMPLES."

No, Dimples, it is not proper to ask a young man to take you to a party unless you have known him some time and are on an extremely friendly basis. But not at 15, Dimples.

Hours for Calling.

"Dear Miss Blake: Should a boy of 18, calling on a girl of 17, both recent high school graduates, remain as late as midnight? Should he be invited in when returning from a party as late as, say, 11 o'clock? PARENT."

No. Calling hours should end at 10:45 at the latest. Unless the girl's mother or older sister is up to chaperone, the boy should not go in after a party.

Camp Stories.

Your son, your brother, your husband or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Glad and Sad.

"I presume you're mighty glad the war is over and you have your husband safely home again," I congratulated our colored laundress.

"Well, in some respects it's a standoff," she slowly made answer. "I allowed that Bud wasn't in no more danger takin' care of mules over there than he was in takin' care of hosses over here. And while I wasn't sure where he was at o' nights, I knowed he wasn't down to the corner saloon here, an' that was comfortin'. An' while I'se glad to have him back, I knows I ain't never goin' to get money from him so reg'lar as I did while Uncle Sam was a-handlin' his financial affairs." J. V.

An Enthusiastice Welcome.

I was among the first of the Americans to reach France, and they sure gave us an enthusiastic welcome. In some villages the whole population, not only the girls, but old women and men, insisted on kissing every one of us. Being mounted, I got off fairly light at first, and even later managed to stave off all but the hardiest mademoiselles by warmly shaking hands. But an old man who had not shaved for weeks or washed for months got me at last, and implanted an extraordinarily fervent kiss on each cheek. And, as bad luck had it, the moving picture fellows were right on their job then; that's where my embarrassing moment came in. J. T.

Worse than Flu.

My brother, while en route to Camp Pike, Ark., exchanged addresses with a young woman in Chattanooga. Soon after reaching camp he wrote her that quarantine was all over camp. In her answer she said she hoped quarantine was not so bad as "flu" and that he would not have it. E. H.

Like a Veteran.

A friend of mine who was down in the Hawaiian islands with the American 1st field artillery told me he had not been in the service long but was already as tanned as a raspberry and as bowlegged as a donkey. M. D.

As Ordered.

A rookie who was detailed in the mess hall for a week, got along fairly well until one day the head cook said, "Put some water on the fire." He went out into the storage room to open a can of peas, and when he came back the fire was out. C. V.

New Way to Remove Hairs Creates Sensation

(Actually Takes Out the Roots)

What beauty specialists regard as one of the most important discoveries in recent years is the Phelactine method of removing superfluous hair. Its great advantage, of course, lies in the fact that it actually removes the hair roots. It does this easily, instantly, harmlessly. Sufferers from the affliction named need no longer despair. The actual hair roots come out before your very eyes, leaving the skin as smooth and hairless as a babe's.

Because it offers such complete relief, a stick of Phelactine is the most inexpensive thing a woman can buy for the removal of hairy growths. For this same reason druggists are having an enormous demand for it. You can use it with entire safety; it is so harmless one could even eat it without any ill effect.

COOKING IN A GARDEN.

IT was a modern political economist who said: "Whenever a man learns power over nature, there is magic; whenever he carries out an ideal into life, there is romance."

To take a fifty foot city lot, the house on it well to the front, or one no more than twenty-five feet wide, and turn it into a shrubbery inclosed garden with lily pool, back of that a heavenly crescent of madonna lilies, and back of that no end of beauties, and a little playhouse, getting a space of lawn in front of the pool large enough for a Maypole dance—to do that is both magical and romantic. It is magical to make so many flowers and plants grow to perfection; it is magical to make a place, not half a block away from a busy street corner, seem so "deep hid."

The garden I am now describing has one big tree, and on the back line a few slim young poplars, with boxes of flowers placed higher than the high back fence. At dusk, with the planet Saturn at its brightest, people can sit in this garden and imagine themselves in some of the most remote and romantic of the beauty spots of the earth. And when lights are turned on now at one end, and now at the other, and now high at one side, perfection of another sort enchants us.

A few years ago I saw the start of a twenty-five foot garden back of a two story cottage. At the start there was little in the place save a mulberry tree. Presently a circular seat was built around this, from which, later, one could watch goldfish in a lily pool, and even a vista achieved from this vantage, by means of a maze of blossoms. Professional garden planners said there was no room for such a pool here; therefore, it was true magic for the lady of that garden, unfamiliar with cement work, to make one so charming, with a cement bench on one side and a sun dial not far off.

To the side of this garden there was a two foot wide walk bordered on either side with three foot wide wilderness of blooming things planned to seasons, so as to be ever bright with flowers. Between this border and the flowers and shrubbery lining the fence on the other side was an open grassy space, where a large number of people could sit and watch dancing or a play at the back. To transform thus that twenty-five foot piece of desolation was surely magic.

From early spring to late autumn there were made salads, sandwiches, chafing dish luncheons, and afternoon teas in this garden, 'neath that mulberry tree. Once partaking of luncheon or tea here, visitors seemed inspired to bake a cake or little cakes or make some jelly or jam, as an entrance admission to the delight of again eating here. They generallly came bringing some such offering.

Did space permit I could tell of another city garden in which there was a larger pool, owned by a baby duck, who, at meal times, untaught, performed remarkable tricks for his keep, or, when backs were turned, slipped out of the water, mounted to the table and stole slices of bread and butter from where the family enjoyed three meals a day the summer through, when the weather was propitious. Why leave home in the summer?

A word more about the little duck may not be censored out. I have never heard of a more fascinating and clever pet than this "Little Brother," who sang himself to sleep at night, only content and drowsy in his box if he was on the same floor as the family, and who got what he demanded pretty constantly in the way of attention. He himself had been generous in attention to a little mate who, in spite of his efforts, sickened and left the gallant devotions he gave her—whence his name. Pets not well cared for deprive a garden of magic. They take away my appetite.

But it is of cooking in the garden that I should be talking, cooking and eating in one special garden, or a garden studio it was, to which I transported beans in an iron kettle, bacon in a frying pan, bread for toast, etc. Magic and romance were more than provided for us here. And I do not believe any of the elements making for these were profaned by my cookery. In fact, the garden had been enhanced in its joys, to my mind, because the presiding genius has these many summers past made many a meal in a fire set up in an architectural urn there, which she calls her brazier.

In each of the four corners of the urn pan are two bricks over which is placed an oven grill shelf. This accommodates four kettles, or has four places of more generous dimensions than the top of the ordinary gas stove furnishes, and there are nice corners, sides of the fire, besides, on which you can set anything cooking too fast on top. The frying pan may be used on one corner of the grill, a tea kettle at another, a kettle of potatoes at another, and there is still room to cook another vegetable. And when the fire goes down the best kind of toast can be made close to the coals, over "living fire," the lady of the garden says.

A menu which she prepares here not infrequently consists of fried chicken, creamed potatoes, and, in the end, coffee; for a salad tomatoes stuffed with cucumbers, onion, etc.; while ice cream and cake are brought in and appear from behind some pillar, the original model of which stood in a Roman garden, when Rome ruled the world, or from an urn like unto what Cleopatra may have had in her gardens of the Nile.

One of the kinds of toast made over the dying coals under this brazier by the garden genius is a toasted sandwich consisting of buttered bread cut thin, then spread with a thin layer of nippy cheese and two half slices clapped together to make a bit of dainty size to eat from the fingers. This satisfies even a garden or out of doors appetite, and you can eat with it, if you choose, onions as sweet as dew, just one minute from the ground.

Yes, in the middle of the garden, surrounded by walks of real marble tiles, grow corn, beans, peas, beets, radishes, Swiss chard, carrots, lettuce and onions, now near to boiling size. If one chooses to make a stew over that brazier, she can run back over those marble tiles, and around one of the fountains, which may later adorn a city park or garden a thousand miles away, pull a carrot, an onion, and some lettuce for seasoning, and when ready can serve her stew with a choice of garnishes to taste. In that little garden, which is only twenty-five feet wide, there is a bed of chervil which the mistress likes with her fish dishes.

In the studio garden there are also flowers in variety, and wild things which grow spontaneously are given a chance. When a meal is ready one may eat it on a Pompeian table, seated in a replica of a chair with the history of an ancient race on it in low relief, or on a fluted standard, or on a bench as primitive as those made by men of the stone age. Mayhap romantic thoughts will need no coaxing even while you eat bacon.

In a waste spot at the back, near what had once been a playhouse, we dug a hole in the ground, in which I cooked some puffy, savory, velvety baked beans. Some bricks were found for a lining, but small stones or broken pieces of cement would have answered the purpose.

We built a fire tentwise in this hole —part of the wood was hard—and in about an hour it was filled with a bed of coals on which a quart of liquid boiled in less than five minutes. That liquid had in it two cups of beans which had been picked over, washed, covered with a pint of almost boiling hot water, and allowed to stand for an hour.

The bringing these to boil, over the coals, in the quart of water, was a necessary part of the performance, and it showed that they needed at least two cups more of water. Three cups of water to one of beans is probably enough when they already are boiling hot, are to be baked in a close iron kettle, but care must be taken that not a bit of this is lost. The beans will swell to twice the size they would over the fire. It is best to have the kettle only half or two-thirds full, otherwise the water might boil out, if the coals underneath were exceedingly hot, or the inclosed steam might escape with an explosion if driven too hard.

Most of the coals were hoed out, the kettle sunk, and the coals hoed back around it, before it was well covered with the dry earth, bail of the kettle up, and left for six hours, when we found it as warm as toast, and the beans quite perfectly cooked. They were simply seasoned with salt and four tablespoons of vegetable oil.

The iron kettle used was a Dutch oven, because it has the heavy iron cover, jutting over the top a little. This prevents any dirt from getting in.

I have baked beans like this in the woods, where we did most of the work of digging with a stick and a flat thin stone. But as the lady of the garden said, and she is as true a denizen of the out of doors as though she lived in a gypsy camp the year round: "A hoe is a convenient thing about a fire." Hoes and rakes and trowels are stored in one end of the little, long, brown canvas house, set up not far from the front fence of the garden. This house would look all right in the Grand canyon. Here it shuts the garden from the prying street.

The garden drops down two feet or more, a little way back of the little brown house, and here, under trees, the lady of the garden has planted with the name tree of heaven, we dine or sup, or when it is dark light a fire in the brazier and perhaps a Japanese lantern with a fat plumber's candle is hung on a bough. Two people in here among all the silent figures and columns look from the street like a big party. Robins will come and eat up peach skins and melon shells placed in an urn, and regretfully we leave for our city huts so near and yet so far, in atmosphere, away.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Raspberry and Apple Jam.

Pick over berries and mash a few at a time, using a wooden potato masher for this purpose until all are mashed. There should be three cups. Wipe, pare, core, slice, and cook Dutchess apples, and rub them through a sieve; there should be two cups of pulp. Combine with raspberries and allow an equal measure of sugar. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Heat to boiling point and let boil gently until thickened and the jelly stage is reached, stirring often to prevent raspberry seeds from settling, as they will scorch quickly.

At the present high price of raspberries this recipe will prove helpful to those who feel that they must deny themselves this particular dainty, on account of the high cost of both berries and sugar. By the addition of the tart apple sauce a comparatively few berries may be extended and ten glasses of delicious jam will be added to your store closet.

Iced Fruit Juices with Mint.

Arrange fresh sprigs of mint lengthwise at equal distances in frappe glasses, allowing five sprigs to each glass. Fill glasses to three-fourths their depth with crushed ice and fill each glass with fresh fruit juice sweetened to taste with sugar sirup. Grape juice, red raspberry juice, orange mixed wtih pineapple juice, or fresh strawberry juice may be used.

Steamed Halibut With Shrimp Sauce.

Arrange a slice of halibut weighing two pounds in a square of cheese cloth and cook in a steamer placed over a kettle of boiling water. Simply fold the fish in the cheese cloth so that the ends may be lifted with a fork to determine when the fish is cooked. The fish is cooked when the flesh leaves the bones, no matter how long the time. Lift the fish from the steamer, by running a fork through the ends of the cheese cloth securely, allow it to drain a moment, then place it top side down on serving platter and remove the cloth and pour over shrimp sauce, made as follows:

Melt three tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan, add three tablespoons of flour and stir until well blended; then add slowly one and one-half cups of hot water, stirring constantly until smooth. Let boil five minutes, then season with three-fourths teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper; ad done egg yolk slightly beaten and one cup of shrimps cleaned and broken into four pieces. Reserve a few whole shrimps to use as a garnish on top of steamed halibut steak.

Sandwiches a la Tartare.

Cut white sandwich bread in one-fourth inch slices. Remove the crusts and spread half the slices with mayonnaise dressing and cover with crisp lettuce leaves or chopped watercress. Spread remaining slices generously with Sauce Tartare; put them together in pairs, press the edges, and cut each sandwich into three strips lengthwise. Dispose them on a sandwich plate covered with a lace paper doily and garnish each sandwich with a tiny frill of pimento cheese moistened to the consistency that will allow it to pass readily through a pastry bag and small star tube.

Sauce Tartare.

To one cup of mayonnaise dressing add one tablespoon each of finely chopped caper, pickles, olives, parsley, chives, or shallot, and season with one-half teaspoon of mustard sifted into the sauce. Mix thoroughly, chill, and use as filling for sandwiches.

New Cabbage and Cucumber Salad.

Cut one small head of cabbage into quarters, remove the tough stalk, and cut each quarter in thin slices crosswise (the cabbage should be finely shredded). Cover with ice water and let stand until crisp and thoroughly "frizzled." Chill and crisp a long slender cucumber in ice water, then pare and cut into quarters lengthwise, remove the large seeds, and cut quarters crosswise into small triangles. Peel and thinly shred two small white onions, add to cucumbers, and toss until well mixed. Drain cabbage and dry between towels. Arrange individual nests on cold salad plates; moisten cucumbers and onions with cream French dressing and pile in small pyramids in the centers of nests of cabbage. Pour a tablespoon of the dressing over the cabbage and sprinkle all with finely chopped chives or paprika.

Green Currant Pie.

Pick only the large currants from the stems; there should be two and one-half cups. Wash and drain. Mix two cups of sugar, four tablespoons of flour, one-eighth teaspoon of salt; add to currants; mix well, then stir in the slightly beaten yolks of two eggs. Turn into a deep pie plate lined with plain pastry, build up the rim, and flute it with the thumb and index finger. Bake in a moderately hot oven. Remove from oven and spread with a meringue made with the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff and two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Sprinkle top of meringue lightly with granulated sugar and return to oven to cook and brown meringue. It will require twelve to fifteen minutes in a slow oven to cook and brown delicately a meringue made of the whites of two eggs and two tablespoons of sugar.

Ham Mousse.

Dissolve one tablespoon of granulated gelatine in one-half cup of hot water. Pass cold boiled ham (using only the lean meat) through a meat chopper twice, using the fine cutting knife for the second grinding; there should be two cups. Season with one teaspoon of mixed (French) mustard and a few grains of cayenne or a drop or two of tabasco sauce. Then fold in one-half cup of triple cream that has been beaten until stiff. Turn into individual molds first dipped into cold water. Chill thoroughly. Unmold on a cold serving platter and garnish with nasturtium blossoms and foliage. Pass cold whipped cream horseradish sauce made as follows:

To four tablespoons of fresh grated horseradish root add one and one-fourth tablespoons of malt or tarragon vinegar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, a few grains of cayenne, and one-third cup of triple cream beaten until stiff. Chill and serve with cold boiled ham, cold roast beef, cold boiled tongue, etc.

Old and Helpless.

"I am 68 years old and an invalid. I have been confined to the house for six years. My husband, who is 73, takes care of me. I just sit at home day in and day out. I can't do anything at all for myself. If I had a wheel chair, perhaps I would not be quite so helpless. Do you think some one might have any kind of a chair that I could get about in that I might have?

"MRS. K. C."

Can't you see the picture this old woman and her husband make? She is "just sitting at home" and he doing everything to help and make life easier for her. I do hope a wheel chair will make its way to their door, so she may have a bit of fresh air these hot days, don't you?

Scrap Books for Soldiers.

"I am making scrap-books for our library for soldiers and sailors. Do you know of some one who has a collection of pictures of movie stars? I thought perhaps you could help me.

"G. S."

I think perhaps I can too, my dear G. S., and probably some of the friends of this column can help more. The soldiers and sailors need our efforts now as much as ever, even though the war is over. Although scrap-books don't sound like a vital need, still for the boys that are in the hospital they prove a great blessing. So we'll rummage around a bit and see what we can do for you.

Wants Roller Skates.

"I am a girl in a country town where there is little amusement. I would like to have some roller skates. In return I will give some books which some other little girl might enjoy reading.

No return is necessary. We shall try to get the skates, and perhaps some little girl will ask for the books if you care to give them.

Loves Dumb Animals.

"I am a young girl, 18 years old, and love dumb animals much. If you know of some one who wants a good home for some of their pets, would you please be so kind as to put in a good word for me? I am especially fond of a canary, or a nice dog, or a kitten. And I would love it very much and take the best of care of it.

"M. E."

I think probably you may have your pet soon. Several kittens were offered a few days ago. A girl that loves pets may have all the good words put in for her that I can think of, for I love them myself.

When My Baby Had Fever

THE first time my baby had fever, I was frantic with fear. It seemed hours before the doctor came.

But he only smiled.

"You needn't worry," he said. "Pretty soon that first tooth will be through and he'll be all right. We'll just make things easier for him, though, by giving him Nestlé's Milk Food."

That was how I learned that Nestlé's is better for a baby's stomach than other kinds of milk. The doctor told me it was made out of the pure milk, modified with just the right amount of sugar and cereal, and all changed to a fluffy powder—pure, clean, safe.

Soon the fever was gone, but we kept on with Nestlé's as the safest and best way to give him milk.

And somehow the other teeth came more easily, and he seemed to be getting more healthy nourishment out of those warm bottles than he ever had out of ordinary milk.

Now, I know the Nestlé Company wants your baby like mine, to be helped when those teeth come, so if you will fill out and send them the coupon below, they will send you free, enough Nestlé's for twelve feedings, and a Mother's Book on how to keep babies well and strong.

NESTLÉ'S MILK FOOD

Nestlé's is pure milk in powder form that is already modified and does not require the further addition of milk. Always pure and safe, always uniform, and free from the dangers of home modification, Nestlé's has stood the test of three generations and has today the largest sale of any baby food in the world.

Falling for Four.

Out one Sunday in a brand new Palm Beach suite when an unceremonious rainstorm blew up. After a run of a block I was fortunate to find shelter under an awning over the entrance of a store. Here I awaited a street car to convey me home. The car came, I got on, and as the car was approaching my desired stop I deemed it wiser to alight before the trolley made its full stop, since my house was the second from the corner. I jumped from the car, landed on my rubber heels, my feet gave way, and too soon I found myself lying on my back in a mud puddle and almost under the mudguard of an auto in which were four girls, one of whom asked, "Did you fall for me?" Where All Could See.

When I was a little girl in district school it was against the rule to eat apples during study hours. I thought if I put my head down on the desk the teacher would only think I was studying. After my apple was about finished, I looked up, and to my great embarrassment, there stood the teacher. As I had no more, she soon found one for me to eat while standing out on the floor before the whole room full of pupils. Needless to say, I never felt kindly toward the boy who furnished the second apple. D. W.

Heard by the Boss.

In an office where I once worked we nicknamed the boss Vegetable Face because he had a turn-up nose. One day when he had finished dictating to me he asked me to send one of the other girls in with some letters he wanted. When I reached the stenographers' room I said to a girl, "Vegetable Face wants those letters he gave you this morning." On hearing a sound behind me, I turned around and looked into the enraged countenance of my august employer. E. G. W.

They'd Met Before.

I was engaged to a girl and never having seen her parents, I agreed to meet them one night at their home. That evening when I was going home an elderly man accidentally knocked my hat from my head and my hat was trampled under foot. Though he apologised, the loss of my straw hat so angered me that I said some nasty, ungentlemanly things. Well, I went home hatless, and after preparing was on my way to my girl's home. When I at last reached her house I was greeted by her with a kiss. Then she took my hand and pulled me into the room where her parents were sitting. When her father arose to shake hands with me I grew pale, red, green, and it seemed as if I would shrink, for he was the man that I had cursed a few hours before. A. C.

Too Many Children.

I was out flat hunting some time ago and rang the bell of an apartment just as three little youngsters entered the hall. A woman opened the door, looked at me curiously and before I could say one word said, "O, no, we don't want such a large family, and we object very much to boys." I was too disgusted to explain, but walked away." A. C.

Partly Dolled Up.

Shortly after meeting a man, the type I always considered my ideal, I received an invitation from him to join a theater party and dance. On the appointed evening I took particular pains to look my best and appropriate for the occasion—and I felt all dolled up. While sitting in the car nearing our destination, I noticed every one looking at me, and feeling conspicuous I glanced over myself, to discover I had forgotten to change my old felt house slippers. Consequently no theater and no dance. L. B. M.

Strange Weddings Contest.

Tell us about the strangest wedding you have attended—and the funniest. There's scarcely a wedding but has some humorous details. Tell your experience and that of friends. In the Wedding Procession.

This incident occurred in a little country town. There was a farmhouse near the church and the pigs and hens were around the house. It happened that a nervous young man was getting married. Just as the procession was passing down the aisle two pigs, attracted by the music, came walking down the aisle after the couple. All the guests were looking at the pigs, so the bridegroom turned and looked. At last, after silence was restored, the ceremony continued. J. D.

A Crying Time.

I have never seen such a "crying time" as there was at my cousin's wedding. It was a secret wedding, with the bride's brother and myself the only ones present. As soon as the minister pronounced the last words of the service the bride started to weep, and the rest of us immediately followed her example. To see the bridegroom and best man weeping was almost too much for me and I alternated my sobs with giggles. It was some time before the minister succeeded in quieting the bride. The cloud soon blew over and we went on our way rejoicing. H. R.

To Help with the Haying.

One summer I visited a friend who was the daughter of the Baptist minister in a small village in New York state. After 11 o'clock one night there came an insistent knocking on the door and a moment later the minister's voice called: "Come, girls, I want you to witness a wedding."

While the young farmer tied his horse the bride explained that the man's mother had suddenly decided that she must have help during haying and had urged him to get married that evening instead of two months later, as they had planned. He had been late at his evening tasks and they had driven ten miles.

After the ceremony the farmer said to the minister, "This was sudden, and I didn't have much of anything on hand, but I left a dozen fresh eggs and a pail of berries in the hall to pay you for getting up in the middle of the night." M. D.

Why the Guests Laughed.

As the minister asked my husband, "Do you take this woman to be your wife," etc., my husband answered in a loud, solemn voice, "Amen." He has always wondered why the guests laughed. K. J.

Stomach is Quick to Upset When School Children Are Idle

VACATION days are days of over-eating and under-exercising for most boys and girls. They loll around nibbling at light food, unconcerned whether the fruit is green or ripe.

The result is cramps, skin eruptions, pimples, "summer colds," constipation and diarrhea. The basis of such trouble is an upset stomach, and nothing will give safer and quicker relief than the well-known Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is just a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, a formula evolved some 30 years ago by Dr. Caldwell himself. Syrup Pepsin is now used by millions of people and is today the largest-selling liquid laxative in the world.

It is the mildest and gentlest of laxatives. It regulates the stomach and bowels so well that they can soon work normally again without the aid of medicine. And unlike the harsher physics and cathartics, Syrup Pepsin does not gripe or cause discomfort, even to a tiny baby.

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. A free trial bottle can be had by sending your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

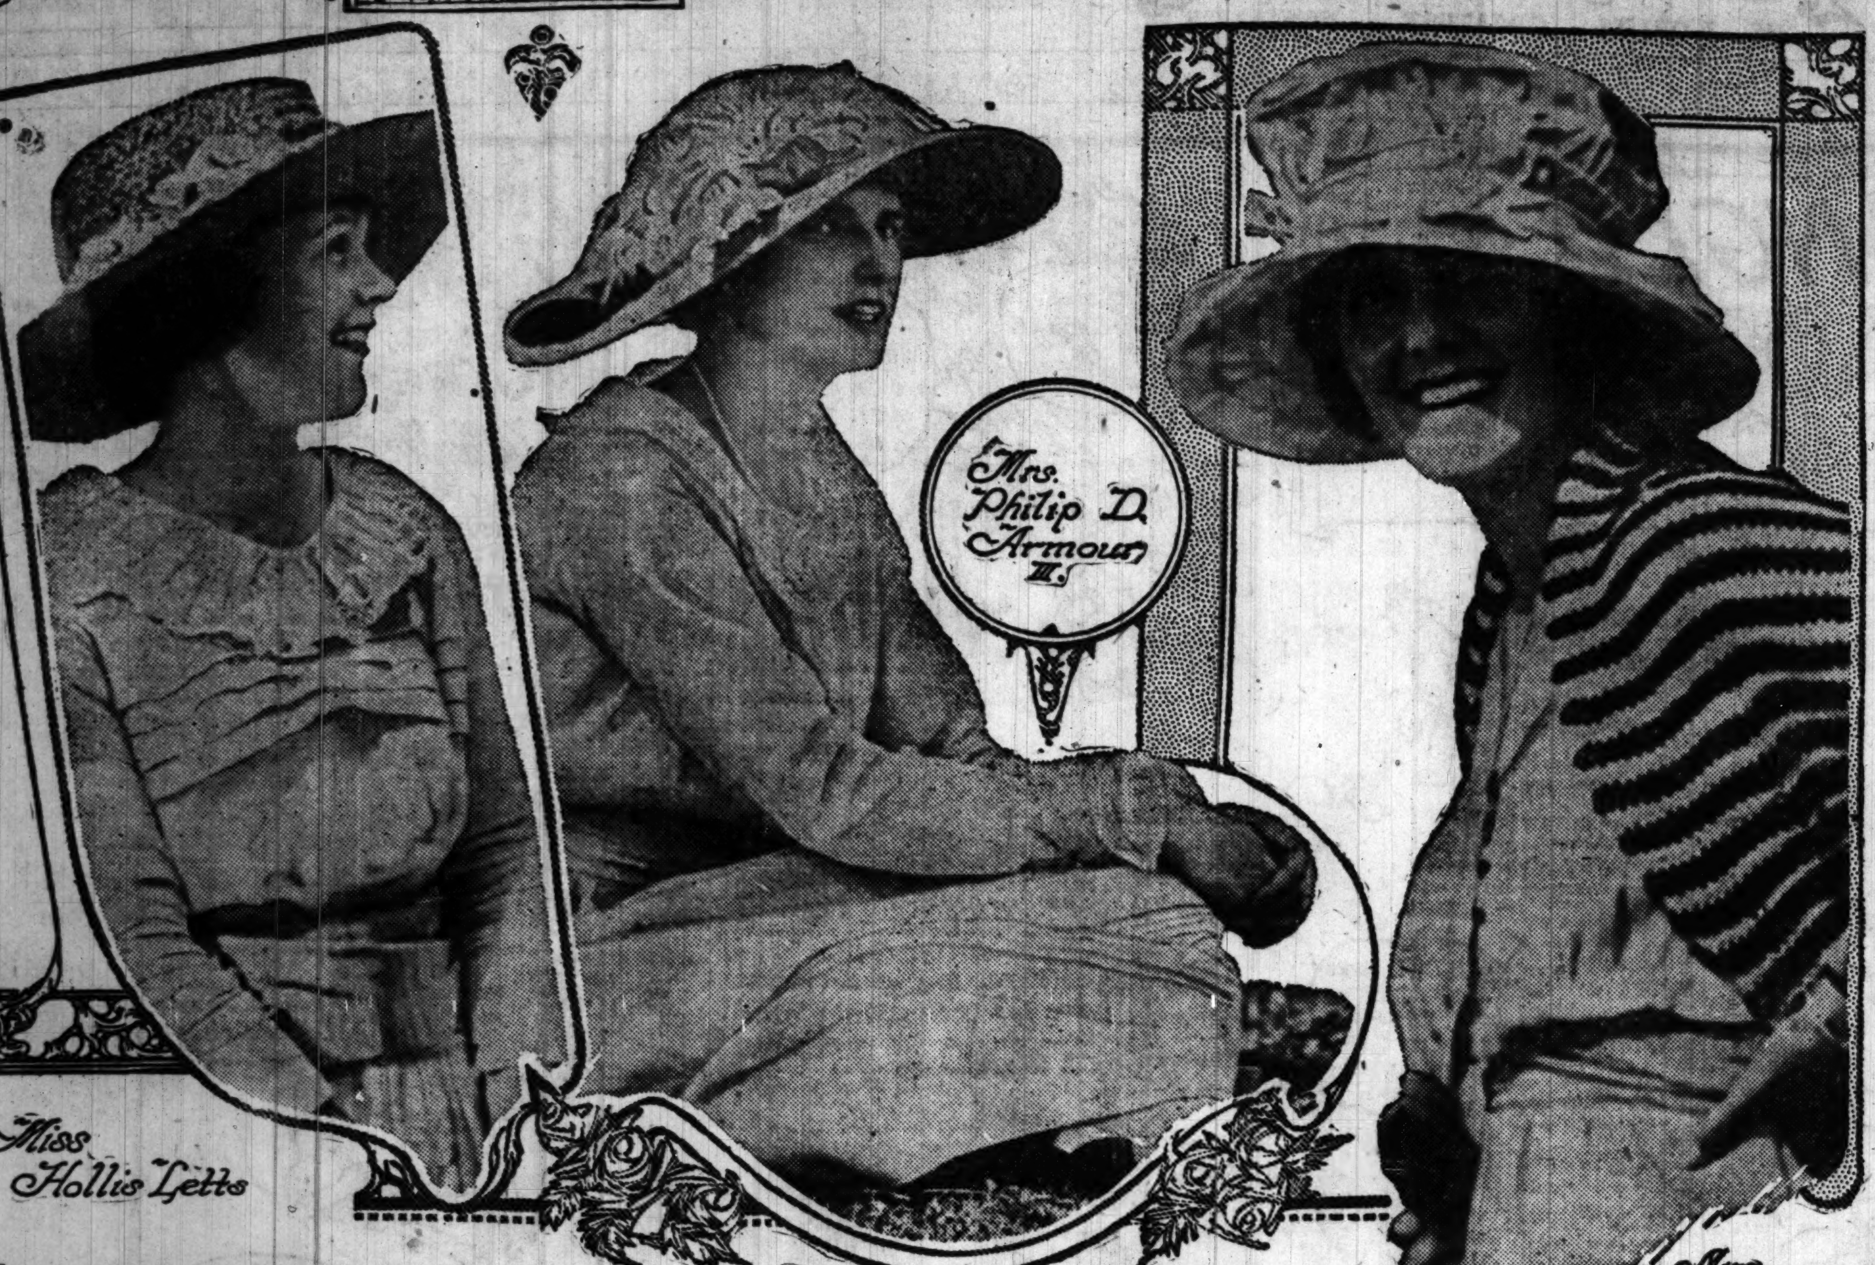
Two Popular Young Matrons at Lake Forest Summer Colony; and a "Sub-Deb"



Mrs. Philip D. Armour III. and Mrs. Howard Linn are two of the most popular young matrons in Lake Forest's summer colony. Mr. and Mrs. Armour, who were absent from Chicago last year, will occupy their apartment at 1200 Lake Shore drive next winter. Mr. and Mrs. Linn have purchased a house at 55 East Cedar street, into which they will move in the late autumn. Both Mrs. Armour and Mrs. Linn are interested in golf and daily play at Onwentsia.

Miss Hollis Letts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Letts of Lake Forest, is one of the prettiest and most attractive of the "sub-debs" and already is showing indications of being as great a belle as is her sister, Miss Courtney Letts, who was a debutante last winter.

These pictures were taken at a fete given a week ago yesterday at Onwentsia for the benefit of the Ridge Farm Preventorium.

Wisconsin Roads and Scenery Make Motoring a Delight

By Mme. X.

THERE may be places that are blessed with more perfect summer weather than this part of the world enjoys at the moment, but if so, nothing is being said about them, so we feel safe in reaching out and taking the cake.

It's the season's high noon; fields of ripening grain stretch about us, north, south, east, and west, for hundreds and hundreds of miles. Orchards are full of trees so heavy with fruit that they can hardly lift their branches from the ground.

The earth seems longing to comfort a stricken world with her gifts. Not that the word stricken applies as much to us as to other nations, but in this age of international communication we have, willy-nilly, to bear one another's burdens, and America's harvests mean much to all the world.

These pious reflections are the fruit of a four days' motor trip in Wisconsin's lovely lake district, where the wayfarer cannot help being struck by the exceeding promise, as well as charm, of the countryside.

Good Roads Well Marked.

In no state is there a finer combination of beauty and fertility. It is a land flowing with milk and honey, of thick groved, many colored fields, friendly hills, and delicious lakes, lakes that crop out of the prevailing greenness on every hand and give to maps of the district the look of a much moth-eaten garment.

The Wisconsinians are ahead of us of the Sucker state both in the excellence of their roads and in their wayside signs. This last named proof of superiority lies in the various carefully numbered and marked routes which the motorist can follow without difficulty from place to place. All along the main roads are easily visible well spaced white signs with the numbers of the route in black figures. Even the most obtuse motorist can hardly fail to arrive at his destination. So well do the Badgers attend to this business that if a part of a road is under repair the traveler is notified by signs of the fact and what detour to make.

Let us hope the $60,000,000 bond issue we of Illinois recently voted for good roads will be spent so as to open up untraveled and possibly picturesque portions of our state to the motorist. There is no better asset for any locality than accessibility to motorists. Every automobile—even the humblest—brings money to the land through which it travels.

Only second in point of importance to good roads are good hotels. And here, too, it is safe to say that Wisconsin is ahead of her neighbor to the south, though we are centuries behind western Europe and the British isles in the matter of comfortable, attractive wayside inns.

Lake Forest to Lake Geneva.

As a possible aid to others contemplating a few days' motor tour the entirely successful itinerary of the party above referred to is here given. The first lap of the trip was accomplished in a run of about three hours from Lake Forest to Lake Geneva, taking the Green Bay road to west of Kenosha and thence going by one curving but continuous highway to Lake Geneva, Wis.

Of course, if you can start directly after a repast of pink salmon soup, eggs "au paradis," broiled squab chickens, tomato salad, and red raspberry shortcake crowned with thick cream you go better prepared to find the scenery exquisite and the weather perfect. Even a "blowout" on a hot and sunny stretch of road seems a merry jest when so fortified.

If, when you hit this gem of Wisconsin lakes, it chances to be a balmy, moonlit evening spend it on the water, either in a row boat, a sail boat, a motor boat, or a yacht, according to your opportunity. The night will reveal its own beauties to you, even if it hide the striking features of the summer residences of Chicago magnates from your gaze.

These residences are really an unusual collection of lovely places as one sees them in a daylight tour. Some are attractive modern houses, like A. C. Bartlett's, the Martin Ryerson's, the Charles Hutchinson's, the F. C. Countiss'; some are stately and big, like N. W. Harris' and the Lehmans'; some are original and picturesque, like the John J. Mitchell's, hospitable Ceylon court. But to the old habitue of the lake there is nothing more charming than the typical, somewhat weather beaten, cheerfully homely, mid-Victorian houses such as the Fairbank mansion, built in 1873, where the Kellogg Fairbanks now keep open house, and the former Sturges home, which John Bordens now own and occupy. There's a feeling of open hearted welcome emanating from the big, high ceilinged, utterly naive rooms that is seldom to be found in the more sophisticated and artistically correct abode of today.

Lake Geneva to Beloit.

It is less than a three hours' ride from Lake Geneva to Beloit, the next leg of the journey. A sedate and elderly college is the most conspicuous feature of Beloit. It is housed in the center of the town in a group of buildings that for the most part suggest the '60s and '70s of the last century. These are set in a tree shaded campus that rolls and heaves with a symmetrical collection of ancient Indian mounds, perpetual reminders of the flight of time and the insignificance of any era of mankind. Frank G. Logan of Chicago is one of the generous patrons of this institution, and Dr. Brannan, a gentleman both courteous and learned, is its president.

It is by many considered one of the best of the smaller colleges of the west. It certainly has an air of gentle dignity appealing to the passerby, and there must be a life sustaining quality in its atmosphere because President Brannan, who has been at its helm two years, is only the third president it has had in the seventy-two years of its existence.

Beloit has a country club and a nine hole golf course, both overlooking the pretty river that flows as gently as ever flowed sweet Avon. A luncheon on the wide, shady veranda with the club's president, Waldo Thompson, head of a big enterprise in Beloit, is a delightful memory.

Beloit to Madison.

From Beloit to Madison, the state capital, is a quick and easy run of about three hours, much of the time through Dane county, one of the greatest tobacco growing districts in the U. S. A. A profitable crop, too, as one acre last year produced $900 worth of tobacco! But the "noxious weed" brought a higher price then than now.

We saw the dome of Wisconsin's famous capitol, like a pale moon rising on the sky line, long before we touched the city's green outskirts.

Four lakes encircle Madison, of which Mendota and Monona are the two nearest and dearest the Madisonians. They build their winter homes overlooking one or the other, and their summer homes nestle with their toes right on the water's edge. In winter the inhabitants skate and iceboat on these lakes, while in summer they go in swimming or they cut the surface of the water with canoe, sail boat, or motor launch.

Madison is a jewel of a city. Although it was laid out a half a century ago, its general design is as up to date as if Edward Bennett had planned it. The capitol, with its soaring dome, its flanking wings, and its stately flights of marble steps, is the hub of a good sized wheel whose spokes are streets. It stands on a commanding site and is visible from every approach of the city.

It is to be hoped that the claims of a grateful patriotism will soon be satisfied so that the large letters spelling words of welcome to soldiers, sailors, and nurses which now encircle the base of the dome may be removed. Also it is possible that in time the folk of Madison may abolish the light which now resembles a conductor's lantern set on the top of the dome and install instead the same system of lighting now used in Washington, which makes the dome of the national capitol a wondrous bubble of beauty against the black night.

At the State University.

There is no more interesting educational institution in the country than the state university at Madison. It has always been a political factor and force in Wisconsin. It is alive in every sense of the word. It is a mill that grinds continually, having summer courses as well as winter ones. Its faculty numbers 700; its students, take it all the year round, 7,000. It is co-educational and its domestic economy courses are housed in one of its largest, finest buildings. Its agricultural department is recognized as being one of the best—if not the best—in the country.

Its research work is extremely valuable. In this department Mr. Guyer, professor of biology, showed us the results of some extremely important experiments, results which threaten to overturn much of the present structure of this department of science. If by injecting a something—I've forgotten what—into a mother bunnie's ear, one or more of her offspring is born minus an eye and able, without further treatment, to transmit this defect to descendants, and if, by interbreeding, these defectives develop this peculiarity still more strongly, a new slant is given to the laws of heredity and to man's power to control it. Why shouldn't we in the course of time be able to breed out disease and crime and breed in health and sanity? Rabbits are chosen for such experiments because it is possible to measure results speedily in the swiftly succeeding generations.

Gay Social Set at Capital.

Madison is not all devoted to science, however. There is a set of gay young married people, prominent among these being Mrs. and Mrs. Walter Ayer, former Chicagoans, who have an attractive home near one of the lakes.

We have not in Chicago such an inviting club interior as that of the Madison club, a men's organization where women are admitted to dine and lunch, but not to membership. It is near the center of town, and overhangs Lake Monona. The moon shone bright on Monona's rill last week.

The well known Chicago artist, Christian Abrahamson, whose portrait of Mrs. William Prescott Hunt attracted much attention some months ago, is immortalizing some eminent Madisonians. From photographs he has painted a likeness of the former president of the university, the late Mr. Van Hise, a difficult piece of work, which is said to be most successful. He has also portrayed the present head of the university, President Birge, and its expert in psychology, Prof. Jastrow. One of his best canvases is a portrait of Mrs. Hobart Johnson, whose husband is the head of the Fuller-Johnson company, and who with her gray hair, dark eyebrows, blue eyes, and fresh complexion, is a delightful subject for an artist's brush.

From Madison one can run up in two hours to Wisconsin's famous Dells, where in a motor launch you can visit the Witches' Gulch, the Devil's Doorway, and other points of interest. Nature conquering nature was the most interesting exhibit, however, as demonstrated by the pines and other trees growing out of bare rocks, where also clung countless blue hare bells, feathery ferns, and that burst of color, the devil's paint brush.

Madison to Oconomowoc.

A second night's stay in Madison is more desirable than to experiment in the problematic luxuries of hotels in smaller places, and enables the motorist to make a comfortable start the next morning for the two hours' run to Oconomowoc. The roads of these three days' motoring, if rightly chosen, are, with brief bumpy intervals, exceedingly smooth, while the country is always gay, smiling, and surprisingly lovely. Hills, lakes, streams, quaint and tidy villages, pretty country places, and prosperous, well kept farms rush by as if a giant panorama were turned for the motorist's pleasure.

One curious fact struck the attention. Everywhere were evidences of mans' handiwork, from acres of mathematically planted tobacco plants and wavingcorn in seried ranks to an endless procession of well groomed lawns and weedless gardens, and yet hardly a man or woman, working in fields or gardens, was in evidence the four days of the trip. Perhaps it was the pause of the year, when man left the work to God.

Oconomowoc is a quiet, luscious sort of summer resort, with greenest of grass, thickest of foliage, and shadiest of trees growing close to the margins of its many silent, placid little lakes. It seems utterly remote from any world of strife, struggle, or strenuous endeavor.

Kenosha and Milwaukee.

An hour's ride distant, on the way to Milwaukee, lies Kenosha, whose bubbling springs once drew thousands of health seekers. Today it is almost abandoned by these. Its springs are boarded up, and after a half hour's search for a fountain from which to drink we had to draw our beverage from a faucet in a bottling factory. But the roads are excellent that lead to and away from it, and it is worth the slight detour the wayfarer has to make to take it in en route for the city once made famous by a now forbidden beverage.

Milwaukeeans have certainly smoothed the path for any visitors who come in automobiles. You feel as if you were a billiard ball, speeding over the best green billiard table ever made when you roll into or out of Milwaukee.

The way back to Chicago travels the intervening flatness just east of the Northwestern's tracks and becomes increasingly uncertain and bumpy as the motorist approaches our outposts. Zion City, the Great Lakes, and Fort Sheridan are the chief points of interest on this final run of the tour, a tour it well repays the motorist to take if he can secure good company and good weather for the excursion.

Chicagoans at Santa Barbara.

Chicago society folk are a gregarious lot and especially like to flock together summers as wells as winters. While the New England seacoast and mountain resorts are liberally sprinkled with groups of our fellow citizens, there are few larger gatherings than the Chicago outfit that has traveled—is it 3,000 miles?—to play together in the Italo-Spanish atmosphere of Montecito valley, near Santa Barbara.

I say Italo-Spanish because no one who knows the lovely littoral in southern Italy that runs from Naples to Salerno can fail to be reminded of it by the combination of seashore and mountains that borders the Pacific ocean from Santa Barbara southeastwards, while the first visitors to this part of the continent, the early Spanish missionaries and conquistadores, have left their mark on the architecture.

At Miramar, where quite a colony of our notabilities is to be found, the chief recreation is surf bathing and the wide, white sands there look like a French resort. They are gay with brilliant hued beach parasols and a multitude of bathers in many colored bathing suits. The proper procedure there is to sit about on the beach for an hour or more in your bathing outfit and get a sun bath before taking a dip in the long, slow, irresistible Pacific combers that roll in in a stately procession, quite unlike the Atlantic's more irritable, disorderly billows.

Among the Chicagoans daily seen on the beach are Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman—both senior and junior—Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Dempster, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cobb, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. West, Miss Eleanor West, Mrs. George Meeker, Mrs. David Cook, and Hobart Chatfield-Taylor.

Cruising to Alaska.

The Pacific will soon cease to be "mare incognita" to us. The Arthur Meeker party, including, besides the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gillette, Miss Mary Meeker, Allison Armour, and John A. Spoor, is now steaming northward, bound for Alaska and the Aleutian isles on the yacht Victoria, named by Mrs. Meeker. Also Clive Runnells is turned Alaskaward on another yacht.

It is to be hoped that he will recover the health he sacrificed last summer in his arduous and unremitting labors at the head of the Chicago branch of the naval intelligence department, which accomplished such valuable work in safeguarding this part of the country from subtle and insidious enemies.

The Service League Thrift shop invites its friends to a tea on Tuesday at 3:30 o'clock at 25 East Seventh street. The object of this enterprise is to give handicapped soldiers and civilians an opportunity to learn means of support. For this purpose gifts of worn out but repairable articles—shoes especially—are asked by Mrs. Frank Allport and her committee, who manage this undertaking. These are

"WE WON THE WAR."

Field Marshal French, in his narrative of the battle of the Yser, or of Ypres, says that the British empire was at stake when the allies, in October and November, 1914, were struggling against superior forces to keep the Germans from the channel ports.

He gives particular praise to Allenby's cavalry, which in a thin line held the Germans, by almost superhuman tenacity and doggedness, and kept them from breaking through and driving the British, French, and Belgians either to surrender or into the sea.

"The greatest threat of disaster with which we were faced in 1914," says French, "was staved off by the devoted bravery and endurance displayed by the cavalry corps."

High French officers were asked in Paris what Marshal Foch had done, in addition to his work in the battle of the Marne, to indicate his leadership. They said it was most conspicuously revealed in the long battle of the Yser, which threatened disaster but which he won.

It was suggested that the British regarded the holding of the Germans in the fall of '14 as their own particular and conspicuous accomplishment. The French officers said they knew that it was so regarded, but that it must be remembered that the French had 450,000 men in the battle and the British had 50,000.

Gen. French does not ignore the fact that the French and Belgians were in the battle, although he says the Belgians were very tired, but there is no development of proportions. It was not only the British who held the Germans and kept them out of the channel ports, but more particularly it was the British cavalry corps, a small part of a force which in its entirety was only one-tenth of the defense.

Recently Gen. Haig told the British soldiers to remember that they won the war. His statement was criticised by some Englishmen as tactless, but it undoubtedly pleased the English, just as Gen. French's tribute to the British cavalry will please them.

In his July 4 speech on the George Washington President Wilson said that the American troops had won the war. In his speech to congress after his return home he said that the men and the very step of the American soldiers in Paris and elsewhere in France were different from anything the old world had ever seen. He also said that our redoubtable soldiers and marines closed the gap which the enemy had opened in the drive on Paris and drove them back.

This statement is from the highest authority in the United States, and it obviously is similar to that which the two high British military authorities make regarding British troops.

Is it not apparent that the lack of consideration given all the factors in victory, the lack of consideration given proportions and the essential truths, arouse national indignation? In London, during Gen. Pershing's visit, there was a generous and politic effort on the part of some London newspapers to correct British opinion. American troops had come in at the nick of time. It was fairly ignoble to underrate American participation.

We have developed a high degree of indignation in Canada by loose boasting regarding American achievements. The Canadians suffered more years than Americans did, and they turn bitter when American opinion ignores what Canada did.

Emotions such as these reach deeply into national life. They form prejudices, and prejudices form opinions which sometimes take form in acts. Men of authority do a great deal of damage to the cause of international amity by inconsiderate utterances which wound national susceptibilities.

These deep seated emotions influence the individual. The nation feels resentment and dislike. Popular antipathies are formed, and popular antipathies take form in policies or they interfere with policies. They keep peoples in antagonism and out of sympathy with each other.

It is a very serious aspect of international relationship, even now, that the recent allies cannot keep from giving offense to each other in a fashion which a generous regard for truth would instantly correct.

CAPSULE VACATIONS.

If there be those who have no present argument in favor of the dunes as a national park let them comport themselves approximately as follows:

Put on the old clothes. If there is a rent in the seat of the trousers, never mind; no one else will. If your toes leak out of the old boots, let them. Pack a bag with grub; not with victuals and viands; grub; a skillet and a coffee pot; blankets.

After a couple of hours through the chimney pots of South Chicago it begins to be sandy; so sandy the railroads are merely tied to the landscape; and you detrain and trudge through fine, swushy sand, sand that gets in through the leaks in your boots, in the cuffs of your dismal pants; sand that reminds you of life because you have to plod and trudge; and you sweat and it trickles down behind your ears and into your eyes and you can't let go the bag and the blankets and the skillet, and you begin to wonder, by gosh, who put all this sand there, and it's miles and miles broad and long and mountains of it and valleys and the lake keeps right on kicking in more of it and still you heave and grunt and trudge and the sweat trickles and the handle of the skillet begins to fetch loose and clatter around and bang on your knee cap and a [illegible] lock of hair gets in your eyes and makes you cuss and you blow off the sweat that collects on your lip.

You quit.

That's entitled to a separate sentence and paragraph. It has it. Your arms, released from intolerable torture, sing you tingling peans of thanks as the bag and blankets and pots and skillet plop into the sand. A cool breeze blows up out of nowhere. You look round suspiciously and are surprised to find the breeze a fixture; stays right with you. You wiggle your neck and cool zephyrs play down inside your sweltering armor. You dissolve, not sit nor recline, just dissolve into the sand and say, "Whoosh."

Life returns again. You collect some twigs and make a fire, for the evening is coming on briskly. You wonder where you got the idea of heat and a blinding sun. In the skillet the strips of bacon are sizzling. The coffee boils merrily. The waves drum on the beach. The sun goes down like the dying of red fire at the burning of the old mill. The breeze freshens. Paleozoic now; shadows fall; deep dusk; an ichthysaurus rises out of the curtained dunes; prehistoric pachyderms gambol and prance heavily; a herd of dinosauri gathers; lake booms. And you reverse yourself by saying luxuriously:

"Gee, this is great."

DEAD UNSUNG, UNHONORED.

It has been estimated, for the edification of congress, that 540 Americans have been murdered by Mexicans since 1910. It is known that 317 have been slain. And in a majority of these last cases, according to a report of the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, there has not even been protest made.

In 1832 President Jackson was notified that an American merchantman had been seized by pirates in the port of Quallah Battoo, Sumatra. A demand was made for satisfaction. None came. President Jackson sent a naval force to Quallah Battoo, half way round the world, inflicted a severe defeat on the Malays and reduced their fortifications to ashes.

In 1908 a Republican national convention got itself into a high state of indignation and proposed to chase Raisuli the bandit the whole length of Africa and off the coast of Good Hope because he held for ransom Ian Perdicaris, a naturalized American from Armenia. Only Raisuli's subsequent withdrawal from events prevented national action.

On the mere report that a United States vice consul had been attacked in Beirut, Syria, in 1903, President Roosevelt dispatched the whole European squadron to Turkey and only the discovery that the official was safe prevented serious eventualities.

The outbreak of Boxers in China in 1900 and the deaths of several officials and missionaries sent the armies of the civilized world into China.

There are only a few instances of American rights upheld. And yet there are in Mexico 317 known dead at the hands of Mexican bandits, revolutionaries and regulars, and no serious movement of ours to indicate that we cared to protect them.

To establish the iniquity of killing an Englishman Great Britain would upset the nation. Are we accepting it as a matter of course?

BUILD UP AIR SERVICE.

Great Britain is spending $350,000,000 on its air program. France is spending $270,000,000. The United States air service asked for $129,000,000; got $50,000,000.

The United States is well nigh at the tail end of the list of big nations in the program to advance world knowledge in the latest and most important of sciences—navigation of the air.

The importance of the subject has been lost in the desire to promote economy and to veer away from the dangerous mistakes of early wartime preparation. Congressmen's ears still ring with the criticisms voiced against the blunders that followed the appropriation of nearly $1,000,000,000 for a scheme of aircraft that was to "blacken German skies."

There is no doubt that money was carelessly used in planning aircraft; that our vaunted program became a sad joke. But a grievous error is not a sufficient reason for not trying again—this time in an orderly and scientific manner. We are not under stress of war and it is not required that we contract for materials at prohibitive prices nor that we furnish swarms of super planes at a moment's notice. Quite the reverse, we have peace and plenty of time for research and invention and trials.

These things cannot be done without money. Under the new army plan which gives us an army of 325,000 officers and men, the air service will be cut down to a few technical men and some enlisted men. As against this small unit there will be pitted the British establishment with $350,000,000 and the French with $270,000,000.

In something more than two years the United States air service has grown from a small force to a great one, with well equipped flying fields, good officers and thousands of well trained flyers. The whole establishment must be thrown out of service, the flying fields closed and the men, trained at great expense and effort, sent back to other lines of work.

It is an unwise policy.

Editorial of the Day

WITHOUT POLITICS.

[Saturday Evening Post.]

The biggest question in the world today is the labor question—how to give a fair deal to and get a fair deal from labor; how to satisfy the reasonable demands of the men and women who do the world's manual work and get them in such a state of mind that they will not make unreasonable demands; how to keep labor power continually applied to production at maximum efficiency. That, take it all around, is the biggest question in the world.

It is not a political question at all—or need not be. Comparatively little political action of any sort is necessary to solve it. We can go right ahead and solve it ourselves if we want to. Every employer and every workman can do his own solving—far easier, surer, and better than congresses, legislatures, or soviets can solve for him. If the men who do the employing and working will just study, open-mindedly, how to give a fair deal in their own immediate relationships, the labor question will solve itself. Political intervention is simply calling in lawyers and courts to settle a questionable boundary case that the parties could settle themselves if they would be fair, reasonable, conciliatory.

Don't wait for politics. Start solving on your own hook.

"JUST now," reports New York, "the girls are wearing lots of marten." Perhaps in compliment to Abe Martin, who remarked that it was getting warm enough for the girls to put on their furs.

Not Necessarily.

Sir: From the rural correspondence of a North Dakota journal: "Rev. Witherspoon of this village reports having spent a very enjoyable Saturday evening with the Asa Harts." But what I started out to say is that I desire to take this opportunity of reminding these birds who are sending in contributions winding up with "But what I started out to say, etc.," that they are purveying old stuff, and that it is getting on my nerves terribly. I trust that the next one who is tempted to err in this direction will bear in mind that a little originality in an offering need not be considered as a fatal defect. E. C. W.

A WRITER in The Bookman calls attention to the fact that the next to the last sketch in "The Mirror of the Sea" contains a complete first sketch of "The Arrow of Gold." If you have a copy of that earlier Conrad book look it up.

SPEAKING OF "THE ARROW OF GOLD"—

Sir: The man of the flat did not often read a work of fiction. Induced by the wordy enthusiasm of a young sister-in-law, he picked up "The Arrow of Gold." It held him for a time, when suddenly he banged the book upon the table and exploded, "By Jove! Nothing but a hairpin!" C. P.

A NATIONAL authority on "handedness"—lovely word!—declares that "efforts to change a left-handed child into a right-handed child often result in a stammering child." And when the child grows up and begins to play golf he stammers over his putts.

From Our Manila Correspondent.

Sir: We have lived in this land of the more or less brave and the home of the want-to-be free for a year and a half. Philippine independence is more than an academic discussion with us. Americans aren't falling over in paroxysms of glee at the report that His Honor, Gov. Gen. Harrison, is soon to arrive with "a new bride" (to quote the Manila Times)—wonder if all his others were old ones—and none of us is throwing fits of joy because of the news that H. H. is working his physical head off, in the hope of keeping his political head on, to get independence for his little brown brothers; but we all are mildly interested in the outcome of the G. G.'s efforts. Boats sail none too often from the bay that made Dewey famous, and we don't want to miss any after congress passes the Philippine Independence bill. Which reminds us (we've been thinking about it for a week, but "w. r. u." is such a handy expression when you want to transish from one subject to another not even remotely related to it) that June 3 was election day in these fair isles, and 24,000 people voted in this city of 300,000 souls. (We believe in the theory that there are brown, black, and yellow, as well as white souls.) The polls closed at 6 p. m. When the papers went to press at 1 o'clock the next morning nearly 1,400 ballots had been counted. It was only a week until all the others had been tabbed up and the results announced. We are slowly learning not to attempt to rush the East. E. K. H.

THE city and telegraph editors of Illinois are to gather in Quincy, and the invitation reads, "Bring your wife or your sweetheart or the women on the staff." "What I want to know," writes a society editor, "is whether you are going to take your wife or your sweetheart or Jane Eddington or Mae Tinee."

THE LITERARY DIGEST.

The present heat wave has been the source of much debate in the press of the country during the past few weeks, with the result that party issues have been injected into the controversy. As the Utica Press remarks:

"There can be no doubt of the facts in the weather conditions. All that remains to ascertain is 'who is to blame?'"

On the other hand, avers the Mobile Register, "the mere existence of a heat-wave does not indicate any culpability on the part of the Weather Bureau," while the Boston Transcript, taking the opposite view, comes squarely to the point, exclaiming: "President Wilson should be impeached."

In the main, however, the non-partisan note dominates, as in the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, which contends that "after all, the weather is a matter for investigation by an unbiased commission, and not a thing to be bandied about in the political arena."

Bang Went a Half Dollar.

[From the Whitehall, Mich., Forum.]

It is a very beautiful production. Frank R. Adams, who booked it, says that he had heard so much about this picture and that it was even better than "The Blue Bird" that he was inclined to be skeptical. Therefore, when he was in Chicago last he traveled all over town until he found the picture played at one of the outlying theaters. It cost him half a dollar to find out if the advertising was true. It was.

TEST YOUR REFRIGERATORS.

THE points to be borne in mind in purchasing a refrigerator are efficiency, economy, and appearance. Of these efficiency is far the most important. Economy is not to be overlooked. Appearance, the quality which usually determines, is least in importance.

By efficiency is meant the ability to keep food in first class condition. It is divided into several subheads, of which temperature is very much the most important. Unless a refrigerator keeps the temperature down it is worthless, and if it keeps the temperature down nothing else matters much, at least in so far as ordinary household refrigerators are concerned.

Then the great question in judging of the value of a domestic refrigerator is, What is the temperature of the air in the food chamber?

The temperature could stand as low as 33 degrees F. theoretically with advantage. But at this temperature some parts of the box would be apt to go lower than others and water might freeze. The freezing temperature of foods is lower than 32 and they would escape. Practically, a temperature of 33 to 36 is best. At this temperature there is very little bacterial growth. Butter would keep for two weeks without becoming rancid, eggs would not spoil in a month, milk would not turn in four days, meat would keep a week, and vegetables and fruits would remain prime for the same length of time. These are about the limits beyond which we never want food to last in a domestic refrigerator. The refrigerator that does better than that has no practical advantage. There is no reason for paying any extra price for or standing a heavier maintenance charge on one that keeps food beyond these limits.

A refrigerator in which the food chamber keeps at 40 is highly efficient. It keeps food about as well as we require in the household and there is not much use in paying an extra price for one which maintains a lower temperature. A temperature of 45 in the food chamber is reasonably satisfactory. At 50 bacteria grow slowly. A refrigerator that keeps air in the food box at 50 is worth paying for, though it is far from scoring 100. At 55 bacterial growth is fairly rapid, milk sours in a few days, meat is liable to become tainted before it is used up, and vegetables wilt.

A refrigerator in which the food chamber stands at 55 is on the border line of being a fraud. If it stands at 60 it is a fraud and the worst sort of a fraud at that. When one is bought not only is the sale under false pretenses but in use it leads to a sense of false security. Its use results in the eating of tainted food that is supposed to be good because it has been kept in the refrigerator. It causes the loss of some food.

Those refrigerators that do not keep the temperature of the food chamber lower than 65 are not worth considering. Food will keep better in a basement or in any other shady place where the air circulates freely.

Therefore, never buy a refrigerator without knowing how low it will keep the air in the food chamber or without having a written guarantee of a temperature lower than 55. This is a simple test which any one having a thermometer or able to borrow one can make for himself. And it gives information as to the quality which is as important as all other good qualities of a refrigerator combined. Close to 50 per cent of all the values is in this point alone.

When it comes to refrigerators for hotels, restaurants, butcher shops, and storage warehouses and food factories lower temperatures are required. A hotel frequently needs to carry fish over two or three Fridays, and other foods at times for even a longer period. Food factories must keep their products in prime condition for weeks and storage warehouses must hold it at its best for six to twelve months. They must have the temperature just right, the humidity best for the particular product, and the ventilation good.

Canned goods ..	35	Bananas	34-36
Flours	40	Tomatoes	34-35
Poultry—short storage	5-10	Butter	35
		Fresh beef ...	37-39
Poultry—long storage	25-28	Livers	30
		Fresh fish	25-30
Apples	30-40

In a brewery fermenting room the temperature is held at 38. The temperature of the storage cellar is held at 32. Eggs are stored at about 33.

These questions are frequently asked: What is the difference between a refrigerator and an icebox and what are the advantages of each? In trade parlance, if the refrigerator opens on top only and the food and ice are put in from the top it is called an icebox. If there is a side door leading into the food chamber the name refrigerator is given. Whenever the door of a refrigerator is opened the cold air rolls out and the temperature mounts. For these and other reasons it is easier to keep the temperature low in an ice box. Usually the temperature is lower and the use of ice is less.

These are very great advantages. The offsets are: Iceboxes are harder to clean, they are not readily ventilated, and they are not so convenient. If a person can buy a good instrument he should buy a refrigerator. When it comes to the instruments generally placed in medium priced homes iceboxes are to be preferred. A $10 to $20 icebox will keep food better and will use less ice than an ordinary $30 to $50 refrigerator.

Humidity is the second quality in importance in the efficiency of a household refrigerator. If the humidity is too high the food will mold. If it is too low it will dry out or wilt, as the case may be. The humidity best for one food is not best for another. A humidity that is best for eggs would not be best for butter or milk. In an egg storage warehouse the humidity must be very accurately determined, for if it goes too low the eggs will dry out. On the other hand, we know that, speaking generally, we want low humidities in cold storage places.

The method of testing the humidity is by taking the temperatures with a wet bulb thermometer and also with an ordinary thermometer and calculating the moisture in tables which accompany the instrument. The best humidity is 55. A reasonable allowance of range is 40 to 75. A simple method of testing humidity is to warm some salt until it is well dried, cool it, and then expose it in an open saucer. It will not cake or lump if the humidity is low.

Dryness of the wall as shown by striking a match on it is not a very good test. If a refrigerator is poorly insulated and its walls are relatively warm moisture will not deposit on them even though the humidity of the food chamber is high. Wet walls are a sign of quality of insulation more than of humidity of the air.

Ventilation and air circulation are qualities of a refrigerator of a little importance. If the air moves freely from the icebox to the food chamber and from the food chamber to the ice foods are not prone to pick up odors. There is no question of health involved in circulation and ventilation. The question is one of retaining the proper flavors of the foods.

Refrigerators with the ice in a compartment toward the top of the box and with some flanges, floors, slats or tubes for directing the cold air into the food chamber and for pulling the warm air to the ice are advantageous. Paradoxical as it may seem, a well insulated refrigerator, with inside walls cold at every part, does not move the air about as much as does a paper soled affair cold in one section and warm in another.

EASE OF CLEANING AND DRAINAGE—A box with a white lining and a smooth, hard finish is worth paying something extra for. There should be no corners and the shelves should be easily removed. The drainage pipe must be secure and at the same time accessible. It will fill up occasionally with dirt and a gelatinous growth which develops in cold water. It will need to be rodded out and cleaned with household ammonia. Therefore, the drainage must be accessible. Somewhere it must be trapped else cold will leave and heat enter through the pipes and sewer odors may get into the refrigerator.

So much for efficiency. Economy resolves itself into a question of ice consumption. The proposition is to keep the food chamber somewhere about 50 degrees colder than the outside air. In the ordinary household refrigerator this is done by melting ice. The colder the food when it goes into the food chamber, the fewer times the doors are opened, and the better the insulation of the walls of the box the less ice is consumed.

A refrigerator wall generally consists of two layers for strength, one lining for appearance and ease of cleaning, one layer to make the wall impervious to air, and one layer to prevent heat from passing in from without.

The best insulating material is cork board. The United States government stands unequivocally on that. Furthermore, they tell us the thickness of other fabrics required to equal one inch of cork board in efficiency. There is nothing apart about cork board. Just as good refrigerator walls can be built with other insulation, but they must use greater thicknesses.

If a given manufacturer can use another material to greater advantage because it is cheaper or more available or easier worked there is no objection to his doing so provided he will use the required thickness of the insulator. A layer or two of tar paper is all right for its purpose. It is very effective in preventing air from passing through the wall, but it has but little power as an insulator.

Unless the insulation is good it is impossible to keep the temperature of the food chamber low—a matter of efficiency. The box will waste great quantities of ice—a matter of economy.

So far as appearance is concerned, the subject is not worth much space except it be to say something about the importance of smooth, white, nonabsorbing inside surface.

FLOSSMOOR ROAD SLATED FOR REPAIRS.

Chicago, July 12.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Can you find out for me why the road called Holbrook at Flossmoor, Ill., has not been fixed yet? The money has been put up long ago by the county, but it seems this work is being held back. Sig. Faller.

Information is asked concerning the Holbrook road. This road, in the records of our department, runs east and west in section 7-8-9, in Bloom township. No money has been appropriated for paving this road by Cook county, nor has this road been designated for pavement on any of the bond issues voted on in this county.

There is a slight chance for confusion on the part of Mr. Faller between the Holbrook road and a Flossmoor road that runs from Western avenue to Flossmoor and about one-half mile north of the Holbrook road. For this latter road, the Flossmoor, to the extent of one-half mile, money has been appropriated by the county; plans and specifications have been made and sent to Springfield to the state highway department for approval. This office is awaiting the return of those plans from the state highway department with its approval, and immediately upon their receipt the work will be advertised.

His real estate in Texas will go one-half to his mother and the other one-half to his sisters, under Texas law. His personal property will all go to his mother under Wisconsin law.

RATES OF PREMIUM.

Chicago, July 16.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I understand that the lowest premium rate on the insurance after it is converted is on the ordinary life insurance policy. Is this correct? What are the rates per month on a twenty payment life, twenty year endowment, and ordinary life insurance for a man of 26 years? W. L. J.

The premiums are lowest on an ordinary or straight life insurance.

You do not state the amount of your insurance so the rates given below are on $1,000:

A man 26 years of age converting his government insurance to ordinary life insurance pays $1.32 monthly premium on each $1,000 of insurance. The monthly premium per $1,000 for the twenty payment life policy is $1.95; on a twenty year endowment it is $3.33 per $1,000.

TRYING THE KAISER.

Chicago, July 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The contemplated trial of the kaiser shows that the allies are not acting in good faith to discover the origin of the war and to punish for acts of cruelty committed in the carrying on of the same.

I am not a German sympathizer, but believe myself to be a person of sound common sense. Now, if the allies are willing to punish the kaiser or any other high German officer without a trial they may do so. Fortune of war went their way and there is nothing which the powerful cannot do, whether right or wrong. If Germany had won the war, the kaiser would have imposed his terms without the mockery of a trial.

But when you talk justice, common decency requires that a trial of such a kind should be had before an unbiased, impartial tribunal, and that the admission of evidence, for or against the accused, be controlled by judges who have no interest in shielding this or that party. In other words, the trial should be held in a neutral country and the decision left in the hands of neutral judges. English, French, American or Italian judges could do nothing else but to convict.

At the same time, any evidence which might tend to show that the war was the consequence of acts of nations other than Germany would be ruled out by them. If the allies desire to convict the kaiser, or to punish him without a trial, they have the right to do so. If, on the contrary, they like to find out whether he is guilty or innocent, let them suggest that he be tried by a neutral tribunal, in a neutral country, by judges appointed by all neutral countries. Then, any judgment would be unbiased and manifestly fair.

CAIROLI GIGLIOTTI.

A MERE MAN PROTESTS.

Chicago, July 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Last night while seated in one of our downtown restaurants a fine looking young lieutenant and a nicely dressed young lady seated themselves at an adjoining table. His manner of seating her showed him to be a gentleman, but to the wonderment of those within sight of them, the said lady after seating herself proceeded to drag out a soiled chamois and mop her face and neck with it, much to the apparent disgust of her escort. Maybe she will wonder why he seeks other company.

What has become of the refinement of so many of our young ladies?

Time was when the pretty, lace fringed kerchief was quite in evidence and considered amply sufficient when one was in public, to cope with beads of perspiration that might appear on the countenance.

Far be it from me to criticize the desire for cleanliness; but why, O, why the necessity of making one's toilet in public?

All the little points of etiquette that our dear mothers were wont to instill in our minds seem about to be forgotten and the sweet, modest maid whom all loved for her modesty and purity of mind that must have accompanied it, seem on the verge of extinction.

What can be done?

EDUCATION FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

Chicago, July 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As was announced in the papers last week, the state of Wisconsin is going to raise $20,000,000 for the following purpose: 1. Each soldier will get a bonus of $10 for each month in service, with a minimum of $50; 2. every soldier who served in the world war may enter any normal school or the state university and receive $30 per month from the state during a period of four years.

Now it's high time that Illinois should also do something for its fighters. There is a great number of ex-soldiers who would like to get a college training, but cannot realize it on account of the high tuition and other expenses. What these people ask is that the state or some other organization appropriate a fund for the purpose of helping those soldiers who wish to help themselves, namely, to make loans to ex-soldiers desirous of entering college in amounts sufficient to pay their tuition and to cover some other expenses, under the agreement of repayment after the student graduates. Can anybody assert that the ex-soldier asks too much?

ANNA HOWARD SHAW

An Intimate Study By Elizabeth Jordan

ONE month before Anna Howard Shaw's great soul made its final flight she said to me, very simply, "My work is done. Now I am going to take a vacation."

Observing my incredulous smile—for I knew that the tremendous dynamic force within her would never let her rest, even after she had won her lifelong fight for woman suffrage—she nodded, seriously.

"I mean it," she insisted. "I'm going to Europe in June with President M. Carey Thomas of Bryn Mawr. But first, of course, I must finish this tour."

"This tour" was the speechmaking campaign she had entered upon with ex-President William H. Taft and President Lowell of Harvard in behalf of the historic covenant known as "the league of nations." "The troup," as the three distinguished citizens lightheartedly called themselves and their associates, had made an ambitious itinerary, extending from the east to the south and the middle west. They traveled day and night, speaking every afternoon and evening, and sometimes even in the morning. They were subjected to all possible degrees of fatigue and nerve strain, which each vied with the others to endure most cheerfully. But the experience was harder for Dr. Shaw than for the men. She was 71. Moreover, she had but recently undergone a severe attack of pleurisy, and, as always in her few illnesses, she had not given herself enough time for convalescence.

So she did not "finish the tour." Instead, it finished her. Her associates, however, need indulge no self-reproachful pangs. She died as she had wished to die, in the harness, doing work she loved and putting into it to the very end a power and enduring enthusiasm possessed by no other woman in public life.

Our last meeting, during which she made the remarks I have quoted, took place in New Haven. I had motored up from New York for a few hours with her, and they were strenuous hours. She had reached New Haven very late in the afternoon and had dressed at once for an early dinner given in honor of the Taft party. At this function, where I was also a guest, Dr. Shaw and I sat side by side and had our sole opportunity for conversation. She was wearing the distinguished service medal which had been conferred on her by the government only a few days before. While we were speaking of it Rabbi Wise, who sat just beyond us, suddenly leaned forward.

"Dr. Shaw," he asked, "did the secretary of war kiss you on each cheek when he pinned on that medal?"

Dr. Shaw sighed. "No, he didn't," she said sadly; and she added, with her characteristic twinkle, "I was so disappointed!"

"I will mention that to Secretary Baker," Rabbi Wise sympathetically promised her. "I think he ought to know it."

Immediately after the dinner we drove to the hall where the speeches were to be made. When Dr. Shaw was introduced the entire audience rose with her—a tribute that touched her deeply. She spoke for almost an hour, and I am sure that rarely in her long career had she spoken better. It was almost 11 o'clock when the meeting ended, and "the troup" went directly from the hall to the train, to make an all night journey to Washington, where they were to speak twice the next day. The rain was falling in torrents and there was a high, cold wind.

"All this is glorious, but it isn't wise," I austerely reminded Dr. Shaw. "I'd like to take you home and put you to bed!"

"Bed!" she scoffed. "Bed!" Then, as she looked at the rain and listened to the shrieking wind, she sobered.

"Don't worry," she said. "I'm enjoying this immensely. And, as soon as it's over, you know, I'm going to take a long rest."

UNTIL February, 1914, I had known Dr. Shaw only as thousands of others have known her. We met occasionally, were glad to meet, and parted with cheerful philosophy. I admired her more than I did any other woman in public life. I gloried in her indomitable fighting spirit and in her successes. But I never felt that I knew the real woman. Then two things brought us closely together. One was her autobiography, "The Story of a Pioneer," on which we collaborated. The other was her discovery that I was incurably addicted to mild diversions which it was agreeable to share.

"Do you know," she repeatedly told me, "you are the only friend I have who takes me out and gives me a good time!" Once she attempted to analyze the fact. "It never occurs to me to plan a good time for myself," she conceded, "and I suppose my friends think I don't enjoy good times—but I do!" she ended robustly. And she did. Few women enjoy a good time more than she did, although she invariably entered upon it in a spirit of gentle tolerance and was as invariably greatly surprised by her own enjoyment.

The "good times" usually began with a dinner at my home or in one of my clubs, and after the dinner we went to the theater. I was careful to select amusing plays, for I realized that Dr. Shaw's "good time" meant a good laugh and the temporary dropping from her mind of her innumerable anxieties. The last play we saw in New York, about two months before her death, was Rachel Crothers' "39 East," which Dr. Shaw greatly enjoyed. She was always especially delighted by a woman's success and was interested in all I could tell her about the early struggles and present triumphs of Miss Crothers. The doctor carried this sex loyalty, by the way, into all the affairs of her daily life. She employed woman doctors when she was ill, women lawyers when she needed legal aid, and, of course, women secretaries and assistants on all occasions. She had no illusions about women. She knew she could get the work done as well and sometimes better by men. But she felt that until men and women stood equal before the law women must help one another in every possible way to offset the injustice our laws imposed upon them.

In 1912 it suddenly occurred to me, in my capacity as literary adviser in a publishing house, that an autobiography of Dr. Shaw would be extremely interesting reading. I wrote her a formal business letter suggesting this and added what I knew would strongly appeal to her—that as her life was interwoven with the woman suffrage cause the history of one would be the history of the other and must inevitably help the cause.

Dr. Shaw was interested, and she promptly came to my home to talk the matter over. As it happened, a blizzard was raging, but she had braved too many blizzards in the far west to mind the trifling imitation New York was giving us. She arrived on the moment of our appointment, and for the next two hours, almost lost in a big chair before an open fire, she held me a breathless listener to reminiscences far more interesting than any recent fiction I had read.

"I've known what it is to be hungry for days at a time," she told me. "I've gone to bed hungry, lain sleepless because of hunger, and faced the new day with hunger so acute that I could not work. Through it all I had no prospect of a penny coming from any source."

ANNA HOWARD SHAW was great—and never greater than when she poured forth in those full days her own story. For the story was the complete record of a wonderful life—a life full of struggle, of battle, of enthusiasms, hopes, disappointments, of knockdown blows, of disillusionments, if victories and of defeats. Some of the memories must have been intensely painful. Some must have been almost intolerably bitter. Whatever they were, she gave them with the splendid frankness of her nature, leaving it to my common sense—or perhaps to our future wisdom!—to see that only the desirable survived. Through it all there was no word of bitterness, rancor, or criticism. Of one loved friend who had failed her in a crisis she said only "she did not understand."

Frequently I would make a sign to Miss Lambrecht to stop the transcription when some intimate experience came forth which I knew was not really being told us at all. Instead we were listening to the subconscious speech of one who had for the moment wholly lost the present in the past. And next to my resolve that the spirit of her autobiography should be Dr. Shaw's, and no one else's, was an equally firm decision that there should be no word in the book which she could ever regret.

Naturally, supplied in this way, the material was not consecutive. Something that happened in 1874 would remind Dr. Shaw of something that occurred in 1913, and that in turn would suggest an interesting episode of 1889. For example, she gave me her wonderful description of the death of Susan B. Anthony before she had even mentioned her first meeting with the "Aunt Susan" to whom she had given the supreme devotion of her life. And the childish episode of "the mysterious lady"—which shaped the doctor's whole career—was casually dropped during the recital of her theological experiences in Boston.

At intervals Dr. Shaw would suddenly realize the lack of connectedness in her story, and would throw up her hands in an amusing gesture of despair.

"I'm making a hotch-potch of this!" she gloomily asserted a dozen times a day. But when it was all finished Miss Lambrecht made a card catalogue which classified the different interests in the book and made the compiling comparatively simple.

IT was during this period, too, that we formed our "good time" habit of going to the theaters together. The only tragic play we saw was "The Yellow Ticket," which we slipped into by mistake and sat through with undaunted cheerfulness. Dr. Shaw's woman physician, who happened to be with us that evening, and who took the play very seriously, was pained by our levity.

As it happened, Dr. Shaw was in especially high spirits that night, and she hastened to explain the reason.

"I went to see Dr. Blank today," she said, nodding toward her physician, "because I wasn't feeling up to the mark. I told her I had Bright's disease, angina pectoris, arterial sclerosis, and cirrhosis of the liver—but," she added contentedly, "the woman couldn't find a trace of any of them!"

Like most imaginative, high-strung, temperamental women in fine physical condition, Dr. Shaw had occasional mild and strictly private panics over her health. In reality she was as sound as an oak, but she was constantly overtaxing her strength, and when she became thoroughly exhausted her imagination set itself to work. A hurried visit to her physician always put her right—especially as that lady usually greeted her with the buoyant question: "Well, how many fatal diseases have you got this time?" After the examination Dr. Shaw would forget her health, as well as all the ordinary precautions human beings should take, for another year or two. Indeed, she was like Frances Willard and Susan B. Anthony in the matter of wholly ignoring such trifles as food or sleep when she was working under special pressure. She once told me that Miss Anthony's favorite time to "talk things over" and make suffrage plans was late at night. Dr. Shaw herself was usually ready to sit up all night with any one who would sit up with her. Like Miss Anthony, she talked her best at night—and Dr. Shaw's best talk was talk no listener would soon forget.

One of the qualities most appreciated in her was her ability to submerge her platform manner in her private life. Many public speakers insist on addressing individuals as if they were audiences; but among her friends Dr. Shaw was delightfully informal, intimate, and personal. She was always splendidly, even surprisingly, frank with those she loved and trusted. With strangers she was cordial but rather reserved; and with those she did not admire or approve of she was like a shuttered and darkened house to which no amount of ringing could bring response. But let a friend ring the bell, and O, the flashing up of lights within, the warm welcome, the sound of dancing feet! This same quick response to those she liked she gave to her audiences, and it accounted quite as much as her eloquence for her unequaled popularity on the platform. Every individual in Dr. Shaw's audiences felt intimately and personally addressed.

The soul sincerity which made it impossible for her to affect admiration or liking she did not feel made enemies for her; but the knowledge that she had enemies never seriously disturbed Dr. Shaw. She accepted them as she accepted her occasional sufferings from poison ivy—as the inevitable results of injudicious association. Also, she had her own way of cataloguing them:

"Mrs. So and So?" I've heard her say, briskly. "Yes, I know her—but she dislikes me."

I never heard Anna Shaw express active dislike of any one, but I knew, when a name was mentioned, about where the owner stood in the doctor's regard. The one thing she did mind, acutely, was the loss of a friend, and this tragedy occasionally happened, of course, as it happens to most of us. Usually in her experience it was the result of the misunderstandings or misrepresentations which are inevitable in the large circle that surrounds a woman in public life. To one such instance I have heard her refer many times, always with poignant regret, for the friend was one she had loved and admired for years. And I am glad to remember that in our last talk she told me that she and this friend were drawing together again.

"We are closer now than we have been for a long time," she said. "I think she is beginning to understand me, at last."

IT should not have been a hard task for any friend to understand Anna Howard Shaw. She was a woman with one consuming purpose in life—to win suffrage for her countrywomen. It is not too much to say that never for a conscious, waking hour was this purpose out of her mind. Her whole life was adjusted to it. Everything else was subordinated to it. And those who loved her thank God that, unlike the splendid pioneers who went before her, she lived to see the realization of her dream and the fruition of her lifework.

Susan B. Anthony, lying on her death bed, calling the long roll of her associates, and clinging to Dr. Shaw's hand, exacted a promise from the latter and made her a promise in return. The promise Dr. Shaw made was that she would retain the presidency of the American Woman Suffrage association as long as she could do so, and that she would always continue to fight for suffrage. Miss Anthony's promise was that if the conditions in the next world permitted, she herself would continue to give her interest and help to the suffrage cause.

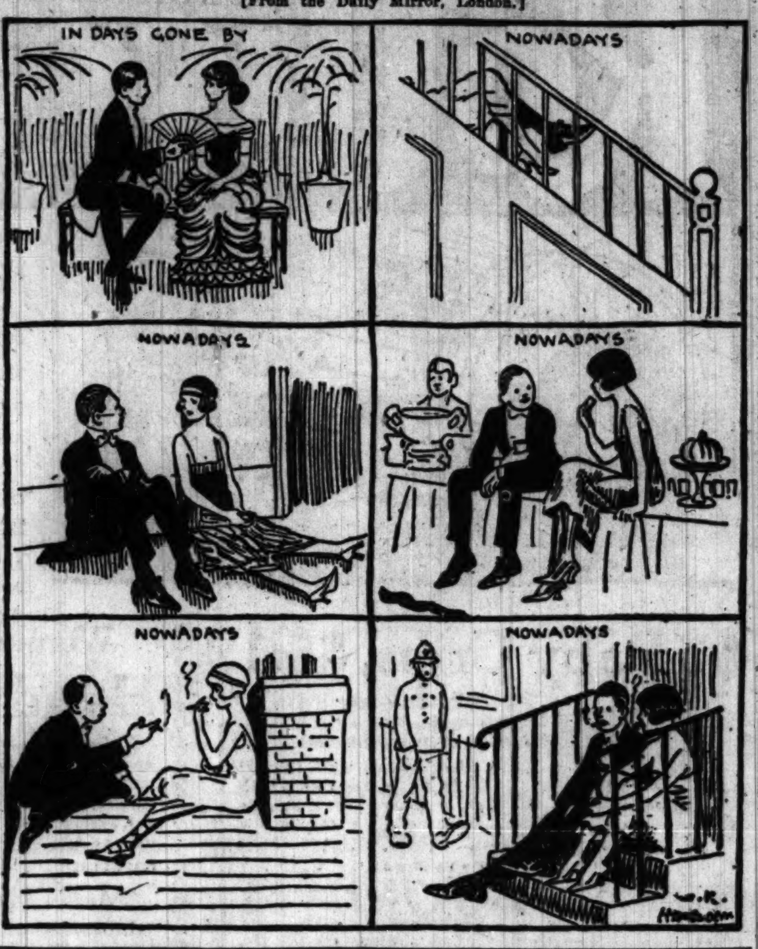
Dr. Shaw kept her promise. She also firmly believed that Miss Anthony was keeping hers. "Aunt Susan has helped me again and again," she often told me. "And I know that she helped us to win the final victories."

In that faith and that belief Anna Howard Shaw died. Above the tempestuous heart that was suddenly so strangely still those who loved her pinned the distinguished service medal and the diamond-starred suffrage pin that were the outward symbols of the battles she had fought and won. Her work was done. But next to that work, in that heart, lay the memory of her dearest friend. To Susan B. Anthony, who was twice her age, she gave, as I have said, the deepest and most abiding human love of her life.

I like to feel that in the hour when the stricken household at Moylan was trying to realize its loss Anna Howard Shaw was making her final report to "Aunt Susan." For that is what she would have wished to do!

MANNERS AT MODERN DANCES

[From the Daily Mirror, London.]



TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"Dangerous Days" [Doran], by Mary Robert Rinehart.
"In Secret" [Doran], by Robert W. Chambers.
"From Father to Son" [Macmillan], by Mary S. Watts.
"The Undefeated" [Appleton], by J. C. Snaith.
"The Day of Glory" [Holt], by Dorothy Canfield.
"Saints' Progress" [Scribners], by John Galsworthy.

WAR.

"Dinsmore Ely" [McClurg].
"Ambassador Morgenthau's Story" [Doubleday Page].
"1914" [Houghton Mifflin], by Field Marshal Sir John French.

NONFICTION.

"The Education of Henry Adams" [Houghton Mifflin].

"FROM FATHER TO SON" [Macmillan], by Mary S. Watts, and "Dangerous Days" [Doran], by Mary Roberts Rinehart, make their bow to the public almost simultaneously. Quite apart from the nice question of their relative merits, there is an interesting trial possible with them as the principal witnesses. They can not be called plaintiff and defendant, because they both testify to the almost unbelievable indifference with which much of our great republic watched the "puppet show across the seas." They give different facets of the same stone of American life, the story of the man of great wealth and his decorative but utterly useless wife who thinks her husband is a bit queer, but—as she would say if she lived in Sauk Center, instead of on Long Island—"a good provider."

Both books tell the story of a son, estranged from his father by the exigencies of American boyhood and youth and parental absorption in business, who finds his father in the masculine impetus of the war. They are not a bit alike literarily, and yet strangely, they are very much alike spiritually.

The war in "From Father to Son" is a matter of a quarter of the book. In "Dangerous Days" it is the entire book. But that same clear-eyed vision of the muddleheadedness of a country that stood by while the rest of the world was settling a score of decency shines through both of the novels. They will both be good source books for the historical writer of a century from now.

"From Father to Son" is a long, carefully written story of American family life in the inherited riches class, with a distinct moral question uprooting the young son of the family. It is painstakingly done, and adds another well-carved stone to the already firmly foundationed literary monument of Mrs. Watts.

"Dangerous Days" is, to me, the best serious novel that Mary Roberts Rinehart has written, though "The Amazing Interlude" was a war novel which succeeded in being convincing and really touching without being less popular than Mrs. Rinehart's clever cream puffs. "Dangerous Days" has the usual number of sops to the Cerberus of popularity, but it is something more than a merely popular novel.

There is something fascinating about reading the most "popular" of American women writers and one of the most "serious" of them and comparing their angles on life. You'll be amazed to see how much alike they are!

Because it isn't easy to decide just what books to choose for a joyous literary vacation, the public library has posted lists of suggested reading. Travel, biography, poetry, drama, all sorts of alluring excursions into literature are suggested. You'd better take a look at those lists before you make up your vacation bundle of books.

The English think that the titles which we choose for our books are so flighty. They like informative and sedate titles. What do you make of this, Watson? The Simpkin Marshall firm is to publish "Ah, Mr. Guy, Mr. Guy," by Sidney Hastings Webb.

"Rosy" [Scribners] isn't such a moonshine and honeysuckle romance as its name might suggest. Rosy—Louis Dodge's Rosy—is a mountain girl of Arkansas with an unconventional interpretation of the laws of mankind in her heart. Members of the Louis Dodge Worshiping Circle have added Rosy as a plank in their platform.

A book which is setting London a-chuckling is "The Young Visiters," a 10,000 word novel by Daisy Ashford, aetat 9, with a foreword by J. M. Barrie. The spelling has been scrupulously retained. Although Daisy Ashford is now grown and might have spoiled her delicious composition by extracting some of the naiveté from it, she has left it as she wrote it. The period of "The Young Visiters" is that when the late King Edward was Prince of Wales, and one of the visiter's visits is to a levee at St. James' palace, at which the prince presides wearing a "small but costly crown." It has metaphorically split the sides of London town. "The Young Visiters" will be published here by George H. Doran.

The government printing office is going into the publishing business. The first of a series of books describing America's participation in the war is "America's Munitions, 1917-1918," which is the report of the Hon. Benedict Crowell, director of munitions, made safe for common reading by Capt. Robert Forrest Wilson. You can buy these government books at cost from the superintendent of documents, Washington, D. C.

◆

"Petit Pierre" is Anatole France's autobiography of his childhood. It ought to be one of the greatest biographies of all time. Thus far I have not seen it. It was published in Paris by Calmann Levy, and has created a stir. Perhaps it's the same little Pierre who was delightfully in "The Book of My Friend" and "Pierre Nozière." As soon as a translation is promised I shall publish the good news broadcast.

Dr. Louis Levine, who was suspended by the University of Montana for having the temerity to publish "The Taxation of Mines in Montana" [Huebsch], has been reinstated—but with much less publicity than he was evicted. The state board of education of Montana offered to reinstate him on probation. He refused such a compromise, and he was restored absolutely. Whereupon Columbia university renewed its invitation to him to lecture at the summer school—an invitation which was not pressed while Dr. Levine was under the ban. Dr. Levine undertook the investigation of the taxation of mines at the instigation of the University of Montana, where he was professor of economics, and it was his refusal to withhold the result of the investigation that caused his dismissal.

THE AMERICANS IN PARIS

From The Saturday Review, London

NO one at this time or at any other time should write or even say things likely to create international ill feeling. But facts will not be ignored There are, indeed, certain truths which, like mushrooms, grow best in the dark. It is not only absurd; it is also in the long run contrary to the interests of international good will, to ignore the fact that the Americans are not as popular in Paris today as they were twelve months ago.

If, instead of talking about the circumstance as though it were a state secret and dwelling upon it with the sort of gusto which only scandal can impart to topics which lie within her province, we had discussed it openly—if, instead of publicly pretending that the Americans were still as popular as ever, we had really tried to understand why they have come to be extremely disliked—all parties might today have been both wiser and happier.

A very little consideration will show that the Americans were almost bound to be unpopular in Europe as soon as our gratitude for their imposing military parade of 1918 had lost its edge. If they had been as wise as serpents and harmless as doves, they could hardly have avoided offense. Had this been more clearly realized, due allowance would have been made for the difficulties of their position, and things would never have come to the present pass.

THERE are reasons why the Americans are unpopular in Paris into which it would be internationally indiscreet to enter. There are other reasons, social and deportmental, which are obvious to every man in every street in the world. There can surely be no harm in discussing publicly what every one privately knows. The notion that no allusion should be made in the press to the secrets de polichinelle which are the theme of every dinner table is mainly responsible for the dullness and ineffectiveness of modern journalism.

At the present moment the Americans are regarded by the ordinary Parisian as a barbarious nation, and the prospect of beholding them rejoice on July 4, possibly on a large scale, already fills him with apprehension and disgust. The nation which a year ago was the most popular nation in Europe has become, in Paris, a burden almost too grievous to be borne. The other evening we heard a lady whose profession brings her into rather close contact with the American soldiers and minor diplomatists in Paris proclaim amid general assent that the Americans are at the best children and at the worst they are brutes. We are not subscribing to this opinion; we are merely recording that it was passed, and suggesting that the passing of such an opinion is at the present moment deplorable, and might with the exercise of tact, forbearance, and understanding on both sides have been avoided.

It may be of interest to the Englishman who stays at home to know that French people cannot tell the difference between an American and an Englishman by his speech. To the French ear the languages are identical. But the French distinguish the two nations at a glance by their general appearance and behavior, and they find very little resemblance in their ideas, sentiments, and general educational background. The comparisons at present passed upon the two great English speaking communities (as our press loves to describe Great Britain and the United States) are for the moment extremely flattering to ourselves. But if we are wise we shall not allow ourselves to be thereby puffed up. The Americans could not avoid being unpopular in Paris. The mere fact that they came late into the war and that the importance of their share in the peace negotiations is out of all proportion to their sacrifices is in any event a difficult fact to discount or to obscure, especially as the French are as notoriously sensitive and impatinent in respect of their obligations as M. Perrichon.

SOCIALLY, the Americans in Paris are in the position of a man staying in the house of a friend and forced to behave much as though the house were his own. It is even worse than that. We have to consider that the man who thus stays in the house of his friend and behaves as though it were his own has, in effect, a mortgage on the house. We are most of us the debtors of America, and France not least of all. The American army in Paris may almost be described as the man in possession, and there is no possibility of avoiding him. It was an unlucky decision to make Paris an American military headquarters. The wild west sprawls in the cafés and patrols the grand boulevards, with the result that a French nobleman may run out of his house one fine evening and find an unoffending French citizen on the pavement, "baigné dans son sang."

The American army could no more be popular in Paris than the Canadians could be popular in Epsom. When, on the top of the military invasion of Paris, there came an American delegation, 1,400 strong, filling the air with principles and viewpoints, and amusing itself loudly and continuously, not the most civilized president in the history of the world could quite cover with his professional mantle the nakedness of his countrymen. The Americans were everywhere, and they could not be ignored.

All this would be of merely passing interest were it not for the peculiar position which America will occupy for the next thirty years. What is happening in Paris will happen on a large scale in Europe, as soon as peace is signed. During the war America has become the creditor of the civilized world. Her chief problem will be how to spend the money she has made. She is so rich that she has begun to be alarmed for her foreign trade, for it is impossible for Dives to trade with Lazarus, unless Lazarus can be induced to borrow the necessary capital to set himself up in business. Whatever ultimate arrangements are made, it is fairly clear that America will have more money than she knows what to do with, and that Europe will be, to an extent unknown before, an American playground. And Europe will hate it tomorrow as Paris hates it today.

Only by the greatest tact and wisdom can America secure in Europe the liking and regard indispensable to a great international power. Perhaps America does not desire to be a great international power. Perhaps the senators who desire to keep America within her set bounds and traditions are wiser than the president who aspires to rank his country with the older civilizations. Perhaps the Monroe doctrine is the result of a profound national instinct—the shyness of a young nation doubtful of her capacity to associate prematurely with her elders. This is a point which the Americans will settle in their own time and way. But it is already quite clear from what has happened in Paris that, if America desires a great international position, she will have to face a problem not unlike that of a bailiff invited to take tea with an ancient family.

IT is a difficult position, and one which no nation could contrive to fill successfully without centuries of polite international tradition behind her, or an instinctive delicacy and sympathy with the feelings of others which is not commonly possessed by the very young. America is indeed called to fill an international rôle of a kind with which the "new" diplomacy is singularly powerless to deal.

One cannot help wishing that President Wilson would sometimes give his countrymen a hint of the social difficulties which confront them. It is perhaps unfortunate that President Wilson sees only the best side of the Americans in Paris, though this may be inevitable. He is as little likely to see the Americans incurring unpopularity as the headmaster of a school is to witness a school rag. The behavior which President Wilson is accustomed to approve in his subordinates bears as much relation to the behavior of the Americans when diplomatically or undiplomatically at large as the behavior of well conducted schoolboys during prayers bears to their behavior when out of bounds. One of the nicest things about the Americans, in fact, is their obvious respect for their head; they behave remarkably well whenever the head is about.

The president has told us again and again that he is a representative American, and that the strength of his international position depends on the fidelity with which he impersonates the average American. In a statesman who has been called upon to act the part of a supreme high arbiter among the older nations, this is a dangerous illusion. It need hardly be said that, if all the Americans in Paris were like President Wilson, the Parisians would applaud his speeches with a better grace.

ROLLER SKATES vs. MANNERS

by Richard Atwater

SHOES, it is announced on high authority, are next year to cost more than ever.

Now a man who is a low salaried worker with a high costing family has each season an increasingly difficult problem in higher mathematics. Necessity is the mother of invention, and husbandry is the father of thrift. Cousin Egbert and his income can be pushed just so far. When shoes get to be too expensive, a substitute for shoes will have to be found. Luckily an admirable expedient is at hand, or, rather, at foot.

The roller skate, ladies and gentlemen, needs no introduction or apology as a graceful and invigorating vehicle of sport. And the school child, zooming debonairly down the street to beat the tardy bell, proves its practicability for sidewalk transportation.

Skates are cheaper than shoes. Steel wheels outlast leather heels. The rollers make a pleasant humming whirr. Civilization is not afraid of the purring noise of revolving wheels; however, if it should seem advisable, narrow rubber tires, inexpensive of replacement, will make general skating luxuriously silent. For speed and distance skating leaves walking nowhere. One can coast superbly down the avenue more swiftly than the trolley car, and save the nickel. The open air exercise is deliciously healthy. Dancing is not more rhythmic. It is easier to learn to skate than it was to learn to walk.

The only trouble in the world is that no one has the courage to start the ball bearings rolling. So far I myself have lacked the nerve to glide nonchalantly of an evening down the west side of Michigan boulevard on a set of whizzing casters. It would be a notable achievement. But, alas! even envious eyes would be shocked at such an unconventional performance. It would somehow be a breach of the proprieties—not done, you know; in violation of the decencies of more soberly shod heel, sole, and upper; out of place, bad form—in short, a defiance of "manners."

PILATE said, "What is truth?" Let us inquire, What are "manners"?

In Hyde Park it is "manners" to hold the soup spoon delicately east to west; in Charlottenburg the same implement properly faces due south. English traffic uniquely keeps to the left. The etiquette of marriage and divorce is notoriously a matter of geography. I have had five times to revise the manipulation of my dinner fork. What is etiquette in the streets of Ascalon is solecism in Gath.

The army code adds another variety to the mixed pickles of social behavior. The recruit has to learn his "manners" all over [also his idiomatic vocabulary, which we may not discuss in a home edition]. There is an etiquette for the drill field and an etiquette of the mess hall and an etiquette in the orderly room. He must not say "Thank you" for a granted favor. He may not tip his service hat to a lady. Presently he is discharged: a returning civilian, he finds the mufti of normal courtesy appallingly sloppy. He must discard the snappy salute in two counts. At the approach of woman he must again tip the hat, which he now appreciates to be a singularly ill inspired and graceless gesture. And what a deplorable lack of uniformity there is in the art of hat tilting! One may execute anything from a gallant southern semicircle of the top piece to an apologetic peck at the brim. And there is no prescribed range for saluting. For a week the ex-soldier will tip smartly at six paces, but soon he will slide back to the old, easy trick of nodding to the lady's smile, then, only after the skirted creature has passed, casually performing with his bonnet a delayed acknowledgment of her wake, thus indicating at once his station as a correct gentleman and his chronological independence of social bylaws.

Our era already bids fair to become one of universal reform, of ceasing to bow down before outgrown totems and atrophied taboos. Let us begin at the bottom. If the shoes of our fathers have outlasted their purpose, let us bravely take them off and give our long suffering feet a treat!

THEY laughed at the bicycle once. They thought the steam train was flying in the face of Providence. But shall we enlightened moderns hesitate to exchange our antediluvian, inadequate, increasingly expensive footgear for the swift, cheap, practically up to date roller skate of twentieth century freedom? Let us rather adopt the motto, "Wheels for heels," take this sensible step, and put life on a better footing. The details of comfort will easily work themselves out: for instance, we shall find it more convenient to replace the old fashioned, awkward system of stairs with gently pitched inclines. For winter ice steel runners will be made to fasten over, or rather under, the wheels, just as we now put on rubbers. Other minor adjustments will present themselves. But in the larger sense there can be no reasonable doubt of the success of this movement. . . .

I see a happy, radiant, roller skating throng coasting magnificently down State street, skidding sportively around the Masonic temple corner, gliding rhythmically down the aisles of the department stores; skating loopwards to business from Rogers Park and Beverly Hills; and on the dignified, cloistered walks of Northwestern and the Midway I see the solemn bearded professors rolling majestically to their classes. . . . From Chicago the movement will spread centrifugally to Gotham and Frisco, and from America in ever widening circles throughout the nations of the orient and occident; and the whole revolving earth in one accord will worship the goddess of Concentric Peace, whose image in art shall henceforth wear beneath her liberated feet, the symbolic winged wheels of transportational emancipation.

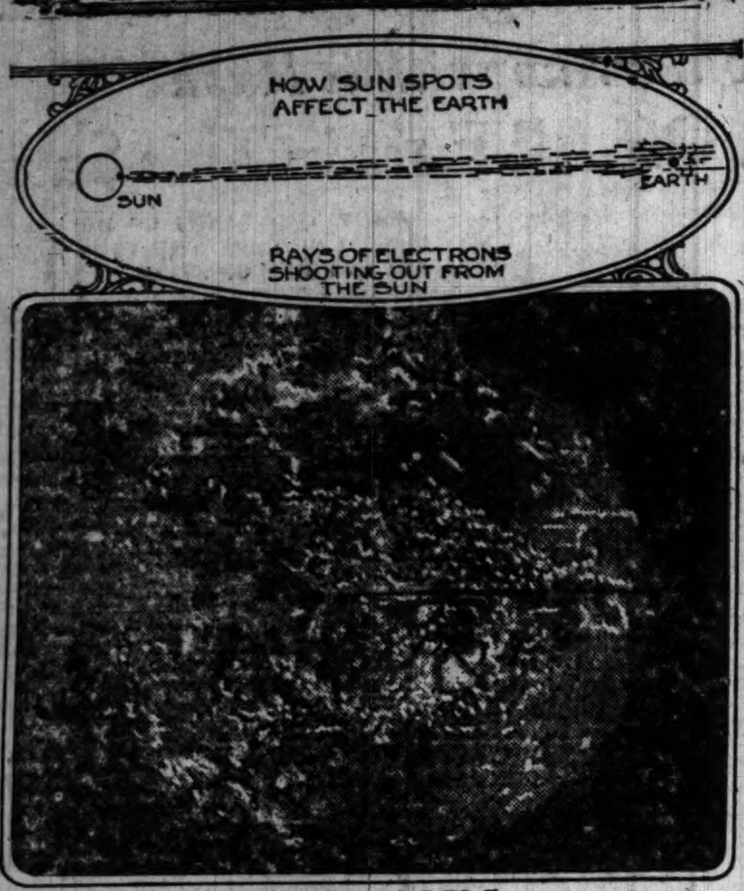
ASTRONOMY



HOW SUN SPOTS AFFECT THE EARTH
SUN
RAYS OF ELECTRONS SHOOTING OUT FROM THE SUN

THE SUN
DRAWN BY S.F.MAXWELL

PHOTOGRAPHING THE SUN.

THE study of the sun is attended by unusual difficulties. Its heat, when condensed by even a small lens, is sufficient to ignite many substances. No one would dare to look at the sun through an unprotected telescope because, if he did, his eyeball would be burned and blinded in a brief fraction of a second. Even color screens, if too thin, often allow so much light to come through that some of the color recording nerves of the retina are injured, and a sort of color blindness is produced.

It is for this reason that unusual precautions must be taken when studying the sun. Smoked glass screens, combinations of reflectors, and similar devices are used to absorb the excessive heat, but even with all these measures, the lenses sometimes crack.

Because of the necessity for so many precautions, making drawings of the sun is a tedious and unsatisfactory process. In addition, the air directly between us and the sun is the hottest of any in the sky, and is, of course, always quivering and pulsing with heat waves. The sun, as viewed through such an air, appears to be jumping and dancing like objects do when seen through the heat rising from a fire.

It is almost as difficult to make a photograph of the sun as it is to make a drawing. The shutter of a solar camera consists of a flat sheet of brass with a narrow slot cut in it, sliding almost in contact with the plate. It is pulled back with a little winch, for the springs which shoot it across the plate must be powerful. The astronomer watches the sun through a smaller guiding telescope, and when the air stands still for an instant he pulls the trigger. But even one ten-thousandth of a second direct exposure is sufficient to overexpose the slowest plate.

The most satisfactory means of getting a picture of the sun is to take it with a special device known as a spectroheliograph. A spectroheliograph is a combination of lenses, prisms, a camera, and moving track. The sun's image is thrown upon it with a telescope, and it automatically photographs the disc in one particular color. The light generally selected is in the blue or violet, for it is well known that blue light is photographically the most active.

A photograph of the sun taken with a spectroheliograph reveals a number of interesting things. It shows the mottled appearance of the sun, which is just barely perceptible in an ordinary telescope. The bright spots of the mottling turn out to be the tops of flames, and the dark spots the holes between. The bright patches, or faculæ, as they are called, appear as elevated portions of the sun's surface, showing that they are great clouds of gases being blown up from below. The spots appear as black holes leading down into the sun. Their whirlpool structure is apparent. There are long ropes of dark gases twisting and writhing as they are sucked in, while thousands of little faculæ about show the directions in which the whirlpool winds are rushing.

Such protographs explain what has long been suspected, that sunspots are the source of those clouds of electrically charged particles which occasionally sweep by the earth, producing auroras, magnetic and electrical storms.

The sun, being made largely of iron, is a magnet. The gases on its surface are of metal, too, and, of course, are good conductors of electricity. When an electrical conductor whirls in a magnetic field, as the gases around a spot are known to do, a great dynamo is created, and an electric current pours out from it, shooting off into space like a gigantic spoke. It is a stream of such electritions which produce our northern lights when they touch the earth.

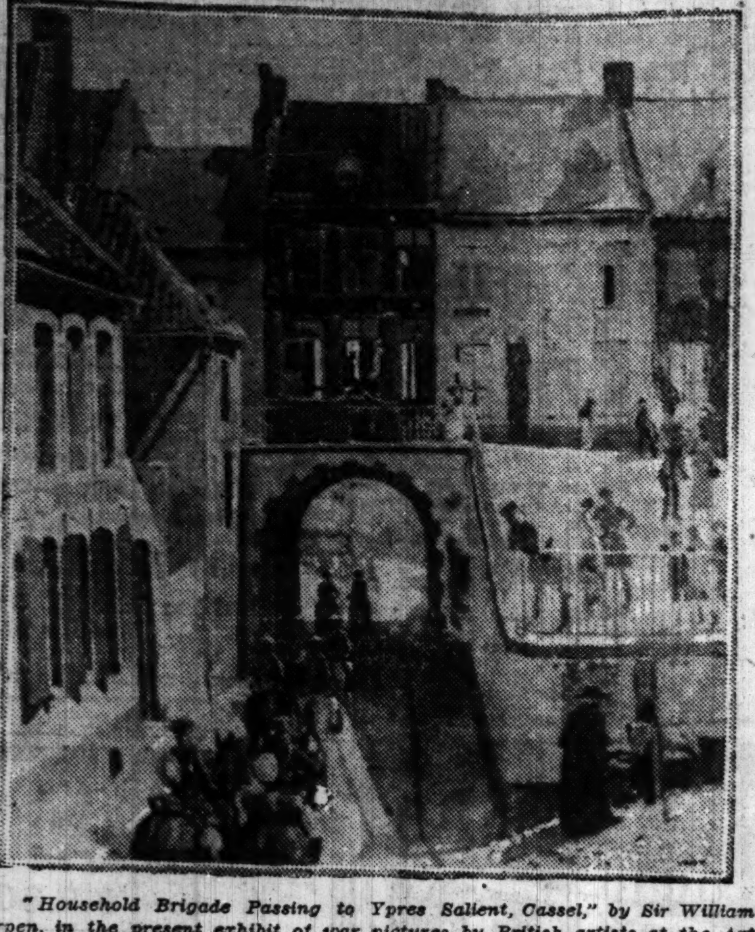
With silver lilies and with iris bound,
The stillness misted by a dryad's breath,
Who, Pan pursued, her refuge here has found.

Only a pool—a harbor of the stars
That, quivering, gold, slip from the sky by night—
A pool in forest depths, green tree caressed,
The cradle of the moon-maid's circle white.

A placid pool and patterned fair with flowers—
Yet as I passed I knew that I had found
The haven where the golden dreams that sail
Come stealing back—and ground.



"Household Brigade Passing to Ypres Salient, Cassel," by Sir William Orpen, in the present exhibit of war pictures by British artists at the Art institute.

DOUBTLESS it is a well known fact that the more open the mind, the more strongly is it possessed by prejudice. Assuming that mine, as a critic, is of such character, then in that fact is found reason for giving in this column the place of importance to the new paintings shown at the Art institute from the collection of Mrs. W. W. Kimball, and not preceding discussion of those with statements concerning the exhibit of war pictures and drawings by British artists, recently hung in the east wing.

For truly, though it may be that I, like others, am merely war weary, yet the prejudice that grips my soul against this exhibit [finding rise as it does perhaps in the first instance because of the injudicious framing of many of the canvases—particularly of Sir William Orpen, a majority contributor] must make utterance in proclaiming the old masters of Mrs. Kimball's exhibit to be preferred to these modern recorders of the exertion of Mars upon the English line of battle.

Most lovely of the several additions to Mrs. Kimball's gallery is the pool of lilies, tree-shadowed, by Claude Monet. Like a fleet of fairy shallops, crystal and gold, the blossoms swing at anchor among the green pads. A thin, gray film clings to the placid surface that shows faintly blue under its cloak. In the still depths rustle the soundless shades of the forest trees that guard, unseen, the mystery of the pool.

The landscape by Pissarro is one of a warm, sultry day in midsummer. The sky is rich with clouds that the slow canal reflects in their white flight, bearing their swelling shapes like so many swans upon its limpid, level surface. On either side stretch banks, green and yellow with flowering weeds. Down the cream clay road walk peasants, unhurried, lazily. Beyond, the red roofs of a tiny French village rise from the heart of a clump of trees.

The marine by Maufra is not of particular interest. There is spirit and power in the roll of the green waves to shore, and the fishing fleet, with brown sails set, makes a gallant getaway to sea, but it is not a canvas that one cares especially about. More sensitive in appeal is the other painting by Monet—a field of poppies backed by a green line of cypress against a blue range of mountains, that in turn are banked against a paler sky.

There is, too, a fall landscape by D'Espagnet, that charms. And the painting of the cattle being brought from pasture through the hush of the falling night makes one think of the lines from Grey's Elegy—"The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea—and leaves the world to darkness and to me"—except for the fact that no "me" is present, discounting entirely the presence of the cowherd.

The exhibit of the British war pictures opened on Tuesday. It is excellent, in certain respects, and not so good in others. Not many artists are represented. But those that are are well represented. The greater number of the paintings are from the brush of Sir William Orpen. And one could forgive him the tasteless white frames that surround his work, were it not that the spirit of forgiveness is terrifically weakened when one is forced to contemplate his idea of the state of refugeedom that swept Belgium and France during much of the war.

"The Refugee" is a typical Howard Chandler Christy poster maiden—exceedingly fair to look upon—white shouldered, pink cheeked, blue eyed, yellow curled, lace enwrapped—a very proper person for the first row in the ballet, but not at all the product one would guess from the muddied, shell torn roads of Hun-stricken France.

Yet Sir, William makes up for this slight error in character by the many successful portraits of soldiers and almost beautiful glimpses of spots made known to us through the annals of conflict. One of the best of the portraits is of a French war correspondent, M. de Maratray. Among others of his pictures that are of interest are "Tanks," "Household Brigade Passing Ypres Salient, Cassel," "The Falling Bomb," "The Deserter," "Horses Near Aubigny," "Captured German Munition Dump," and "A Grenadier Guardsman."

The five pictures by G. Spencer Pryse are all excellent. I have no preference in this group. "Belgium, 1914: Fugitives" haunts one by its pathetic realism. These are not poster refugees, but flesh and blood. As forcibly human are they as are those other destitute women in the picture "Refugees: The Last View of Belgium, 1914," where, in a steerage cabin, with their few bits of saved property about them, they crouch, while one braver soul looks through the port hole over the rough waves at the shore line of their land fading into the distance behind them.

"British Artillery Leaving Railhead" is a splendid composition. Cars, guns, wagons, mounted men, and infantry, watched by the townswomen on the narrow curb, press pell-mell down the none too broad street through the falling night. There is an atmosphere of life and hurry and adventure about this that brings close a realization of exactly what life at such moments meant.

Delicate in color and detail are the scenes given by James McBey. Most of them deal with the war in the desert—that war through the Holy Land of which not so much was wrtiten. In

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

TRAINING THE GIRL.

[For information on schools and education write the School Counselor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. If a personal reply is desired, a stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

PLANNING a boy's life is comparatively simple as far as the outline and the purpose are concerned. It is plain to him and to the world in the majority of cases that he must be a breadwinner; that he will have others dependent on him and hence he must be trained for some fairly lucrative work.

Further, the business or profession which he enters will be his life work. He will remain at it until ill health or financial independence releases him. Marriage will only increase the intensity of his application to work.

He may have some hobby which he thinks he would like to pursue and so he devotes his holidays to it. However, the hobby rarely rises to the dignity of a vocation. His business goes on developing, enlarging, improving. His home and family may rise and fall, change and shift, but his work goes steadily on.

This definiteness of purpose is characteristic of the average man's life. His work, too, in a large measure satisfies him. If affairs go badly at home his work is his solace.

A woman's life, however, differs in many ways from a man's, and perhaps the most vital, the fundamental, difference lies in the enforced uncertainty of purpose. No girl knows definitely whether she is going to marry or not and as a consequence does not know whether to prepare herself for homekeeping or for an independent and self-supporting life. So in the case of the girl one is face to face with the necessity of preparing her for two vocations if she is to be fully educated and trained according to modern needs.

It is not fair to the girl or to her future home that she should not receive some training in the domestic arts. She must learn either at home or at school the simpler domestic accomplishments—cooking, sewing, buying, the care of the sick, the care of children, sanitation—all fundamental to a well managed household. Then, too, there are the finer arts—music, painting, the cultivation of the manners and the voice—all these should be part of a girl's equipment and cultivated during her impressionable school years.

Besides this, there is the training for some vocation until she marries, or, in case she does not marry, educating her to earn her living along some pleasant and lucrative line.

As for the training in the homemaking arts, it should be begun early, even in the grades, as many girls do not reach high school; it can be elaborated in high school and carried still further in case she goes to college and reinforced by practice at home.

The choice of a line of self-supporting work for the young woman is a much more serious matter. Every effort should be made to find work for her along the line of her taste or talent. Thus she will devote herself to it with a permanent enthusiasm and obtain great development from it.

It is a regrettable fact that so many consider the girl's work as only temporary, and for this reason make no attempt to find her suitable employment. The girl is trained for some work for which she can obtain the quickest financial returns, but for which she possesses no ability nor taste, and she toils away at it, thinking that each year will bring some kind of a change.

So it is seen that for the large majority of girls two vocations are an essential. For even if it is quite certain that the girl will never need to earn her living training along some other line than the domestic is a wise step.

This work, more of an avocation perhaps than a vocation, should be along the line of her strongest tastes. It should be something which she can pursue in her leisure even though her home duties may be taking much of her time, and something which she can continue in later life, when those home duties are perhaps no longer necessary.

For it is so often the cry of a woman of middle age: "If I could only do something." They have no side line to interest them when their children are grown and married. And if, in their school years, they were trained for some avocation, they would have it not only as an interest through all the busy, absorbed years of their youth, but it would still be with them in their later life; an interest for these women who have been called the "graduate mothers."

A woman passes through a number of different stages and the more her interests, the more her capacities, the more surely is she fortified against that great emptiness so many women have to face in later life.

The occupations for girls are many and are constantly increasing. The problem is not to find the vocation, but to discover the girl's line of largest talent and usefulness.

If she has domestic tastes she can find wide opportunity—dietitian manager of a lunchroom, caterer, coöperative buying of foods, household decorations.

If she likes out of doors there are the many diversified forms of agriculture, such as bee keeping, landscape gardening, poultry raising, floriculture, fruit growing, and general farming.

In the industrial arts there is millinery, dress designing, art designing, textile working, ceramics, bookbinding, and engraving.

In business there is stenography, saleswoman, buyer for departments, telegrapher, solicitor, insurance agent, and many other purely commercial lines.

In the professions there are few which are open to men and not to women. There is law, medicine, lecturing, architecture, teaching, translating, librarian, dramatics, journalism, dentistry, and so on, through the gamut of the professions. There are even women in many of the lines of engineering.

Then there is social service work, of course, in all its ramifications, and among the special occupations for girls and women might be mentioned the different lines of civil service, and also such lines as hairdressing, manicuring, chiropodist, masseuse, and traveler's guide.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I would like to know about the summer schools and the one which is closest to my address. My daughter is ready to start in high school in the fall, but was out of school two weeks before it closed. So please let me know about the best summer school for her to go to and the terms. MRS. J. M."

I am afraid that it is too late now for your daughter to start in summer school. School has been open three weeks, nearly half of the summer term. However, I do not think she will have any trouble starting in high school and can make up any work she lacks in the summer high school next year.

"Please tell me the nearest elementary summer school near Oakenwald (south side). I want my child to attend if it is not too far away. E. L. W."

There is a summer school at the Raymond school, 3622 South Wabash avenue, and also one at the Fiske school, 6145 Ingleside avenue.

"I am writing you concerning a college to which I have written three times for a catalogue of the courses offered and requirements, but have received none. What shall I do? M. S."

If you will send me your name and address I shall be very glad to write to the college and ask it to send you full information regarding its courses and requirements.

Mrs. Dean Goes Calling—

And—contradictory as it may seem—she is also freezing ice cream. A marvelous new way—the cream simply freezes itself. No turning, no attention.

BOBBY and Betty Dean no longer have to beg and tease their mother to make ice cream. Mrs. Dean has discovered a magic new way to freeze it—a way so wonderfully easy that she now enjoys making the cream almost as much as the children enjoy eating it.

If Mrs. Dean had to freeze it the old-fashioned way—lugging a heavy wooden freezer around, tugging and turning a stubborn handle or crank 2000 or more times—Bobby and Betty would seldom get a taste of home-made ice cream; the kind they like best and that is also best for them.

But thanks to the new way, Mrs. Dean says that freezing ice cream is really less trouble than any other hot-weather dessert or between-meals refreshment she could prepare; says it is now almost as easy as making lemonade or preparing a pitcher of ice water.

Mrs. Dean is one of the thousands of women who use the Auto Vacuum Freezer—the new kind of freezer that requires neither turning nor attention. The freezing process is entirely automatic.

And this is the way Mrs. Dean does it. She puts a little ice and salt in one end of her Auto Vacuum Freezer—pours the cream mixture in the other end—and then simply sets the freezer aside and forgets all about it. Doesn't give it another thought until time to serve the cream, whether that is in half an hour or several hours later; for while the freezing process takes only 30 minutes, the cream stays hard for as long as 8 hours without any more ice or attention.

Free Recipe Book

Book of 55 delicious recipes by Marion H. Neill (formerly food editor of Ladies' Home Journal) included with each freezer. 20 kinds of cream, 35 sherbets, ices, etc.

Auto Vacuum Freezer

Patents sustained by highest courts—infringers beware

Sherbets, ices, etc., are equally easy to freeze.

* * * * *

The cream compartment opens from the top, the ice compartment from the bottom, each entirely separated from the other—absolutely no chance for the ice or salt to spoil the cream.

As light in weight as a piece of aluminum ware—and as easy to keep clean. Nothing to take apart. Nothing to rust. Nothing to get out of order.

Freezes any quantity of cream desired, from a pint up to two quarts.

Requires only a third to a half as much ice as old style freezers—soon pays for itself by the saving on ice alone.

Yet with all these advantages, the price is only $5. Why not get one today? Then it will be no trouble to treat the family to pure home-made ice cream as often as they want it.

Five Churches Unite in Holding Outdoor Services

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

DOWNER'S GROVE, one of Chicago's nearby suburbs, believes in the benefits of open air worship and makes use of its civic opportunity. Five churches have united in forming what they have named "The Church of the Open Street."

By order of the village council one of the streets has been closed to traffic Sunday nights during the heated term. A pulpit surrounded by an amphitheater of seats has been provided. Services last Sunday night were not held because of the coming up of a rain and wind storm.

Sunday night, July 6, the sermon was preached by the Rev. J. B. Little of the First Baptist church. This evening the Rev. B. H. Fleming of the Methodist Episcopal church will preach and B. B. Billhorn will sing. Next Sunday the Rev. William Grotefeld of St. Paul's Evangelical church will preach. On Aug. 3 the sermon will be by the Rev. J. Alfred Nansen of the First Evangelical church, and on the evening of Aug. 10 by the Rev. T. J. Owens of the First Congregational church. It is planned to use lantern slide pictures and missionary travelogues in subsequent meetings.

The Carmelite communities throughout the United States will celebrate today the feast of the scapular. The services in Chicago will be conducted in St. Cyril's church, Sixty-fourth street and Dante avenue. Services have been conducted the last week every day and evening. The closing service will be held today at 3 o'clock. There will be a special musical program, procession, and papal blessing. The fathers in charge will be the Rev. A. M. Reilly, O. C. C., pastor; the Reverend Fathers Walters, McDonald, Werner, Doswald, and the Rev. Father Claude, O. S. B., of Atchison, Kas. Father Reilly contributes the following description of the orders: "Both the orders of Carmelites and the brown scapular hold distinctive positions of antiquity and honor in the Catholic church. The Society of the Brown Scapular, which has always been under the management of the Carmelite fathers, has been in existence for many centuries, and contains upon its roll of membership nearly every Catholic of title and distinction in every nation. Clergy and lay persons, men and women, belong to this organization. In fact, every practical Catholic in the world is a member of this great society. The Carmelite fathers is the oldest order in the history of the Catholic church. The records link the present day Carmelites with their brethren who lived on Mount Carmel from the days of their founder, the prophet Elias."

The McCabe Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, Fifty-fourth street and Blackstone avenue, Dr. George MacAdam, pastor, believes its record in the war is unique in losing nine men out of sixty-four who enlisted. Dr. J. C. Baker, the pastor, is completing twelve years of service.

The International Sunday School association has announced its purpose to coöperate with other agencies in supporting a man in Mexico, who will give all his time to Sunday school, young people's and temperance work.

The interchurch world movement will hold a conference at Lake Geneva, Wis., beginning next Friday. Dr. Charles H. Pratt of the Presbyterian church of the United States, associate secretary of the interchurch world movement at New York, will be in charge. Dr. J. Campbell White, head of the life service department on the interchurch world movement, will be one of the speakers. The Chicago Church federation will be represented by the Rev. Perry J. Rice.

One of the recent events in the interchurch world movement was the meeting in Columbus, O., of a conference of Negroes, representing nine denominations and a communicant membership of 5,000,000. The conference indorsed the movement and made plans for full coöperation.

Negro speakers, discussing the interchurch program, declared it offers a greater hope for their own people than anything that has yet come to their attention. They believed, they said, it would strengthen their churches, give them a new grip on the moral leadership of the race, build up their schools, colleges, and universities, and eliminate racial antagonisms in their labors with white Christians.

A findings committee was appointed, consisting of six bishops, five general officers, representatives from colleges and universities, clergymen, laymen, and Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. workers.

The conference included delegates from the various boards of the following churches: African Methodist Episcopal, Zion, Baptist Colored Methodist Episcopal, Disciples, Congregational, Protestant Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal, and Presbyterian.

Tricolette Dress Week
AT STEVENS'

This is the culmination of a carefully planned event, revealing an exploitation of one of the most extensive and most beautiful arrays of New Tricolette Dresses to be found anywhere at this time.

This opportunity will enable every woman and miss who enjoys the consciousness of being "in vogue" to achieve this desire at an expenditure even less than her most cherished ideas of moderation dictate.

the most adaptable, elegant and serviceable of summer and early fall offerings—is now scarce, and has already advanced in price since our early order was placed (in anticipation of the demands of particular women). Yet we are presenting these Dresses at prices so reasonable that every one of these women and young women may gratify her desire to possess a stylish Dress of TRICOLETTE.

The individuality of the designs is charming—and so differentiated as to accentuate in versatile ways the richness of texture, the simple elegance of cut and adornment. The color theme reveals a shade to suit every personal preference, with such becoming tints as Alsace Blue, Flesh, Taupe, Bark, as well as substantial Navy, Brown, Black and White.

A glimpse at the six latest TRICOLETTE models illustrated indicates that a visit to the store at this time will prove a delightful revelation.

Excellent Models at $39.50, $45.00, $55.00 and Upwards to $85.00

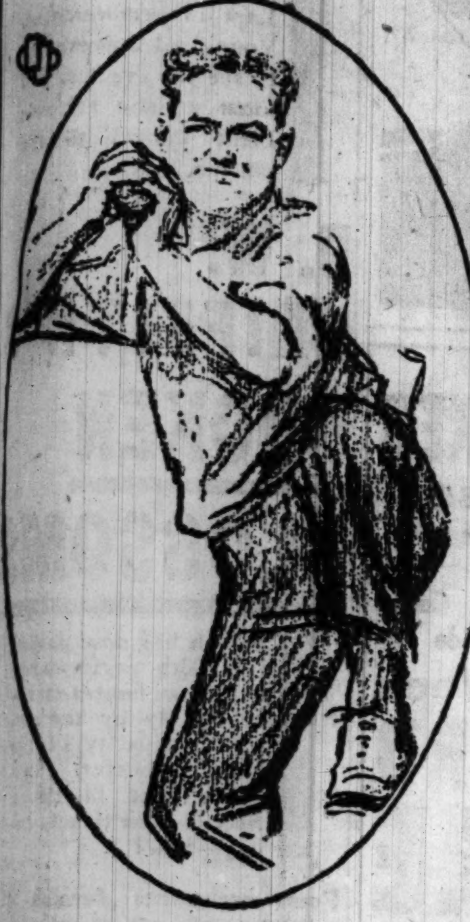
AMONG US MORTALS

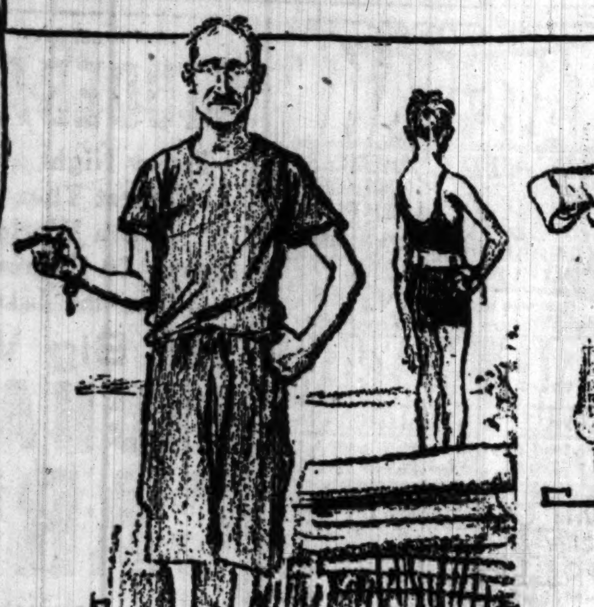
THE OUTING OF THE OFFICE FORCE

BY W. E. HILL

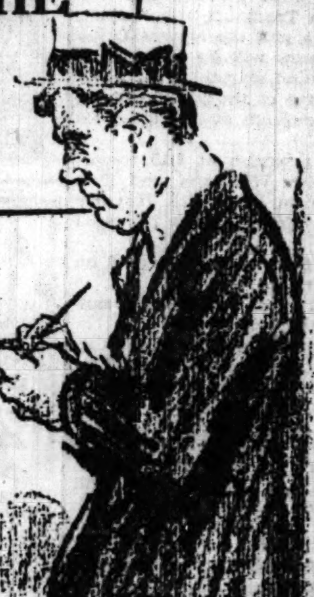
Copyright 1919, New York Tribune Inc.



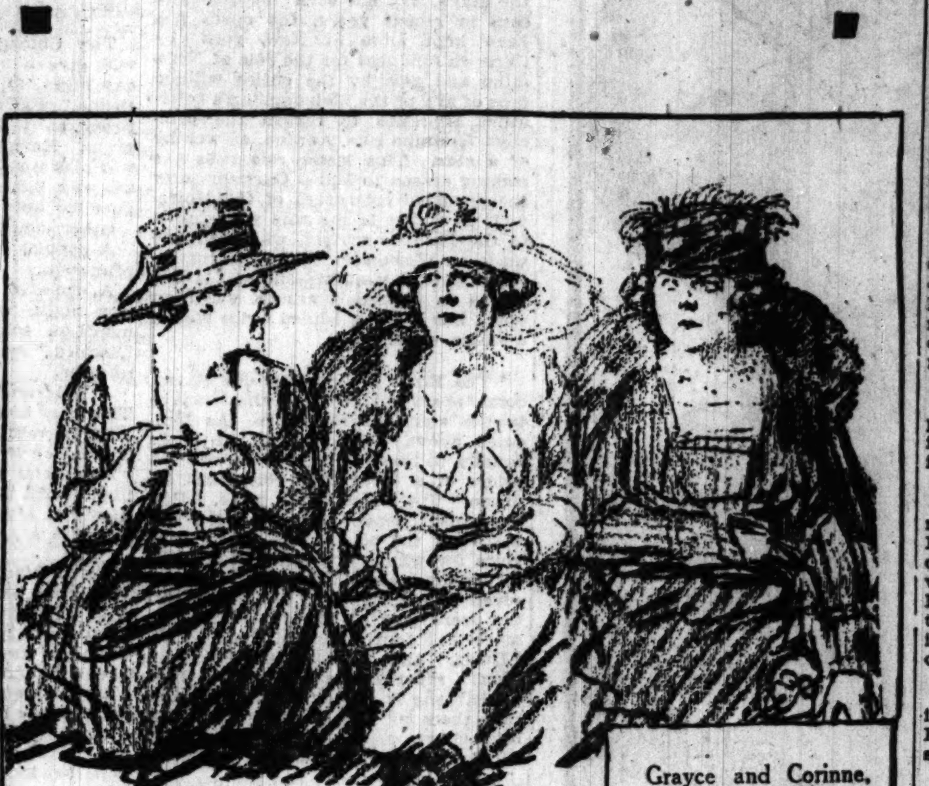
Mr. Miggs, the cashier, who volunteers to pitch in, has all the mannerisms, if not quite the skill, of all the big leaguers.



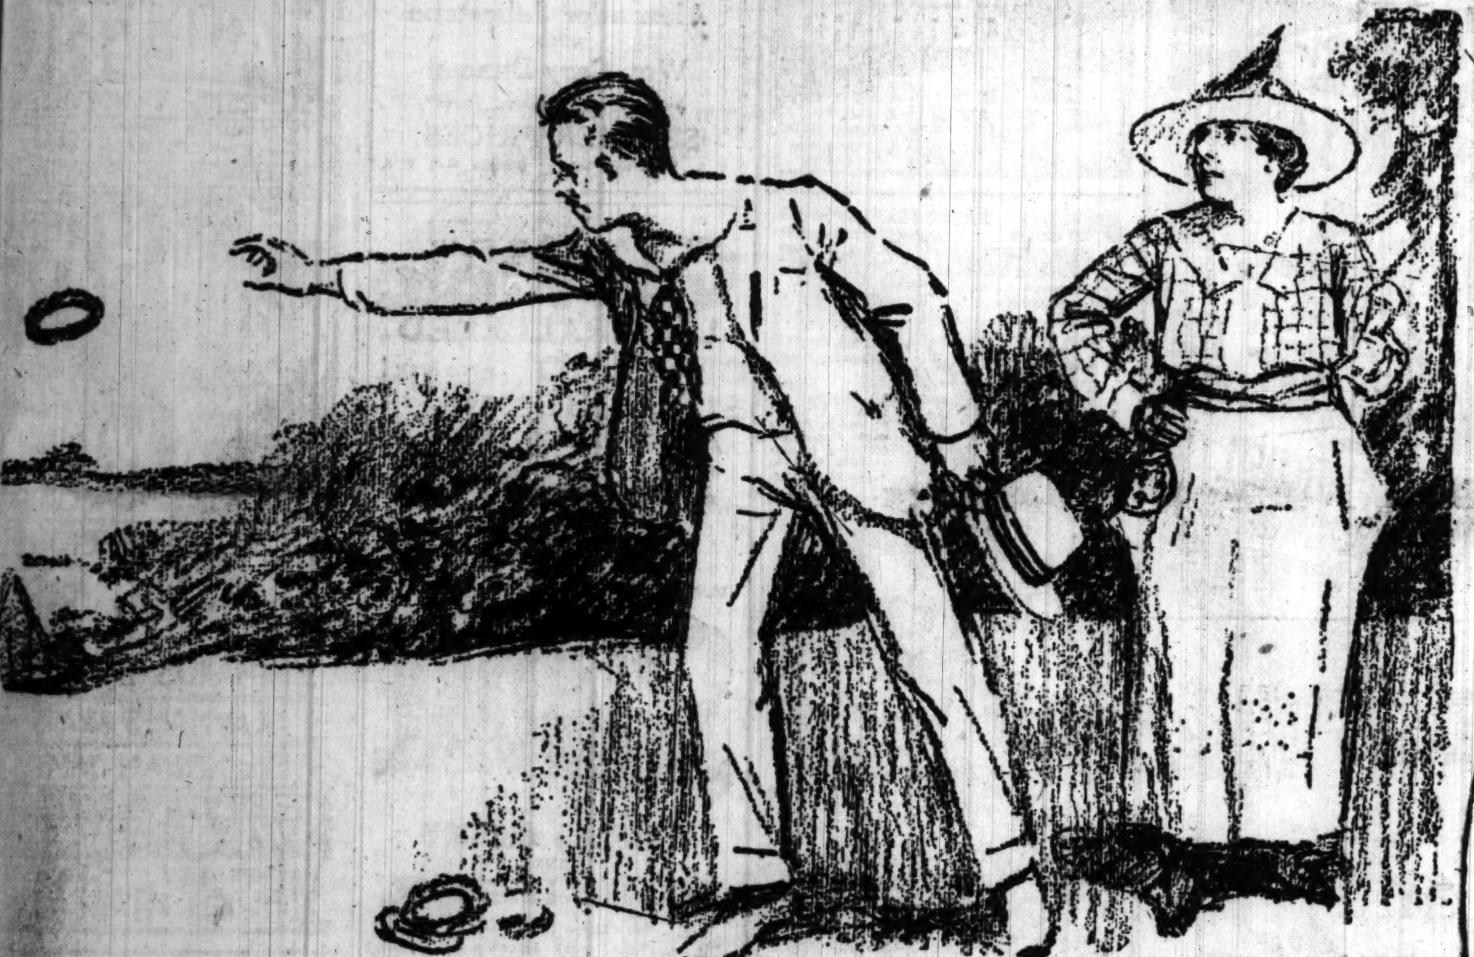
The rented bathing suit, which started out in life as dark blue and is now a pale gray with splotches of lavender. In the background stands Archie, the office boy. You can bet he didn't forget his suit.



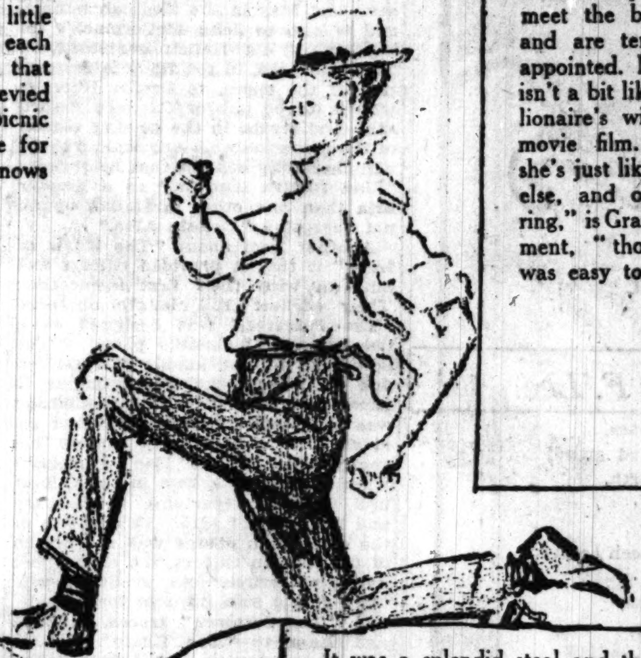
And at the end of the otherwise perfect day we see the treasurer, still with the little red notebook, figuring just how much each person shall be taxed extra, seeing that there is an unexpected addition of $4 levied by the park authorities for nicking a picnic table and an unidentified $3.32 charge for sundaes, which, of course, nobody knows anything about.



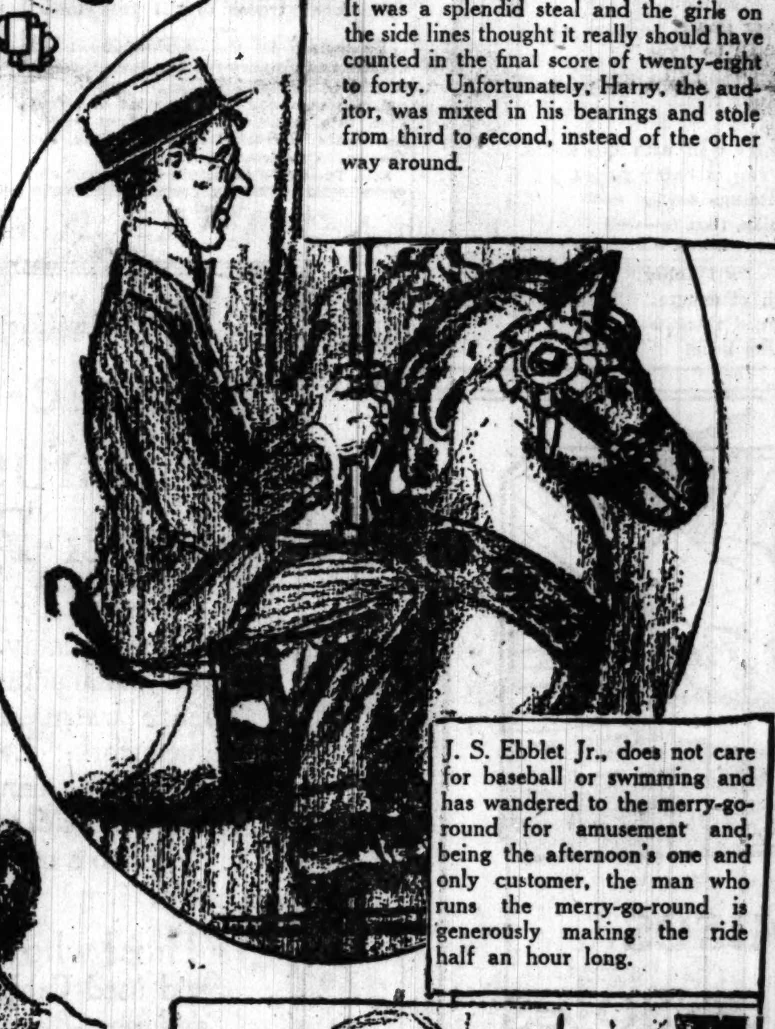
Grayce and Corinne, who do "stenoging" for the Vulcan Underwear Company, Ltd., meet the boss's wife and are terribly disappointed. Mrs. Wiley isn't a bit like the millionaire's wife in the movie film. "Why, she's just like anybody else, and only one ring," is Grayce's comment, "though she was easy to talk to."



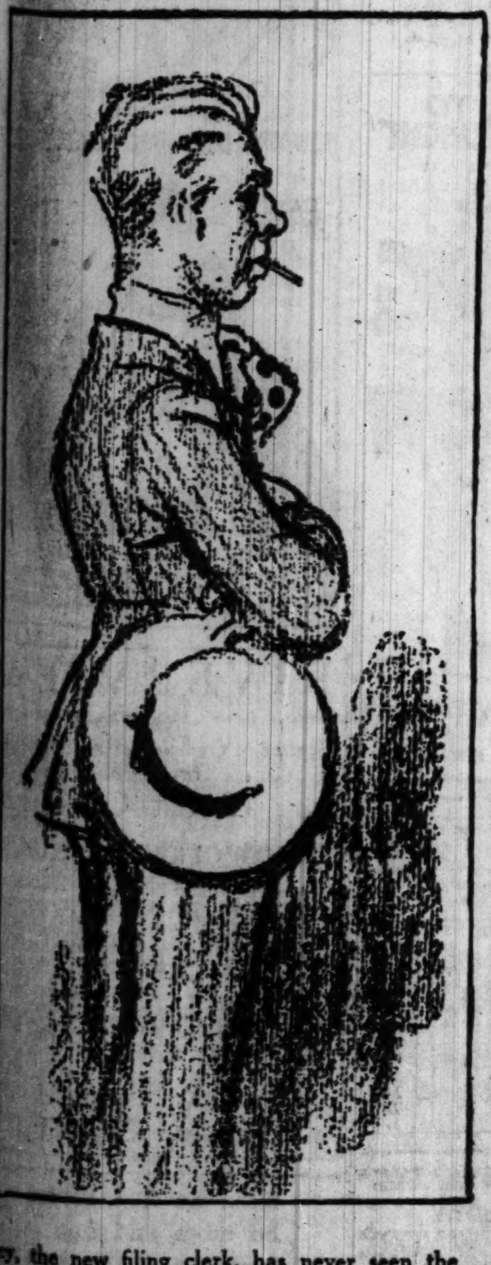
"Fred, why don't you go over and mix with the others—make friends with them?" Everybody had been urged to bring wives and husbands and Mrs. Rose Harp, of the mail order department, did accordingly. Fred, who was the only lesser half to show up and feels awfully out of things, is playing quoits with himself in a corner of the Lily Grove Lake amusement ground.



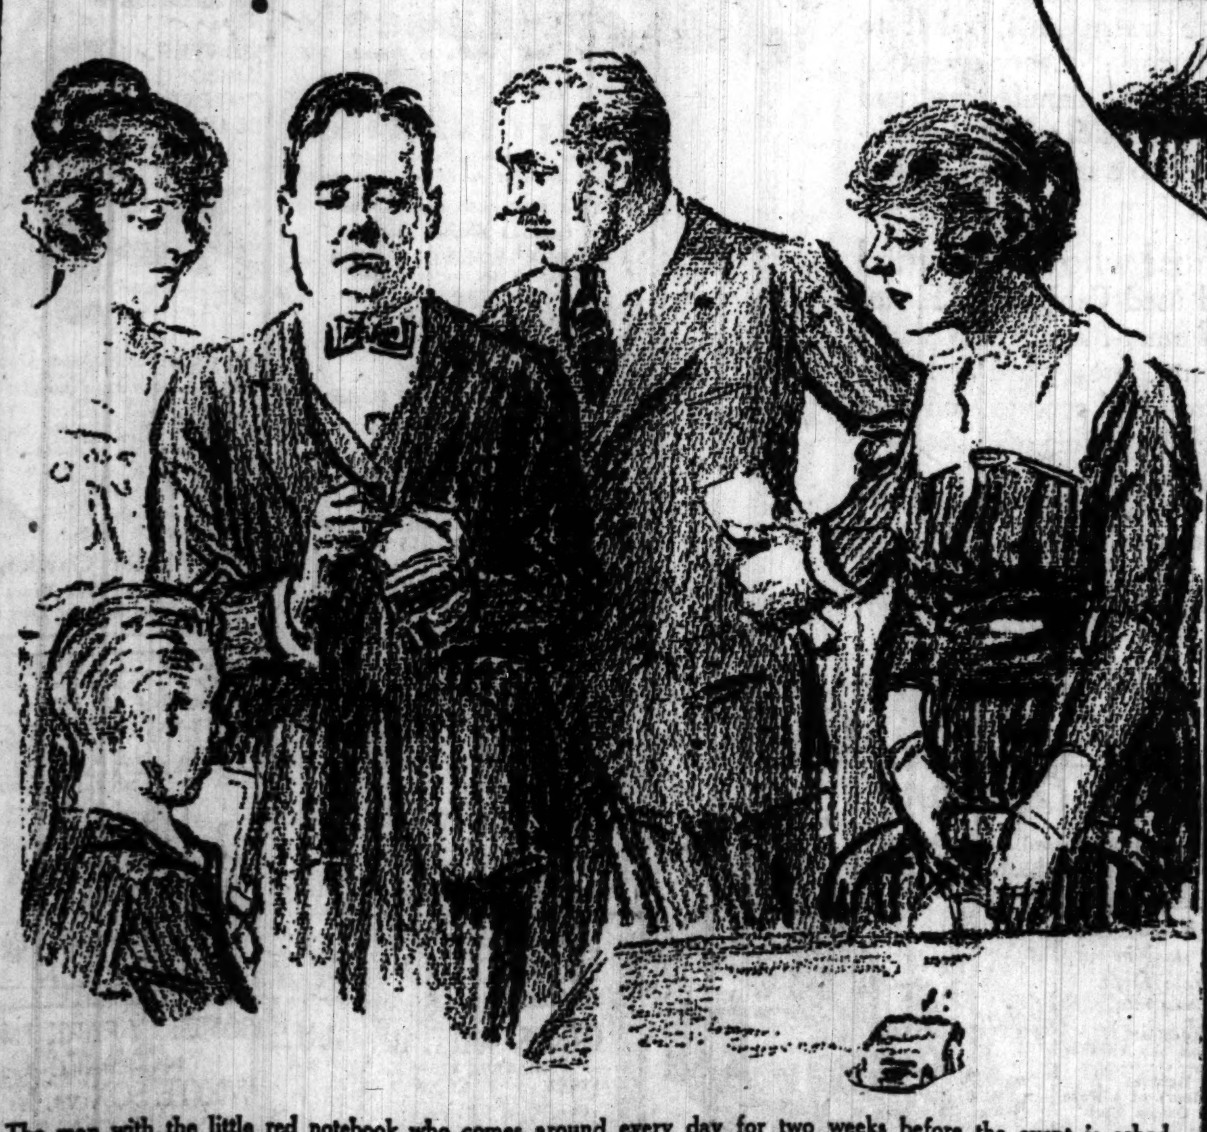
It was a splendid steal and the girls on the side lines thought it really should have counted in the final score of twenty-eight to forty. Unfortunately, Harry, the auditor, was mixed in his bearings and stole from third to second, instead of the other way around.



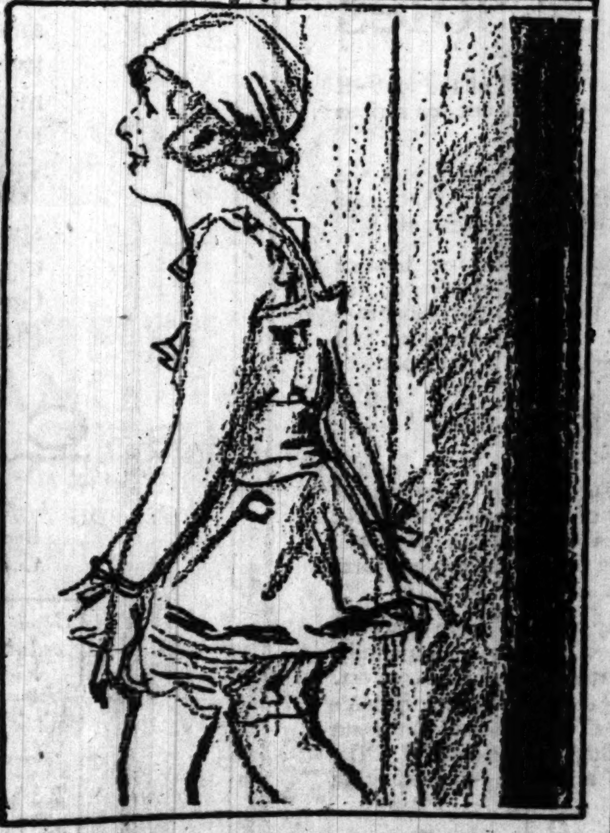
J. S. Ebblet Jr., does not care for baseball or swimming and has wandered to the merry-go-round for amusement and, being the afternoon's one and only customer, the man who runs the merry-go-round is generously making the ride half an hour long.



Joey, the new filing clerk, has never seen the boss so approachable and wonders if "now, wouldn't it be a swell time to ask for a raise?"



The man with the little red notebook who comes around every day for two weeks before the event is scheduled and jots down just who is going and who isn't and figures out whether or not it will be necessary to levy an extra charge of thirty-four cents for each person. The day before the extra charge is raised to forty-one cents and is collected with difficulty.



The girl who spent such a long time getting ready in the bathhouse that it was nearly dark when she finally came on the scene.

The Theaters

CLYDE FITCH'S old farce, "The Blue Mouse," in which Miss Mabel Barrison once appeared, has bene turned into a musical comedy and renamed "The Little Blue Devil" by Harold Attridge and Harry Carroll. Joe Weber will produce it, with Bernard Granville in one of the leading roles.

When the new edition of "Chu Chin Chow" is presented in New York Aug. 4 Miss Marjorie Wood will have the leading woman's part. She played the rôle of the Desert Woman in the Auditorium production last season. Lionel Braham will play the title rôle.

Miss Marguerite Sylva, once a Campanini prima donna, will sing again in vaudeville next season, beginning in San Francisco in August.

Ian Hay's "Tilly of Piccadilly," made from his book, "Happy Go Lucky," is a pronounced success, according to cablegrams from London, where it was produced last week. A. H. Woods owns the American rights to the play and he will soon produce it with an eminent film-lady as its chief character.

Alf Hayman is in London undertaking a search for plays for the Charles Frohman institution, which has been somewhat moribund of late years.

Chastity, says Ed Wynn, is one of the essential qualities of success in the theater these days. Interviewed about his own popularity in "The Gaieties of 1919," Mr. Wynn observed: "To be successful on the stage today an actor must live a clean, moral life; otherwise his personality will reflect his evil life and repel people instead of attracting them. I do not know why this is true, but I know it is true, even of comedians. I can mention the names of comedians who have suddenly fallen into public disfavor and have been compelled to retire from the stage because of the immorality of their private lives. The public today instinctively seems to know whether a man is good or bad, right or wrong in his life. People seem to have developed a kind of uncanny sixth sense about these things. The man who leads an evil life and who has an evil mind cannot make people laugh any more."

Miss Louise Mink, who has been a popular singer in many musical comedies in this section, will become a member of the "Honeymoon Town" cast at the La Salle this week. She succeeds Miss Helen Bolton, who plans to appear next season in Walter Hast's production of "An Exchange of Wives," by Cosmo Hamilton, author of "Scandal."

Mr. Hast's enterprises next season will include, besides five companies playing "Scandal," Mr. Hamilton's "An Exchange of Wives" and "Who Cares"; a new comedy by Frederick Bruegger called "Eve and the Man"; Walker Whiteside in "The Master of Ballantrae," by Robert Louis Stevenson, and a new Chinese play by an American author, George Carpenter, entitled "My Thousand of Gold." For the important rôles in these productions Mr. Hast has engaged Marion Coakley, Lee Baker, Forrest Winant, Conway Tearle, Emma Bunting, Charlotte Monterey, Herbert Druce, Herbert Rowland, Audrey Baird, Susan Given, Stanley Harrison, and Betty Murray.

Members of the Smith clan who attend "Angel Face" this week will be asked to register their names as they enter the Colonial. The result will be bound in costly leather and presented to the Smith brothers, authors of the libretto.

Lennox Robinson's "The Lost Leader," which William Harris Jr. will import, is said to be the best, if not the most popular play, in London at present. "The lost leader" of the title is Charles Stewart Parnell, and the play deals with his coming back to life—is it he or is it not?—and with his reactions to the new Ireland. A London critic writes:

"Representatives of the various parties parade before him"—this the main content of the play—"and there is a good deal of fun about them. The only man in the place who knew the old Parnell is blind—symbolism, perhaps, also convenient and effective—but he mystically recognizes the power of the chief. They all go up to a hilltop and Parnell renascent harangues them, Sinn Feiner, Nationalist, and Unionist. He will join none of their parties; he has his faults to blame in them all. His message to each and every one is that they must find their souls and so find a soul for Ireland. Almost in the gospel language he talks of breaking them, as he was broken, to rebuild them as he has been made anew. Well, the alien is bound to profess that he found the eloquence rather nebulous, but it had fervor. Everybody is much impressed except the local gombeen man. There is a quarrel, and in trying to knock him down the blind disciple kills Parnell—if Parnell it was. No need to emphasize the symbolism. But somehow, the critic must needs confess, his emotion was not profound. The message and the whole scene had in them too little of the life of men and women. Yet the scene had beauty and charm."

Somerset Maugham's comedy, "Cæsar's Wife," in which Miss Billie Burke is to appear, has been played 125 times at the Royalty theater in London. Miss Fay Compton is the star of the London production.

From Mr. Kaufmann's column in the New York Times this morning:

"When publication of Alice Duer Miller's story, "The Charm School," was begun in the Saturday Evening Post recently there was a general scurry on the part of producers for the dramatic rights, inasmuch as the central idea of the tale was obviously a promising one for the stage. Now comes the news that the story has already been dramatized, the trick having been turned by Mrs. Miller in collaboration with Robert Milton, the stage director. The resulting piece, according to reports, is a straight comedy, but it is only a question of time before the idea reaches the musical stage.

Somewhere in nearly every musical comedy, if the search be prosecuted with sufficient vigor, can be found one of the farces of yesteryear. The musical comedy called "Fifty-Fifty," which has been announced for production here during the coming season, turns out to be William Gillette's well known opus, "All the Comforts of Home." "Kitty Mackaye," produced here some half a dozen years ago, is another play which is about to be musicalized, and in due time, when the supply of farces and comedies has been exhausted, the librettists will probably get around to "Justice," "The Jest," et al.

H. H. Frazee, whose theatrical plans and announcements have been many in recent months, but whose actual performances seem to have been confined mainly to his baseball interests, now promises a musical farce entitled "My Lady Friends," to be produced out of town on Labor day, and in New York in October. The star will be Clifton Crawford, a circumstance which leads to the conjecture that the piece may or may not be Mr. Crawford's own work, "I Love a Lassie," recently tried out.

De Wolf Hopper, whose Old Bill in "The Better 'Ole" has been on exhibition in various parts of the country for some months, will give New York its first glimpse of his idea of the character tomorrow night at the Booth theater. Mr. Coburn, who has been playing the part since last October, will take a vacation, as is the wont of stars in July, and the Hopperian bill will be on view for two weeks.

"Friendly Enemies" wound up its triumphant career in New York last night—it opened at the Hudson theater on July 22 of last year—and Louis Mann, whose rôle in the play has been an arduous one, will be granted a rest until the resumption of activities at the Manhattan Opera house in August or September. The management insists that the average weekly receipts were in the neighborhood of $13,000, which, covering a period of fifty weeks, is a remarkable showing, and one which has rarely if ever been equaled.

James T. Powers, after a season or two as a Liberty loan campaigner, will return to the musical comedy stage in "Hello, Hopper," now in course of preparation. "Hello, Hopper," was once "Somebody's Luggage," and as such was acted by Mr. Powers some three seasons ago.

Burns Mantle's Letter

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — [Special Correspondence.]—It would be as much as your visit is worth to try to convince an Angeleno [which is slang for native son in the Southern California capital] that sooner or later his beloved city is going to lose the moving picture industry which has done so much to build it up. But that is the truth.

Assuming that 80 per cent of the pictures that now amuse the world are made in Hollywood, I am willing to wager a box of golf balls against a second hand mashie and throw in a reputation as a good guesser, that within two years the proportion will drop to 50, within five years to 20, and in seven years to a percentage that will be negligible.

In practically every studio I have visited from one to four companies were working on dark stages, deliberately and with some difficulty shutting out the glorious sunlight they had come 3,000 miles to secure. And in each of them there were directors who agreed that better pictures were being made today with artificial light than ever had been made with natural light.

This fact alone would not take the film folks east. They still use the sunlight for their exteriors and revel not alone in its day by day steadiness and the soft clearness of the atmosphere through which it shines, but in the fact that it can be depended upon practically from year's end to year's end. Also in Hollywood they are within motoring distance of a great variety of locations, seascapes and landscapes, Oriental, Asiatic, European and Slavic. Also they represent investments in Los Angeles and vicinity to the extent of a million and a half or two million dollars.

But none of these advantages outweighs the fact that they are 3,000 miles away from their principal source of supply and their natural market. Each of them is therefore obliged to maintain two sets of offices. Their manuscripts are bought, their actors are hired, their product is sold in New York. If they want to do anything in Hollywood they have to consult the New York office. This usually takes two days by wire and two weeks by letter. If they wire for a manuscript—or an actor—it takes a week to get either. If they buy a scenario and the executive head of the concern is east, it frequently takes two weeks to have the purchase confirmed. If he is west, and the New York office is bidding for the rights to a play, the same loss of time, energy, and telegraph tolls results. The Famous Players-Lasky company probably averages $3,000 a month wire tolls. Universal, I know, spent $2,500 for the same service last month. And Goldwyn and Metro nearly as much more.

For example, the "U" company had to have an aviation story for Harold Locklear, the daredevil with wings, who is to make a series of pictures for them—and they had to have it in a hurry. Harold was on his way; he had but three weeks to stay under his contract and it was important the most should be made of his time.

In this instance Jack Lait of THE TRIBUNE was commissioned to write the hurry-up romance. He finished it about the time Locklear left the east with his pilots and his trick planes. Lait was ordered to put the whole scenario on the wire, which he did. And that helped make up the $2,500.

But—and this was the surprise factor to me—the principal contributing cause to the unrest of the movie colony in Hollywood I found to be psychological rather than financial. They are just naturally homesick all the time—all those who have moved west from the east—and whether they are great magnates or little two-bit character fillers-in, they are looking for an excuse—for any old kind of an excuse—to get back home. With the discovery that California sunlight is no longer necessary either to their happiness or their business they are more homesick than ever.

Of course, there are exceptions. Some of the directing heads of the industry, having discovered Southern California through the movies, will always maintain a winter home there. The same is true of many of the suddenly enriched actors.

I was talking with Douglas Fairbanks, for instance, the day his brother, Robert, brought him the news that the engineers had just confirmed the discovery of an ample flow of water on his Beverly Hills place—enough to fill his swimming pool daily and a lot to spare.

Doug was getting ready to shin up a water pipe through clouds of thick yellow smoke, preparatory to rescuing a tenement family treatened with incineration. The news of the water discovery drew a shout of triumph from him, and he went up that pipe faster than the monkey he resembled would have done it. Coming down again he was still excited. That news, said he, was worth $50,000 to him, and there was such pride in his description of his home that he probably never will be willing to give it up entirely. I doubt if he would make an even trade today with the owner of a Newport villa. In Beverly, which is between Hollywood and Santa Monica, he has acreage enough to have all his horses and dogs, Jap servants and white friends, around him, and still being a boy in his teens in spirit, he loves it. Incidentally his well diggers went down 190 feet before they struck the water flow.

There is another angle to the future manufacture of the movies that is interesting. D. W. Griffith suggested it the day I watched him rehearse a scene for the last of his First National pictures, before he joins the "Big Four" combination—an interesting scene in which that engaging young leading man, Richard Barthelmess, is featured.

If, ventured Griffith, the movies do desert Los Angeles—and he was not as sure that they would as most of the others—if they did he believed instead of settling in any one place they would move about, as their requirements demanded.

There would, of course, be a home studio and executive offices, probably in or near New York, but the field studios would be both numerous and complete. If, for instance, Chicago was the locale of a picture, three-fourths of which was to be made by artificial light, why would it not be feasible to ship a black circus tent to Chicago and establish therein a complete studio, with practically all the paraphernalia necessary to the completion of that picture, instead of sending half a company and half a technical force to take a series of exteriors in Chicago and "fake" the rest in the home studio?

With the traveling studios perfected it seems reasonable that the expense of shooting the distant location would be reduced to the minimum, the chances of perfect results correspondingly increased, and the whole wide world thrown open to the travelers.

Fairbanks was making his fire fighting picture at the Brunton studios. Next door to him on the same lot—we all say "lot" out here—Bessie Barriscale was graciously permitting her husband, Howard Hickman, to direct her in a romance of the Orient, the street setting for which took up the better part of a block.

We went from there to the Cafeteria at the entrance to the grounds, but we did not get in. The line of prospective lunchers extended all the way around the room and out the door, and they wore every conceivable character of costume.

"We might as well wait," reported Henry Kolker, ex-actor and now a director, he having gone ahead to investigate; "they're feeding the whole of ravished Armenia in there now, and there isn't room for even a would-be Christian."

THE BLIGHT—By Guy F. Lee

The sunshine is dazzling, the lake is like glass,
The days are perfumed with the flowers and grass;
It's the marvelous time of the wonderful earth,
But in it I find neither pleasure nor mirth.

I'm making more jack than I thought had been coined,
The hope of a bonus to certainty's joined,
The boss even hints that a raise'll come soon,
But I see in none of this profit or boon.

Elizabeth's kinder than you'd ever guess,
In short, she's decided that it shall be "yes";
The wedding is set for the autumn, but still
I get from this fact not an amorous thrill.

The peace treaty's signed and all's well with the world,
The flag of love waves and the flag of hate's furled,
In chorus the nations the glad tidings swell,
But war's not the only thing, folks, that is—well

Don't think I'm a bolshevist; freaks I abhor;
I'm far from a pessimist, grouch, or a bore;
No misogynist I; the reverse, quite, instead—
I'm just entertaining a cold in the head!

Callouses and tender soles

If you suffer from callouses on the ball of the foot—if your soles are painfully tender—watch out for serious foot trouble.

This condition, in almost every case, indicates the beginning of "weak foot"—which means that your arches are weakening and beginning to flatten out.

If allowed to continue, this condition will become extremely painful—it may even incapacitate you for walking. But by giving the foot the right support—designed according to correct scientific principles, and expertly fitted to your foot—you will secure positive relief.

How to make sure of the correct support

Dr. Wm. M. Scholl, the orthopedic specialist of Chicago, has made the study of the foot his life work. After years of study he has developed a practical, common-sense measure for the correction of every form of foot trouble—each a proved success.

Go to see your dealer today—in his store you will find a graduate Practipedist—a foot expert, especially trained in Dr. Scholl's method of foot comfort. Have him fit you with whichever one of Dr. Scholl's appliances you need. You will walk out of the store with a new and wonderful feeling of foot comfort. The only cost is the price of the appliance—depending on the type you need.

Ravinia's Fourth Week

DONILETTI'S "The Elixir of Love," which has not been sung in Chicago in so long a time that its revival will be like giving a new opera to the majority, is to be put back into hearing this week at Ravinia park, where the fourth week of opera and concerts starts tonight with the only repetition of "Lakmé."

Although "The Elixir," as it is famliarly called in the intimacies of the stage, has not been in Chicago's ears in recent years, the opera has been kept alive in New York by Caruso's fondness for the rôle of Neromino and also by the entire willingness of any of the Metropolitan's coloratura sopranos to regard the principal feminine rôle, Annina, as worthy of a star. This latter rôle goes the coming season to Mabel Garrison, now the principal coloratura of the Metropolitan; and it is she who will sing it in the Ravinia revival, which will be made on Wednesday night and repeated on Saturday night—one of the few weeks in Ravinia's annals when an opera has been scheduled twice within a single week.

"The Elixir of Love" is one of two comic operas by Donizetti that survive in the standard répertoire. As indicated above, this one may be made equally to serve the purposes and the prides of a tenor or a coloratura soprano. The other comic piece, "Don Pasquale," depends wholly upon the wishes of the coloratura—the type of voice for which Donizetti did most of his writing. He composed, in all, sixty-seven operas, "grand" and comic; and the opera goer of this day knows not more than four or five of them. Two, "Lucia" and "Linda" are in Galli-Curci's répertoire; a third, "Don Pasquale," she is adding to her list; and then there is "The Elixir," with which Miss Garrison, herself a distinguished Lucia, is to be teamed with Caruso.

The lure for the tenors in "The Elixir" is, of course, the familiar aria of "Una furtiva lagrima," which was the big item in Caruso's list when he sang last May in the Medinah temple, and is also in John McCormack's inventory of old Italian compositions. This aria goes, in the Ravinia restoration of the opera, to Orville Harrold, who is to be one of Caruso's associates (and rivals) in the coming season of the Metropolitan. Any Italian tenor will cheerfully confess that he regards "Una furtiva lagrima" as a greater aria than any other in Italian opera, not excepting "Celeste Aida."

Another item about "The Elixir of Love" is that it provided Gilbert and Sullivan with their first inspiration. Their earliest full length operetta, "The Sorceres," was designed as a travesty on Donizetti's piece. "The Sorcerer" is not among the Gilbert and Sullivan works most familiar to American audiences, although Chicago was the scene of its most recent revival. De Wolf Hopper opened his engagement with "The Sorcerer" when he last sang here in the Gilbert and Sullivan répertoire, in January and February of 1915. Making fun of the old Italian operas was the breath of life to both Gilbert, the comic poet and plot writer, and Sullivan, who knew music as a medium for comedy, and "The Sorcerer" traces, in book and score, to "The Elixir" just as "Pinafore" traces to "Il Trovatore."

Following is the arrangement of operas and singers for the fourth week of Ravinia's season:

8:15 tonight—"Lakmé," second and final time, with the Misses Garrison and Gentle, the Messrs. Harrold, Rothier, D'Angelo, and Derman. Conductor, Mr. Hageman.

8:15 Tuesday—"Cavalleria Rusticana," second time, with the Misses Gentle, Ingram, Falco, the Messrs. Mortin (first time) and Chalmers. Conductor, Mr. Papi.

8:15 Wednesday—"The Elixir of Love," first time, with the Misses Garrison and Falco, the Messrs. Harrold, Daddi, and Picco. Conductor, Mr. Papi.

8:15 Thursday—"Tosca," second time, with the Misses Easton and Falco, the Messrs. Rothier, Kingston, Daddi, Derman, and Toft. Conductor, Mr. Papi.

8:15 Saturday—"The Elixir of Love," second time, with the cast as of Wednesday night.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra will give a special concert on Tuesday night, following "Cavalleria Rusticana," which will be sung in its entirety as the first half of the program. Enrico Tramonti, the harpist, will play a solo, and the Messrs. Quesnel and Schreurs will be heard in a duet for flute and clarinet.

Other concerts of the week will be:

A popular program at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

A classical program at 8:15 tomorrow night, with Weisbach and Tramonti as soloists, and with Haydn's "Oxford" symphony as the principal number.

A program for the children at 3 on Thursday afternoon.

A program for the soldiers and sailors at 3 on Friday afternoon.

A special program at 8:15 Friday night, with Riccardo Martin and Tramonti as soloists. Mr. Martin will be heard in a group of songs.

Edith Mason's engagement at Ravinia park begins a week from tonight with a revival of "Faust." She will have with her the Messrs. Harrold, Chanlers, and Rothier and the Misses Sharlow and Falco. Mr. Chanlers' Valentine and Miss Sharlow's Siebel will be new here.

Antonio Scotti's return to Ravinia will be made in mid-August, with "L'Oracolo" as the sole item of his répertoire so far decided upon. The attendance for the second performance of this novelty, on July 11, was just as big as when "L'Oracolo" was sung for the opening of the season, on June 28. Scotti's own idea is to make each of his appearances in the return engagement "Scotti nights," with him in both parts of the bill. As he is the master of more than a hundred rôles, the arrangement is not one fraught with difficulty for the management.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1918

By Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick B. Maurice

INSTALLMENT V.

LUDENDORFF'S plan for the Friedensturm, the battle which should win a German peace, took the form of a great drive directed against Paris. This drive was to be begun from the salient with its head at Chateau Thierry on the Marne, which the German crown prince had made in his May attack. The Germans had spent the time since that attack was stopped in training their men for just such another assault.

Ludendorff proposed again to pour in a mass of troops wherever he could make a hole in the allied defenses, but railways are necessary to keep a mass of troops supplied with their needs in battle, and it happened that the only railways which could be used to supply the German troops in the Chateau Thierry salient passed through the town of Soissons, which lay in the northwest corner of the salient not far from the German front line.

For his advance upon Paris Ludendorff wanted railways on the eastern side of the salient as well. Therefore, the first part of his plan involved the capture of Reims so that he might repair and use the railways running through that city. He intended to capture Reims by a great attack delivered on the Champagne front to the east of the town, combined with another attack to the southwest of Reims. These attacks were designed to unite on the river Marne near Epernay and thus cut off Reims and all the troops defending it. Simultaneously a third attack was to be made southwards across the Marne between Chateau Thierry and Dormans.

When these attacks had all developed satisfactorily the German troops on the western face of the salient between Soissons and Chateau Thierry were to come in and coöperate in the advance upon Paris, and for this purpose their troops were at the beginning of July being reorganized under a general and staff recently brought across from the Russian front.

This was a big scheme, but there is evidence that it was intended to be still bigger and that Ludendorff proposed when his movement against Paris from the Marne was in full swing to develop yet another attack upon Paris from the north by issuing from the Amiens salient which he had created in March, and that further north still Rupprecht was preparing for an advance in Flanders.

German Plans Known to Foch.

PROBABLY owing to the carelessness engendered by overconfidence, the Germans were much less careful to conceal their intentions before this battle than they had been earlier in the year, and Foch was ready for Ludendorff's first moves which opened on July 15. The great attack to the east of Reims fell upon the army of Gen. Gouraud, who adapted and improved up the defensive tactics which the Germans had employed successfully in the battle of Paaschendaele.

We had intended to use the same system of elastic defense against the Germans in the March battles, but fog prevented us from applying them successfully. Gouraud, with better fortune and great skill, used that system to shatter the enemy's attack. He left in his front trenches only a few troops to watch for the German advance and withdrew his main line of resistance behind the area swept by the full storm of the hostile bombardment, while his own guns, which had been reinforced to meet the attack, poured a tornado of shell upon the German infantry as it moved forward, with the result that it was a disordered mass of field grays, which flung itself against the French battle positions, and except at two points on either flank of the attack these withstood the shock. The small breaches which the Germans succeeded in making were quickly closed and the attack ended for them in a disastrous defeat.

This brilliant defense by Gouraud, in the center of whose army stood part of the 42d American division, laid the foundation for our subsequent victories, and of itself was sufficient to cause the failure of Ludendorff's plan, for one arm of the pair of pincers with which he had intended to nip out Reims had failed to act.

Throughout the three and a half years of trench warfare on the western front no attack made on such a scale had met with so little success. It had come to be regarded as inevitable that the defender should lose ground, prisoners, and guns. Gouraud lost very little more ground than that which he had deliberately abandoned to the enemy, few prisoners, and no guns.

Lacked Men, but We Won.

WHILE these events were taking place to the east of Reims, the Germans in their remaining two attacks southwest of the city and across the Marne between Chateau Thierry and Dormans did make some progress, and before Foch struck back he wished to see that front steadied. It was steadied mainly by the firm courage of the American troops, who formed part of Gen. Desgoutte's army, and particularly of the 3d and 28th American divisions, which held the sector east of Chateau Thierry.

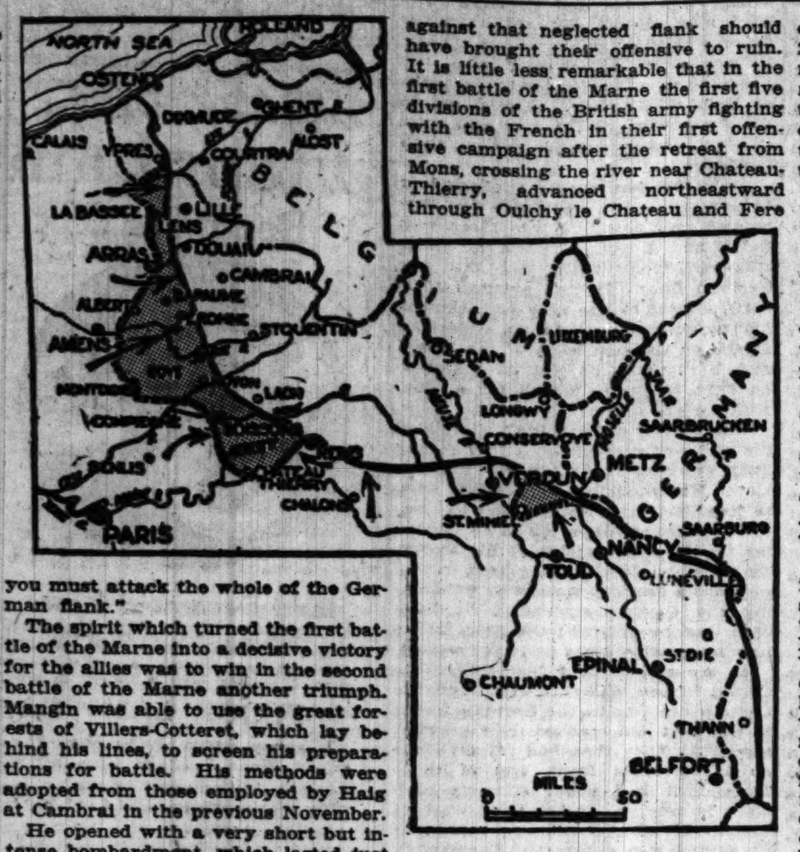
Then on the fourth day of the battle, July 18, Foch sprung the first surprise, for which he had been quickly preparing, upon the Germans. While the enemy were still trying to make progress from the southern and eastern faces of the Marne salient, Gen. Mangin attacked the western face between Soissons and Chateau Thierry. Nothing appears so easy in war as success after it has been won, but it required great courage and determination to make that attack, as it was made.

The Germans had still a superiority of nearly 100,000 rifles on the western front and Foch had to take risks. I have already described how he was supported in taking these risks by Mr. Lloyd George and Sir Douglas Haig, and how the British front was weakened, despite the fact that Rupprecht was watching it with strong forces in order that Foch might have the men for his counter stroke.

When the first plans for that counter stroke were made by the French generals on the spot they considered that the most which they could do was to attack on a front of some twelve miles. Foch came down and insisted on an attack upon the whole thirty mile front between Soissons and the Marne.

"We haven't the men," said the French generals.

"I know that," replied Foch; "still you must attack the whole of the German flank."



The spirit which turned the first battle of the Marne into a decisive victory for the allies was to win in the second battle of the Marne another triumph. Mangin was able to use the great forests of Villers-Cotteret, which lay behind his lines, to screen his preparations for battle. His methods were adopted from those employed by Haig at Cambrai in the previous November.

He opened with a very short but intense bombardment, which lasted just long enough to drive the Germans to their dugouts and to cut their telephone communication. Then a mass of tanks followed the barrage through the German defenses, to be followed in turn by a rush of French and American infantry, for the 1st and 2d American divisions had joined Mangin.

The Germans were taken completely by surprise. They had been thinking only of their advance to Paris and had neglected their trenches, with the result that there were none of the formidable rear lines of defense which they had been wont to throw up rapidly and skillfully with the aid of the forced labor of the French peasants and of prisoners of war. Mangin's chief object was to get to a position from which he could prevent the Germans from using the railways passing through Soissons and in this he was completely successful.

Ludendorff had failed to get Reims, and now had lost the use of the one artery of supply which enabled him to maintain the great mass of troops he had crowded into the Marne salient. His troops across the river struggling hard to maintain what they had won were at once in difficulties, and there was nothing left but to withdraw them.

That withdrawal was not easy, for a Franco-American counter-attack had given the allies possession of heights on the south bank of the river from which many of the bridges thrown by the Germans could be shelled, while the enemy's infantry was continually harassed by attacks from the air.

Why Foch was Successful.

NOW, as I have explained, the principle upon which Foch had determined to act was to deliver a series of punches each with a definite but limited object. His idea was to press the enemy so long as he gave way before the punch, but avoid a slow protracted fight with him when his resistance began to harden. So Mangin, having achieved his purpose of taking the railways through Soissons, stopped, rested and refitted his troops, and it fell to Desgouttes to attack next in a northeasterly direction from the Chateau Thierry front against the Germans yielding on the Marne.

The fresh vigor of the Americans' 28th, 3d, and 26th, with the 1st and 32d divisions in support, swept the enemy back from the Marne to the Ourcq, behind which river they attempted to stand between Oulchy le Chateau and Fere-en-Tardenois. Simultaneously two of the four British divisions sent down from the north by Haig, the 51st and 62d, reinforced the French and Italian forces on the eastern face of the salient, and there, too, but more slowly, the Germans were compelled to give ground.

Meantime, the two remaining British divisions, the 15th and 34th, joined Mangin, who, on July 23, was ready for another blow. This was delivered between the Ourcq and Soissons, and threatened the flank of the Germans opposed to Desgouttes on the Ourcq. Desgouettes' army had meanwhile been strengthened by the transfer to it from Gouraud of the 42d American division, which relieved the 26th, and by the appearance in the front line of the 32d division, which relieved the 3d. Under this combined pressure from the west, south and east the German defense broke down.

Ludendorff Hard Pushed.

LUDENDORFF now found that he was left no leisure to restore his lines of supply and that the salient was daily getting narrower and that congestion and confusion within it left him no alternative but to come out of it altogether. Accordingly he retreated behind the Vesle and the Aisne, pressed on all sides by the allied forces, which had been reinforced by the 77th American division. The Germans got across the rivers in the first days of August.

Paris was relieved of the menace which had hung over her for six weeks, and a second time the Marne had proved fatal to German hopes. It is one of the remarkable coincidences of the war that twice, confident of victory, the Germans should have crossed the Marne, neglecting to protect their right flank, and that twice a blow against that neglected flank should have brought their offensive to ruin. It is little less remarkable that in the first battle of the Marne the first five divisions of the British army fighting with the French in their first offensive campaign after the retreat from Mons, crossing the river near Chateau-Thierry, advanced northeastward through Oulchy le Chateau and Fere en Tardenois to the Vesle and the Aisne, and that the first American divisions to take part in an offensive battle should have traversed exactly the same ground.

The Germans behind the Vesle and the Aisne were posted in strong positions. By withdrawing from the salient they had extricated themselves from the difficulties in which Mangin's blow at Soissons had placed them, and were ready to put up a stout resistance. Foch thereupon tossed the ball to Sir Douglas Haig, who on Aug. 8 completely surprised the enemy on the Amiens front.

In the battle of Amiens the 109th British corps, with which was a regiment of the 33d American division, the Australian and Canadian corps, comprising the 4th British army under Sir Henry Rawlinson, attacked the western face of the great salient, which the Germans had driven into our front in March on a front of about eleven miles, while the 1st French army, commanded by Gen. Debeney, and placed by Foch under Haig's orders, prolonged the front of battle by about four miles to the south.

The attack was made on much the same principles as that of Mangin on July 18. The infantry assault was preceded by a short bombardment, and by the advance of a large number of tanks. In no battle of the war was the power of the tank better displayed. The tank of the summer of 1918 was in speed, ability to overcome obstacles and turn quickly in any direction, a vastly improved machine upon that of the Somme battle of 1916. About 200 of these were employed and they not only during the battle drove avenues for the advance of the infantry through the German defenses and overcome their nest of machine guns, but they enabled the preparation for battle to be made quickly and secretly.

Haig Gives Order.

HAIG'S first orders to Rawlinson went out on July 13, a little over three weeks before the attack, while the preliminaries for the great attacks, which in former years had begun with days of shelling, had taken months. The enemy's air scouts, who could not have failed to observe the laborious assembly of guns and material, this time saw nothing unusual. The men of the Canadian corps who were brought down from Arras at the last moment had no idea where they were going.

Their hospitals had been sent north into Flanders and the most circumstantial reports were in circulation that the Canadians were going to join Plummer for a great attack on the Ypres front. Even King Albert was deceived and inquired indignantly why he had not been told of this offensive which was about to take place on his right. So Von Marwitz, who commanded in the Amiens salient, was caught napping, the Australians and Canadians broke through his lines to a depth of twelve miles; twenty German divisions were defeated by thirteen British infantry divisions, three British cavalry divisions, and an American infantry regiment, and nearly 22,000 prisoners and 400 guns were captured.

The immediate effect of the advance of the Australians and Canadians south of the Somme was very similar to that of Mangin's blow at Soissons. The Germans were deprived of the use of the railways passing through Chaulnes, which had supplied their troops between the Somme and the Oise, and had to carry through another withdrawal. Debeney, who was not aided by tanks to the same extent as we were and had very difficult country to traverse, did not at first make as rapid progress as the Australians and Canadians, but as the difficulties of the Germans increased not only was he able to press forward towards Roye, but the army of Gen. Humbert on his right joined in and the enemy was everywhere pressed back to the lines which he had held in 1916.

The Amiens salient disappeared as had the Marne salient, and the main lines of railway through Amiens, which the enemy had dominated since the end of March and were the main channel of communication between the French and British armies, were cleared.

Ludendorff Knew He Was Beaten.

LUDENDORFF has stated that the battle of Amiens, following so close upon the victory of the Marne, made him realize that the war was lost for Germany. Even if he had not said so his actions showed that he was of that opinion. He had had to draw heavily upon Rupprecht's reserves to stop the hole caused by the collapse of Von Marwitz's army, and it had become imperative that he should economize troops somehow.

He, therefore, decided on a general shortening of his front. He began to draw out of the salient he had made in Flanders in April and attempted to follow this by a repetition of the maneuvers which had been so successful at the beginning of 1917. Then he had upset Gen. Nivelle's plan by a withdrawal into the Hindenburg line, and now he proposed to retire slowly over the same ground to the shelter of the same vast system of defenses.

At this time the Hindenburg line ran

A Greater Maxwell is Before You

It is greater in many ways than any of the 300,000 of this very same model.

You give it a second look from the curb, for it is refined.

You sense more power, less effort from the engine, for it is equipped with Hot Spot and Ram's-horn.

You feel a delightful comfort in the seat, for it has better springs and better upholstery.

You go less often to the battery service station, for the improved electrical unit saves battery wear.

You register satisfaction when you examine the improved top, for the fabric is more durable.

And the one that comes last but should not be least in these dollar-counting days is the delight in the value you receive.

For such improvements cost money and the price is only $985 f. o. b. Detroit.

Post-war purchases for cash have saved you many a perfectly good dollar.

LONG-LIFE Kokomo TIRES AND TUBES
5000 MILE GUARANTEE

When a cheaper tire bears a guarantee of greater mileage it is a slur on your intelligence. There are no better tires made in America than Kokomo and no manufacturer could possibly make our tire at less manufacturing cost.

It is a plain fact that no tires can give more miles for every dollar you pay. Kokomo tires will prove their quality in more miles of satisfactory service. Their conservative guarantee marks the limit below which adjustment is never requested.

Regardless of miles delivered, even after 5,000 miles, if a Kokomo tire proves defective, a satisfactory adjustment will be made. Such a proposition cannot be equalled.

NO tread yet made of rubber is a perfect non-skid, but the Vacuum Bar tread, combining the suction grip of the arrow-head vacuum chamber with the rugged, diagonally placed bars, comes nearest to it and makes chains needless on wet and slippery roads.

The toughness of the STERLING Tread compound usually keeps the vacuum chamber effective until the guaranteed 5,000 miles have been run—then shift to the front wheels for the excess mileage.

STERLING Super-Size Cord tires, in all sizes up to 40x8, are extra large, extra heavy, extra tough tires and are as good looking as they are good. They are not lowest in price, but many hundreds of satisfied users find them lowest in cost-per-mile.

A THRILLER IN COBLENZ.

By Mae Tinée.

WANT to know how they do it in Coblenz? A fan who has been stationed there on military duty, after attending a picture show, grabbed a program—the kind they have in Coblenz—hurried to his quarters, and wrote me a letter saying he htought I'd like to get on to the "m. p. ropes" over there. He says:

"The name of the picture I went to see was 'The Mysterious Unknown.' After a long, tall, golden haired Lorelei person prepared us for it by singing 'I'm Sorry, Dear,' the machine got busy on the action of the 'Mysterious Unknown' as per synopsis and—well, my guess is that Tom Brok done it.

"When we get home, you will have to use 'Bitte' instead of 'Y'wekkum.'"

Here's the program:

APOLLO-THEATRE,
COBLENZ.
Greatest and most distinguished
Moving picture-Variety show.
Orchestre 15 pieces.
"The Mysterious Unknown."
A play in 4 reals with Magda Madeleine in the head-roll.

It is a stormy night. Mr. Wortman and his son Albert sat in their home—a little home on the beach—conversing. Albert stepped to the window and just sees a ship stranding. Only one passenger, a young girl, is rescued, and Albert has her brought to the home of his parents.

The young girl found her recovery, but had lost all remembrance of the part. All her misfortune brings her nearer to the family Wortman, specially Albert soon found the way to the heart of the unknown. At times the storms brought all kind of things en land. Martin and Lisette found—while taking a walk on the beach—a little wooden case with a package of lettres, and a key to a bank safe.

With another friend, named Fred, they travel to Hamburg and think it might be possible to make something with the found key. Lisette forges the name and soon brings her cavalier a little iron money box; but a waiter found the paper or her practising the signature and Lisette was arrested.

In the meantime had Fred and Martin tryed to open the box without success. Martin went to get tools, when Fred succeeded to open the box with a key; which, to his great astonishment, contained only worthless papers.

Martin returned and thinks his friend had him betrayed. They get in a fight. The next morning Fred's corpse is found and in his pockets, the key of bank safe.

The family Wortman, with the unknown, came at this time to Hamburg.

Mrs. Wortmann had noticed that Albert loved the unknown. They had given her the name Hertha. One day Hertha was laft alone, she got sick and called a physician. When Albert returned Hertha had disappeared. He waited all day long, but Hertha come not. About midnight he heard noise in the parlow, going there he just seen a man running away.

The next day he looked up the dedektiv, Tom Brok, so he might clear up the mysterious events.

Lisette's confession and a picture had lead to Martin's arrest. Tom Brok is just at the bank when an officer came and told that the right owner of the safe box—Dorothea Collin—gave notice of the loss of key.

Tom Brok follows Dorothea, who is really Hertha. Accompanied by a gentleman he sees them going in a house and reads at the gate: "Dr. A. Collin." Tom Brok went home and found there Albert Wortman. Albert Wortman's story interests him very much, and when Albert shows him a picture, he knows that he already can dissolve the riddle.

He takes Albert along to the house of Dr. Collin, which Collin and Dorothea just leave. Albert and Brok follow. How great is their surprise to see them go to the Wortmans house. Here the whole mysterie was cleared up: because Hertha had found her memory again and could tell of the past.

The Campaign of 1918

By Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick B. Maurice.

much nearer to our front between Albert and Arras than it did in the Somme valley, and Haig proposed to force the Germans out of the Somme uplands and turn the line of the river from Peronne southwards by striking from the Albert-Arras front through Bapaume towards the nearest portion of Ludendorff's goal. So, on Aug. 21, Byng with the 3d British army began the battle of Bapaume, which was captured on Aug. 29.

Byng's program in the north had as early as Aug. 26 the effect of hastening the retreat of the Germans between the Somme and the Oise. Rawlinson's 4th army pressed the enemy back down the Somme valley and on Aug. 31 the 2d Australian division, by a magnificent feat of arms, captured Mont St. Quentin, which dominates Peronne. The Australians entered that town the following day. Simultaneously the armies of Gen. Debeney and Humbert hustled the Germans back through Nesle and Noyon.

While this fighting was going on Haig had been quietly transferring the Canadian corps from the Amiens battlefield back to Arras, whence it had come, and on Aug. 26 the 2d and 3d Canadian divisions, with the 51st British division, attacked east of Arras and captured the important hill of Monchy le Preux. Horne's 1st army, to which these divisions belonged, followed up this success by driving the enemy back into the northern extension of the Hindenburg line, known as the Drocourt-Queant switch.

This Drocourt line had been completed by the enemy after the battle of Arras in April, 1917, and for eighteen months he had been hard at work improving it, until it had become almost as formidable as the main Hindenburg line, with which it connected at Queant. It was assaulted in the morning of Sept. 2 by the 1st and 4th Canadian divisions and the 4th, 52d, and 57th and 63d British divisions, assisted by some forty tanks.

These six divisions not only broke clear through the network of German defenses and gained possession of the whole system in less than seven hours, but in so doing they routed nine German divisions, who had all the advantage of defensive works which they knew thoroughly and believed to be impregnable. This great feat had, as Haig had hoped it would have, far reaching results.

With their right flank threatened the Germans in the south had to hurry back to the shelter of the Hindenburg line, and by Sept. 9 they were in the positions which they constructed in front of their main defensive system. By Sept. 9 the French had occupied Hamm on the Somme and Chulny on the Oise, and a few days later were within sight of La Fere.

These disasters in the south had the effect of hastening the German withdrawal in Flanders, and by the 6th of September we had reoccupied Baillue and Merville and were back in Neuve Chapelle, while the 27th American division had passed beyond Kemmel Hill. Thus, in one month, all the ground won by Ludendorff in his first two attacks of March and April had, with the exception of a portion on the Ypres front, been regained and in that month the British army had captured 94,950 prisoners and 870 guns. It had amply avenged the reverses of the spring.

Pershing Plays His Part.

WHILE Haig was hunting the Germans back into the Hindenburg line Pershing was engaged in collecting his scattered divisions and in establishing an American sector of the front. This by the end of August extended around the St. Mihiel salient northwards to a point opposite to Verdun. On Sept. 12 Pershing, who had assumed personal command of the 1st American army, attacked both flanks of the salient, and in thirty hours had cured what the French expressly term the St. Mihiel rupture, which had existed ever since September, 1914.

In this brilliant success eight American and three French divisions were engaged and there were six more American divisions in reserve, 16,000 prisoners and 443 guns being taken by the 1st American army. The St. Mihiel salient had long broken up the stretch of front between the Moselle and Verdun, so that a French offensive movement into Lorraine had been impossible, but now that the salient was gone and the front had been straightened out the Germans found both their great fortress of Metz menaced with attack and also the French iron fields of Briey to the north of Metz, which they had captured in the early days of the war and were of even more importance to them than the fortress.

American headquarters allowed it to be whispered in confidence that Pershing's real objective was these iron fields and doubtless some of these whispers found their way into the German lines. In any event, Ludendorff, almost to the very end, showed his nervousness as to an American attack on the east bank of the Meuse and, hard up as he was for reserves, he kept troops to watch for a blow which never came.

This victory of Pershing's completed the series of preliminary punches, and Foch was now ready for the knockout blow. His immediate object had been to free Paris and Amiens and to clear the stategic railways which he needed for the free movemeint of his troops, his ultimate object having been to prepare for a decisive victory by exhausting the German reserves. We have seen how he achieved the first, let us now see how he stood as to the second.

At the end of May just before the Crown Prince William's attack on the Chemin des Dames the German forces in the west had reached their greatest strength. They then had 207 divisions on the western front, and of those Ludendorff had about sixty-six divisions in reserve. In the third week of September after Pershing's victory at St. Mihiel, the number of German divisions had fallen to 185, for in order to make good his heavy losses Ludendorff had been compelled to draw upon his capital, his income in manpower from Germany being quite insufficient to meet expenditure, and to break up twenty-two of his divisions in an endeavor to keep the remainder up to strength. In this extremity he had to swallow his pride and appeal to despised Austria for aid, with the result that six Austrian divisions arrived on the western front, and of these two had been defeated at St. Mihiel. The reserves of sixty-six divisions in May had fallen to nineteen in September.

1914—By Field Marshal Viscount French of Ypres

In this, the tenth installment of Lord French's narrative of the early months of the war, he publishes the communications between him and Joffre showing their disagreements on certain points.

THERE are a few salient points in the history of these last few days of the month of September which materially affected the course of the campaign.

On the 26th Sir Charles Haddon, master general of the ordnance, arrived at my headquarters to discuss the question of armament and ammunition. I took this fine opportunity to impress upon him how terribly different we were in heavy artillery as compared with the Germans, and urged as strongly as I possibly could that the manufacture of this class of ordnance, as well as an abundance of ammunition, should be put in hand at once.

My official correspondence with the war office on this vital subject dates back to this time, and continued right up to June, 1915, when at last Mr. Lloyd George came to the rescue and entered upon his career of patriotic salvation. Britons all over the world will ever remember this distinguished statesman with the utmost gratitude as one of the greatest of their empire's sons.

Only those who were in any degree associated with Mr. Lloyd George in this time of trial can fully realize the awful responsibility which rested upon him and the difficult nature of the problem he had to solve. His work was done in face of a dead weight of senseless but powerful opposition, all of which he had to undermine and overcome.

I think it was on Sept. 24 that a few 9 inch siege howitzers arrived and proved of great help to me.

Visited by Churchill.

AS I am about to recount the pourparlers with Joffre which led up to our move north, I am reminded that it was during these latter days of September that my friend, Winston Churchill, paid me a visit. I think of him in connection with this subject—quite apart from any question of Antwerp, which was not then in danger—because it was at that time that we first discussed together the advisability of joint action by the army and navy. It was then that we sketched out plans for an offensive with one flank toward the sea, which, although the subsequent fall of Antwerp effected a drastic change in the conditions, were the same in principle as those which took substantial shape and form in the early days of 1915, and which will be recounted in their proper place.

I cannot adequately express my sense of the valuable help which I received throughout the war from Winston Churchill's assistance and constant sympathy. Not only have I always indignantly repudiated the shameful attacks which his countrymen have so often made upon him, but it rejoices me to know that I have been able to do so—having a full knowledge of all the facts—with a deep and true sense of the horrible injustice of the charges brought against him. I shall have more to say on this subject later.

On Sept. 29 I addressed to the French commander in chief the following note which was conveyed to him that evening by Gen. Wilson:

"Ever since our position in the French line was altered by the advance of Gen. Maunoury's Sixth army to the River Ourcq, I have been anxious to regain my original position on the left flank of the French armies. On several occasions I have thought of suggesting this move, but the strategical and tactical situation from day to day has made the proposal inopportune. Now, however, that the position of affairs has become clearly defined and that the immediate future can be forecast with some confidence, I wish to press the proposal with all the power and insistence which are at my disposal. The moment for the execution of such a move appears to me to be singularly opportune.

"In the first place, the position of my force on the right bank of the River Aisne has now been thoroughly well entrenched.

"In the second place, I have carefully reconnoitered an alternative position on the left bank of the River Aisne, and have had this position entrenched from end to end, and it is now ready for occupation.

"The strategical advantages of the proposed move are much greater. I am expecting to be reinforced by the 7th division from England early next week.

"Following closely on this reinforcement will come the 3d cavalry division from home, and then the 8th division from home, and simultaneously with this last reinforcement will come two Indian divisions and an Indian cavalry division.

"In other words, my present force of six divisions and two cavalry divisions will within three or four weeks from now be increased by four divisions and two cavalry divisions, making a total British force of ten divisions (five corps) and four cavalry divisions.

"All through the present campaign I have been much restricted both in initiative and in movement by the smallness of my army in face of the enormous numbers of the enemy.

"With an army of five corps and four cavalry divisions my freedom of action, field of operation, and power of initiative will be increased out of all proportion to the numerical increase in corps, more especially as almost half my total force will then consist of fresh troops and will be opposed by an enemy already much worn by the severity of the previous fighting.

"Another reason of a strategical nature for changing my position in the line is the great advantage which my forces will gain by a shortened line of communication, an advantage which falls almost equally on your railways.

"It appears to me, therefore, that both from strategical reasons and from tactical reasons it is desirable that the British army should regain its position on the left of the line.

"There remains the question of when this move should take place.

"I submit that now is the time.

"We are all sedentary armies, and movements and changes are easily made. Once the forward movement has been commenced it will be more difficult to pull out my army from the line of advance, and a further delay in the transfer of my force from its present position will lead to great confusion both at the front and on the L. of C. and a great loss of power and efficiency in the coming campaign.

"It is for these reasons that I advocate the transfer of my force from its present position to the extreme left of the line, and I advocate that the change should be made now."

Gen. Joffre's Reply.

ON the 30th I received the following from Joffre:

"Great General Headquarters Staff, Third Bureau, Sept. 30, 1914.—Note by Gen. Joffre, Commander in Chief, to Marshall French, Commanding British Army.—His Excellency Marshal French has been good enough to draw the attention of the commander in chief to the particular interest attaching to the proposal that the British army should reoccupy the position which it originally held on the left of the French armies.

"In view of the ever increasing strength of the British forces this position would offer great advantages in lightening the work of the French railways and diminishing the length of the British line of communication, and, above all, in giving to Marshal French's army a liberty of action and of power very superior to those it now possesses.

"The increase of strength which will shortly accrue to the British army by the arrival of the 7th and 8th divisions and a division of cavalry and the two Indian divisions and one cavalry division from India entirely justifies the marshal's request. The commander in chief shares this view and is persuaded that if this movement had been possible it would have been very advantageous for the allied armies; but so far the general situation has not admitted of this being carried out.

"Is it possible at this moment to contemplate its realization in the future? His Excellency Marshal French thinks that the present moment is particularly favorable to his project. In front of the British line, as also in front of the 6th, 9th, and 4th armies, the situation is, so to speak, unchanged. For nearly fifteen days the armies of the center have been accrochées to the ground without making any real advance. There have been violent attacks and periods of calm, but the commander in chief wishes to point out that this is far from being the case on the wings.

"As a matter of fact, on the right the 3d army and a portion of the 1st army for several days in the neighborhood of St. Mihiel have been fighting an obstinate battle, the issue of which is not in doubt, but the results of which have not yet made themselves felt. On the left the 2d army, which today forms the extreme flank of the line, has for three days past been the object of furious attacks, which show how important it is for the enemy to crush our wing.

"Will this army always form the left of the French forces? We cannot think so, because the fact that today the army there has been subdivided will doubtless lead the commander in chief to form a new army there; the transport of troops necessitated by the creation of this army, formed from elements taken away from the front without leaving a gap in our line, must of necessity render our situation somewhat delicate for some days.

"If the commander in chief has contemplated the possibility of withdrawing a certain number of corps without modifying his front, he has never thought of transporting an entire army, the removal of which would create a gap impossible to fill.

"The battle has been going on since Sept. 13. It is necessary that during this period of crisis, which will have considerable influence on the subsequent operations, every one should maintain his position without thinking of modifying it, so as to be ready for all eventualities.

"Now, the movement contemplated by His Excellency Marshal French would inevitably entail complications, not only in the position of troops but also in those of supply trains, etc. It might possibly create confusion in the general dispositions of our armies, the extent of which it would be difficult to measure.

"For the above reasons the commander in chief cannot share the view of Marshal French as to the time at which this movement should be carried out; on the other hand, it appears that it might be possible to begin it from today onward by making certain dispositions, the detail of which is given below:

"1. The British army might operate like the French army. It is today strongly intrenched in the positions which it occupies. While maintaining the integrity of its front, it might doubtless be possible for it to withdraw a certain number of divisions (to begin with one corps), which might in succession be transported to the left.

"2. The British cavalry division is at the present moment unemployed on the front; it might, similarly to the Eleventh and Tenth corps and Eighth division of cavalry, move by rail or by march route to the extreme left to act as a communicating link between the Belgian army and the French troops.

"3. The Seventh and Eighth divisions, which will shortly arrive, could be disembarked in the neighborhood of Dunkirk. They would subsequently operate in the direction of Lille. Their action would immediately make itself felt on the right flank of the German army, which daily receives fresh reinforcements. These divisions would be joined to the divisions withdrawn from the front.

"4. The Indian divisions, as soon as they are able to take the field, would move by rail to join the English formations assembled in the northern region and would form the nucleus with which would be united the other British divisions as soon as they should be removed.

"5. As soon as the advance can be resumed, the front will be narrowed; it would then be possible for the English to halt and slip behind with a view to moving the left of the line while the Sixth and Fifth armies close in toward each other. The fewer units remaining to be moved the easier would be the operation.

"To sum up, the commander in chief shares Marshal French's view that it is desirable for the whole British army to be on the left of the French armies, but cannot be entirely of the same opinion as to the time at which this movement should be carried out.

"The commander in chief would be grateful to his excellency, Marshal French, if the latter would let him know whether he shares his views as to the proposals indicated above."

Marshal French's Answer.

ON the same date, I replied to the commander in chief as follows.

"Sept. 30, 1914.

"Note by the Field Marshal, Commander in Chief British Forces, to His Excellency the Commander in Chief:

"The field marshal commander in chief, British forces, has received the note which his excellency the commander in chief has been kind enough to address to him in reply to his memorandum of the 29th inst.

"Sir John French entirely agrees with the views expressed and will give effect to them at once in the following manner:

"1. The 2d cavalry division, consisting of two brigades under the command of Maj. Gen. Gough, which is now located in rear of the left of the line held by the British forces, will hold itself in readiness to proceed to whatever point on the railway his excellency the commander in chief may decide upon, to be moved thence to Lille, if that place should be decided upon as the point upon which the British forces should first concentrate on reaching the left of the allied line.

"2. As soon as trains are available the field marshal commanding in chief will disengage the 2d British corps, which now occupies the center of the British line. This corps will concentrate in rear and be ready to move by the same route and for the same destination as the 2d cavalry division.

"3. In like manner, the 19th infantry brigade will be held in readiness to move immediately after the 2d corps.

"4. The position in the center of the British line, held now by the two divisions of the 2d corps, will be divided between the 1st corps, now occupying the left of the British line, in such a manner as to unite the inward flanks of the two corps, while the 1st cavalry division will be held as a reserve south of the river.

"5. The field marshal understands that, as soon as a forward move by the whole line becomes feasible, these two corps and the 1st cavalry division will remain behind, their places being filled up by closing in the 5th and 6th French armies on their inward flanks.

"6. The field marshal will immediately inform the British secretary of state for war of these arrangements, and will ask that the 7th and 8th divisions may be moved as soon as practicable via Boulogne or Havre to join the British forces concentrating at Lille.

"7. The Indian division will be directed to move in accordance with the views expressed in the note of Sept. 30.

"Sir John French hopes that these proposals will meet with the approval of his excellency the commander in chief."

Gen. Joffre Again.

THE following was Gen. Joffre's reply:

"Oct. 1, 1914.

"The commander in chief of the French forces has the honor to acknowledge receipt of the letter of his excellency the field marshal commanding the British army, dated Sept. 30, referring to the future movements which are to be carried out by this army.

"He is happy to be able to comply with the wishes expressed by the field marshal and to state, once more, the entire unanimity of views which exists between the comamnders of the allied armies. At the same time, owing to the necessities of the railway service, it is not possible to commence entraining before the afternoon of Oct. 5.

"Referring to the points touched on in the letter of Sept. 30, and in accordance with the views given by the field marshal, it is suggested that the following instructions might be given:

"1. The 2d cavalry division (two brigades under the command of Gen. Gough) should move by road, owing to the lateness of the date on which entrainment becomes possible. They should move in rear of the 6th and 2d armies, by Villers—Cotterets—La Croix—St. Ouen—Amiens—St. Pol—Lille (similarly to the 8th and 10th French divisions).

"2. The 2d corps should march to the area Longueil—Pont St. Maxence by Oct. 5, to be moved by rail to the Lille district, its place on the front held by the British to be taken as arranged by the field marshal in his letter of Sept. 30.

"3. The 19th infantry brigade to be in readiness to follow the 2d corps.

"4. As regards the two corps and the cavalry division remaining at the front, it would appear inconvenient to leave them halted there when the general advance of the whole line becomes possible.

"Apart from the unfairness of depriving the British troops of the satisfaction of advancing after their valiant fighting, it will be more convenient to halt them successively, as the closing in of the inner flank of the 5th and 6th armies shortens the front allotted to the British army.

"It would be advisable for the commander in chief and the field marshal to arrange mutually, at some convenient date, the conditions under which the transport of these troops by rail should be made.

"5. Referring to the disembarkation of the 7th and 8th divisions, the commander in chief is most anxious that these two divisions should proceed as soon as possible to Boulogne. Their arrival at Lille, where they are to join the British forces pushed to the front, would then be more rapid than if they were disembarked at Havre and the arrangements would be simpler. Their movement from the port of landing could be carried out by road with the assistance of the railway for marching troops.

"6. The Indian divisions should be moved to the neighborhood of Lille as soon as the field marshal reports that they are ready.

"The G. O. C. in C. hopes that these proposals are in accordance with the views expressed by the field marshal in his letter of Sept. 30, and he would be glad to be assured of this as soon as possible in order that steps may be taken to execute them.

"[Signed] J. JOFFRE."

I acknowledged the above in these terms:

"Oct. 1, 1914.

"The field marshal, commanding in chief the British forces, has duly received the note dated Oct. 1, 1914, from his excellency, the commander in chief.

"He is extremely glad to find that the proposals contained in his last note meet with the approval of the commander in chief.

"Such modifications as are suggested in the present note are perfectly feasible, and Sir John French will give immediate effect to them.

"The necessary orders were issued today, and the preliminary movements are now in progress.

"The field marshal hopes that the 2d cavalry division will commence its march toward Lille on the morning of Oct. 8."

Average American Motorist Wastes Half of His Fuel

Use of Leaner Mixtures Would Save Oceans of Gasoline

BY HIGH SPEED

EVERY car owner likes to keep his expenses as low as he reasonably can and it is really surprising to what a small figure the costs can be cut by consistent saving. This is as it should be, for motoring in America is distinctly a democratic sport and we want to keep it so.

Therefore any suggestions for keeping down the expense bills are quite in keeping with what many call our national motoring ideals. In the present article I purpose trying to tell the car owner how he may cut off something from his fuel bill.

Let us begin by saying that the bills for gasoline and tires are the two big items in the outlay for keeping the car running. They are then the obvious first points of attack in any attempt to cut down expenses. Further, it is the duty of all car owners to make their fuel go as far as possible, because our supply of petroleum is barely enough for our demands now, with still heavier consumption in prospect.

The first place to begin the campaign to cut down fuel consumption is at the carburetor. Here occur most of the leaks that increase fuel consumption. The average American car owner drives with a mixture nearly twice as rich as is necessary. In other words, almost half the gasoline that he uses is wasted.

The modern engine will run on a mixture ranging from about fourteen parts air to one of gasoline to one containing only eight parts air to one of gas. But the engine will do its best work when the mixture is made as lean as possible. While it burns the heavier mixture it does not operate with the snap and vim that it displays on the leaner fuel.

Practically all modern carburetors have an attachment for increasing and decreasing the amount of air injected into the mixture. It is a very simple matter to experiment with this adjustment, first making the mixture as lean as possible and gradually turning back until exactly the right proportions of gas to air have been found for satisfactory operation. In addition to the benefits of greater economy with the leaner mixture this condition also cuts down carbon deposits.

It may seem to the individual car owner that it is a very small matter whether or not he uses too rich a mixture, but it is the aggregate of this wastage that counts. The individual's waste may be multiplied by nearly 6,000,000 to get the total amount of motor fuel that is practically thrown away. If all this potentially useful fuel were turned into actual service, instead of having our fuel supply an alarmingly tight fit for our needs we would have a handsome surplus to take care of the rapidly growing numbers of motor vehicles.

However, the carburetor is not the end of the search for possible fuel leaks. After the carburetor has been properly adjusted to supply the leanest mixture consonant with good operation, the whole fuel system ought to be gone over from engine to tank. Foreign matter partially obstructing the pipes, or lodged in the strainers, or in the fuel tank, helps to cut down the efficiency of the whole system.

A rigid search for leaks in pipes and manifolds should be instituted.

An actual physical leakage of the fuel is only a little worse than power leaks of various sorts. Wasted power inevitably means additional fuel to make good the deficiency. Carbon deposits in the cylinders are a prolific source of wasted power.

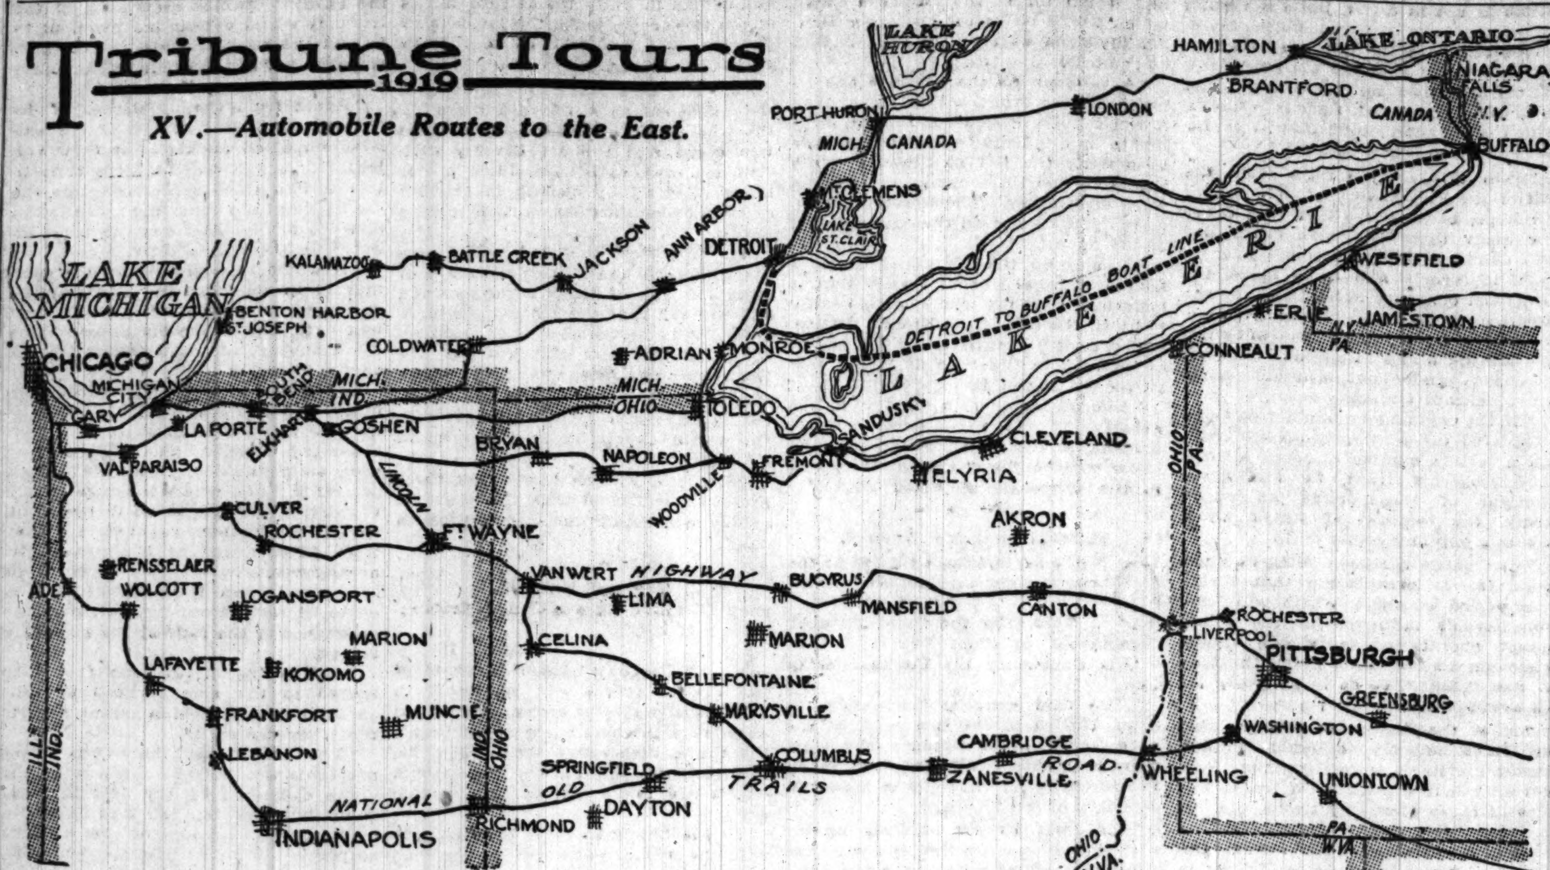
And here is a place where one original waste breeds further wastage. When the fuel mixture is too rich, heavy carbon deposits are formed in the cylinders and these cut down the power output—almost a geometrical progression. Therefore, keep the engine free from carbon by having it cleaned out periodically and help along the good cause by getting proper carburetor adjustment in the first place.

Good carburetion is the beginning of the battle, but it is not all. The ignition must also be good or there will be prodigious wastage of power. The battery must be kept fully charged, the connections at the plugs, the ignition unit and the coil must be kept clean and tight to insure a good hot spark in the combustion chamber.

Many cars will run with entire efficiency on a mixture of one gallon of kerosene to four gallons of gasoline. If the engine is fitted with an attachment permitting it to take heated air from around the manifold to mix with the fuel vapor it will readily assimilate this mixture of kerosene and gasoline, thus saving one-fifth of the consumption of the lighter fuel. If all car owners adopted this idea it would add half a billion gallons of motor fuel to our annual supply.

Tribune Tours 1919

XV.—Automobile Routes to the East.



THE problem of choosing a route to New York or other points to the east is not as complicated as the maze of lines on the map herewith might indicate. Essentially, the tourist starting from Chicago has a choice of but four main itineraries:

1. The National Old Trails road across southern Ohio.
2. The Lincoln highway.
3. The Cleveland route along the southern shore of Lake Erie.
4. The Detroit route.

Of these the first is by far the best this year. The old National road, as it is familiarly called, is in superb condition for the most part—good enough to warrant any extra mileage that may be involved in a swing to the south through Indianapolis, where the transcontinental trail is picked up. A slightly more direct way of reaching the National road lies through Rochester, Fort Wayne, and Bellefontaine, but the roads by this route are not as good.

Second choice probably lies with the Cleveland route, though the roads across northern Indiana and Ohio are badly worn this year and are best avoided by travelers on pleasure bent. In skirting the shore of Lake Erie one has the choice of continuing into Buffalo or turning east across New York at Westfield.

The Lincoln highway through central Ohio into Pittsburgh is much used, of course, by tourists who enjoy following a plainly marked trail, but it offers a wide variety of road conditions, being cut to pieces in many places by the heavy truck traffic to which it has been subjected in recent months.

Finally, there is the Detroit route, rather a favorite with Chicagoans despite the indifferent roads over the first part of the journey, because it permits the option of putting the car and its passengers on a boat at Detroit and shipping them to Buffalo, where the fine roads of New York state give plain sailing the rest of the way. An interesting, but comparatively little used itinerary continues from Detroit across Canada, preferably by way of Port Huron and London.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

A NEW Pierce-Arrow is announced—retaining, of course, the unique dual valve six cylinder power plant, which made its appearance recently, but incorporating several novel features which did not appear on the earlier models. Of these the most distinctive is a double battery ignition system, with two timers and distributers working in unison and an automatic spark advance in place of the former hand lever. There is also a new transmission, designed to facilitate gear changing.

The long awaited "little Overland," heralded as the first real rival of the Ford, is making its first public road appearance as part of the army's transcontinental motor transport convoy which is crossing Illinois this week. Three cars of the new type are being used—one by the official lecturer, another by photographers, and a third by newspaper men. The Willys-Overland company has maintained a profound silence about the model in recent months, but now intimates that it "will be brought out soon."

The latest thing in automobile trade journals is the "Automotive Exporter," a monthly, which has the distinction of being printed in Spanish, English, and French in parallel columns—ads, reading matter and all—and getting along entirely without subscribers. Ten thousand copies are mailed each month, however, to American consuls and to the trade all over the world except in the United States.

All Goodyear tires—pneumatic, cushion, and solid—are now sold under an unlimited guarantee, with no restrictions as to mileage. The mileage limitation on passenger car tires was discarded by the company about five years ago. It was removed from solid and cushion tires last week.

Suggestions in THE TRIBUNE and elsewhere as to the need of a plan for registering the ownership of motor cars have been adopted by the Automobile Abstract and Title company, a million dollar Detroit and Chicago corporation, which proposes to issue abstracts of title for automobiles. The concern thinks it will be as difficult to steal and sell a car so protected as it would be to get away with a piece of real estate.

Tennant Brothers have remodeled their automobile banking headquarters at 2447 Michigan avenue. The principal offices, now on the main floor, has been entirely reëquipped.

A Nash distributors' convention, held at the factory in Kenosha last week, was made the occasion of an announcement that Walter W. Smith, formerly manager of passenger car sales, has been advanced to the position of assistant sales manager.

About 100 distributors attended a Goodrich truck tire distributors' convention held the other day at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Addresses on trade problems and an afternoon at the ball game constituted the program.

An elaborate test of Dixon lubricants is being staged during the progress of the army's big motor transport convoy from Washington to San Francisco. Before the train started, Dixon men worked with the army mechanics preparing the transmissions and differentials on a number of cars and the performance of these is being watched closely.

Capt. W. H. Durborough, who is conducting a cross country test of old tires rebuilt by the Savold process, has covered nearly 2,500 miles in Michigan, Ohio, and Canada with the tires, he reports, on the same air as when they left Chicago.

C. Y. Kenworthy of the Chicago Roamer company will put his Roamer-Duesenberg racing car in service again, retaining Kurt Hitke as driver. Hitke expects to drive in the Elgin road race after repairing the damage done the car in the Indianapolis contest.

J. Hauvette-Michelin, vice president of the Michelin Tire company, announces that all employés of the company throughout America are to be insured without cost to them and without the necessity of their undergoing physical examinations.

Rides Like Air

"OVER 75,000 USERS"
Essenkay
THE TIRE FILLER
FOR CITY AND COUNTRY DRIVING

Not a Liquid

What Is Essenkay?

Essenkay is a light brown, "live," resilient composition, having all the easy-riding qualities of finest Para Rubber; yet Essenkay contains no trace of rubber—therefore cannot rot, "bloom," harden or in any way deteriorate under rigors of heat, cold, water, sand, mud, pressure or atmospheric conditions.

No Punctures—No Blowouts

Tire troubles are permanently banished by Essenkay Tire Filler. Essenkay replaces the Inner Tube, fills the casing completely and renders the tire impervious to Punctures and Blowouts.

First Cost—Last Cost

ESSENKAY does not wear out like tires. It should last as long as the car. As tires wear down to the last layer of fabric and are discarded, the ESSENKAY may be taken out and transferred to new casings. It is not affected by heat, cold, atmosphere or climatic conditions. It contains no rubber—hence will not oxidize bloom or rot.

Doubles Tire Mileage

Tires filled with ESSENKAY are always at uniform pressure—they cannot be deflated or run "flat." Thus they wear down to the last layer of fabric; 10,000 to 20,000 miles on ESSENKAY filled tires is the rule, not the exception. Essenkay forestalls quick deterioration of tires due to early injury

Free Trial Offer

ESSENKAY is installed by us on FREE TRIAL. We ask you to test it in your tires under your own loading and road conditions. Ride over smooth roads, then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sandy country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor to prove that ESSENKAY does not flatten. Then—if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air—that it will end your tire troubles—that you will no longer be bothered with punctures, blowouts or slow leaks—that ESSENKAY will not flatten, crumble or deteriorate—return it. THE TEST WILL COST YOU NOTHING.

Stretched, as in the tire, good tubes do not rip when cut. They cut but do not rip.

The slightest cut in an inferior tube—Rip! and the tube is ruined.

You Can Test the Norwalk Right Straight Through

THE scissors test shows you that the Norwalk Tube is different. It shows you that it does not rip as other tubes.

The Norwalk Tube proves to you that the Norwalk Casing is your tire. The Norwalk Tube, floating stock*, both red and gray, is the highest quality tube made. The Norwalk cord or non-skid fabric with snow white sidewalls and black tread is the highest quality tire made.

Norwalk products never ask acceptance on faith alone. Prove them before you buy. Take the first test now. Take the scissors.

The Scissors Test

Take sample piece of tube ¼ in. by 3 in. Stretch to 9 in. or three times its original length. Cut on the edge with the scissors. The cut should not be more than ⅛ in. across the sample. If the strip tears apart the rubber is inferior.

Sheridan Road's Bad Spots to Be Removed—Maybe

Daniels Will 'Consider' Repair Work at Great Lakes.

TOURISTS who have followed Sheridan road all the way to Milwaukee this summer will find no particular pleasure in their recollections of that stretch of the highway which passes through the naval training station, just south of North Chicago. The road surface at this point has been worn into fearful condition and is full of vicious "chuck holes."

A ray of hope, however, appears in the following exchange of telegrams which resulted last week from a tour of the north shore made by several officials of the Illinois Highway Improvement association:

"Hon. Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C.—Sheridan road is the principal highway connecting Chicago with Milwaukee. This road passes through the naval station at Great Lakes. At outbreak of war it was in good condition at this point, but owing to heavy navy trucking it has been badly damaged, and Admiral Bassett informs me there are no funds available for its immediate improvement. If this is true hope you will recommend an item in your present budget so that work may be done before the present building season is over. Otherwise the people who are compelled to use this road will suffer great inconvenience.

"WILLIAM G. EDENS,
"President Illinois Highway Improvement Association."

Mr. Edens received this reply:

"Matters referred to in your telegram shall have my consideration.
"JOSEPHUS DANIELS."

Great Lakes and Zion City are now the only bad spots left on the Sheridan road route to Milwaukee. Great Lakes can be avoided for the present by taking the Green Bay road from Lake Forest to the "five points," just southwest of North Chicago, but there's no way to get around Zion City.

Several conferences have been held on the problem of financing an improved road through Voliva's domain, but thus far little progress has been made. Should Zion City's mile and a half be paved and the stretch through Great Lakes repaired, Sheridan road to Milwaukee will be virtually a continuous boulevard.

We're 'Way Behind.

Government figures prepared for the joint congressional committee on roads show that England has 2.751 miles of road to every square mile of area; France 1.75 miles, and the United States .739. There are 108 French citizens to every mile of road, 239 Englishmen, and but 41.81 Americans. On the basis of these figures, the highway system of the United States will not equal the ratio of French mileage to area until we have 5,000,000 miles of highways, while 7,500,000 miles will be necessary to meet the English ratio.

More Speedways.

San Francisco and Los Angeles are to have twin mile and a quarter board speedways. According to announcement by Cliff Durant, millionaire sportsman and racing driver, the sites have been chosen and construction work will start within a few weeks.

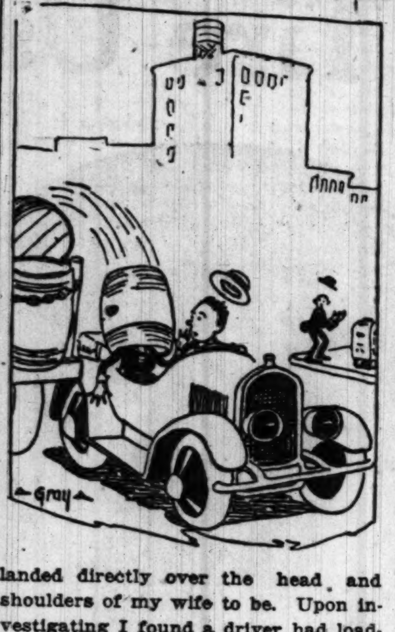
The courses will be owned by the California Speedway association, which will be incorporated for $250,000. This sum has been practically subscribed.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Some Surprise.

Just after purchasing my marriage license I was driving on Clark street, completing final details before the ceremony the next day, when, without warning a large empty barrel came, seemingly from nowhere at all, and landed directly over the head and shoulders of my wife to be. Upon investigating I found a driver had loaded the barrel on a very large wagon and it had rolled over just in time to surprise us.

J. A. W.



Takes Numbers Now.

Recently a young man called and took me to the theater in his car. After the performance he excused himself for a few moments to go to a nearby store for a box of candy.

"I'll walk on down and get in the car," I told him, as I made off in the direction of a long line of parked cars.

I was scarcely settled in a car when a strange man walked up. I noted from his embarrased manner that something was wrong, and then to my horror it suddenly flashed upon me that I was in the wrong car. Since that time I have never left a car without noting its license number.

MYRTLE S. M.

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Make a copy and keep it if you wish to preserve what you have written.

The "Loco" Paid.

We were bowling along in sandy Michigan behind a Ford, which kept the even tenor of its way on three-quarters of the road, apparently oblivious of honks from our Loco.

Speeding up at a crossroads and honking steadily, we were about to pass our deliberate neighbor when he turned directly into our rear guard, disfiguring it and smashing his own wheel.

At the next town we were held up with a warrant for horrible treatment of the poor derelict, telephoned in advance, and when its occupant arrived before the justice of the peace where we awaited him, we beheld a one eyed man, who breathlessly confessed that his blind side was on our side of the road in passing and that the rest of him was busy driving the Ford and holding a squawking pig between his knees at the same time.

The court decided that to have but one eye on a Ford was deprivation enough, to say nothing of a lap full of squirming pig as a handicap, and that he allowed the "Loco" really should pay all damages—which it did.

Old Cobe Trophy Added Prize for Elgin Road Race

THE Elgin road race to be run Aug. 23 on the old Kane county course, was given added interest yesterday when it was announced that the famous Cobe trophy will be offered the victor, Ira Cobe, from his eastern summer home, notified the officials of the Chicago Automobile club that the cup, which has figured in contests at Crown Point, Indianapolis, and Elgin, will be put up for next month's event.

This trophy was placed in competition years ago by the sportsman whose name it bears. It will become the permanent property of the driver winning it three times. So far Louis Chevrolet, Ralph De Palma, and Joe Dawson have gained a "leg" each. Chevrolet and De Palma are considered certain starters in the Elgin race.

Entry blanks for the race were distributed throughout the country last week. The distance is to be 301 miles, 4,440 feet, or 36 laps of the historic course, which has been repaired and placed in excellent condition. The event is open to any motor car with 300 cubic inch or less piston displacement.

To Drive Under Hudson.

The governors of New Jersey and New York have signed the bills authorizing that work be started at once on a tube under the Hudson river to be restricted to foot and vehicular traffic. It is estimated that the tube will cost $12,000,000 and will take from three to five years to build, and that within twenty years the tolls charged vehicles using it will have paid for its construction.

"Rubber, of Course"

Ask any electrical man to name the best all-around insulation. Ten to one he'll say rubber.

It is the right answer, too, particularly where storage batteries are concerned. That's one of the things that three years use of Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation has proved.

Come in. Let us tell you more about Threaded Rubber. Ask, while here, for a copy of the booklet, "The Wick of the Willard."

We test, repair and recharge storage batteries, and always carry a full supply of battery parts, new batteries and rental batteries.

PACKARD TRUCKS MAKE NEW METHODS POSSIBLE IN BULK HAULING

Men in the Building, Contracting and Construction trades are learning to figure bids for work on a known-in-advance hauling cost

ESTIMATES based on uncertain hauling costs are liable to be high because profits must be protected.

But the substantial business man who is in the business permanently finds it difficult to bid safely against the "take a chance" contractor or builder.

This problem in its various phases has been worked out by the Packard Freight Transportation Department during several years and in many cities.

The hauling of bulky materials on building, contracting and construction work has been given scientific study and today you can secure from this department hauling data that is invaluable wherever low and certain costs are necessary.

Last year alone the Packard Freight Transportation Department conducted practical field tests for several months with 1700 Packard trucks of all classes.

Now we are conducting an even more complete and severe test over a period of twelve months on nearly 2000 Packard trucks.

Packard trucks on the heaviest possible duty with Pershing in France have brought back hundreds of records for high mileage, continuous service and low operating cost.

From French and British armies identical reports of extraordinary performance have come to us.

The value to you of these tests and records is that they have given the Packard Freight Transportation Department a clean-cut and definite basis for figuring the cost of hauling bulky materials.

No matter what class of work you may be bidding on you will find many parallel cases within our experience. We can tell you what to expect in the way of haulage costs on your jobs.

It is only natural to expect that the Packard Freight Transportation engineers have designed their larger truck units in the light of this unusually wide heavy hauling experience.

And you will find that the actual performance of these Packard trucks is a tribute to their rugged design and careful engineering.

Certainly the business man who wishes to make successful bids with a sure profit will be interested in Packard 100,000 mile performance, Packard over-load capacity, Packard reserve power, Packard continuous service—and the low hauling cost which these things insure.

The Packard Freight Transportation Department's advice is available to you without charge or obligation. By telephone, mail, or at our showroom.

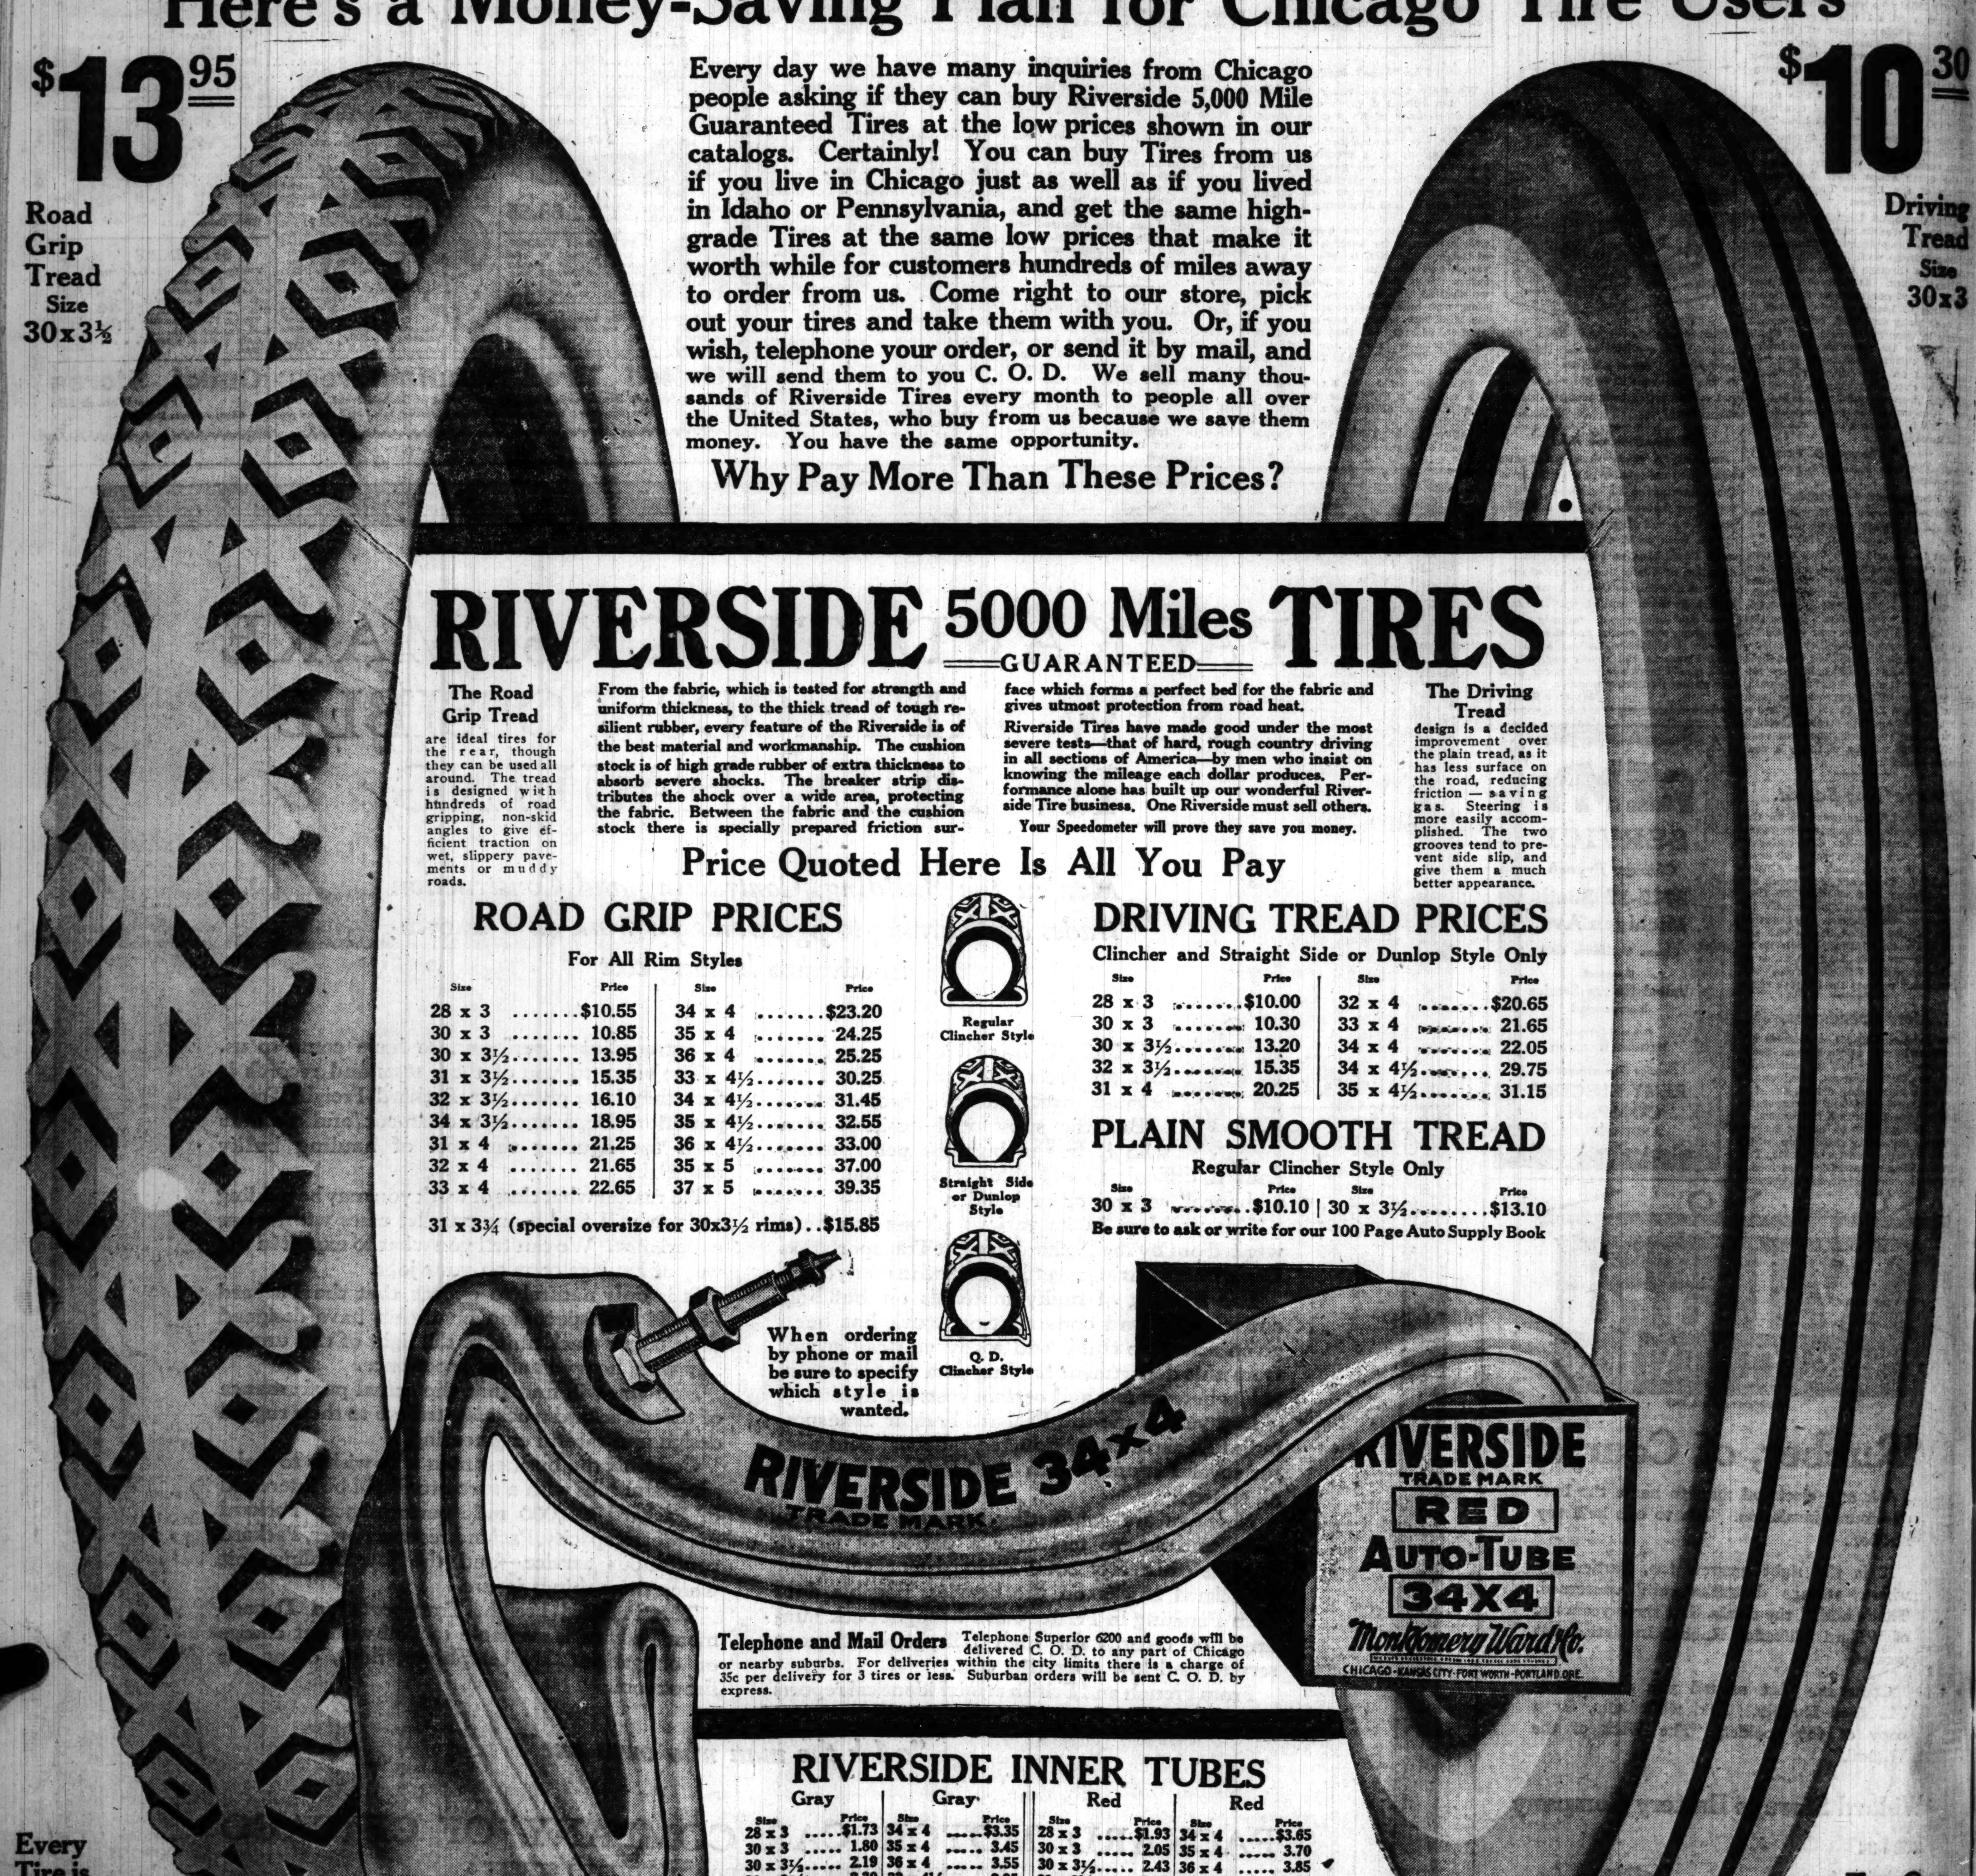
Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back

Here's a Money-Saving Plan for Chicago Tire Users



Every day we have many inquiries from Chicago people asking if they can buy Riverside 5,000 Mile Guaranteed Tires at the low prices shown in our catalogs. Certainly! You can buy Tires from us if you live in Chicago just as well as if you lived in Idaho or Pennsylvania, and get the same high-grade Tires at the same low prices that make it worth while for customers hundreds of miles away to order from us. Come right to our store, pick out your tires and take them with you. Or, if you wish, telephone your order, or send it by mail, and we will send them to you C. O. D. We sell many thousands of Riverside Tires every month to people all over the United States, who buy from us because we save them money. You have the same opportunity.

Why Pay More Than These Prices?

RIVERSIDE 5000 Miles TIRES
GUARANTEED

The Road Grip Tread are ideal tires for the rear, though they can be used all around. The tread is designed with hundreds of road gripping, non-skid angles to give efficient traction on wet, slippery pavements or muddy roads.

From the fabric, which is tested for strength and uniform thickness, to the thick tread of tough resilient rubber, every feature of the Riverside is of the best material and workmanship. The cushion stock is of high grade rubber of extra thickness to absorb severe shocks. The breaker strip distributes the shock over a wide area, protecting the fabric. Between the fabric and the cushion stock there is specially prepared friction surface which forms a perfect bed for the fabric and gives utmost protection from road heat.

Riverside Tires have made good under the most severe tests—that of hard, rough country driving in all sections of America—by men who insist on knowing the mileage each dollar produces. Performance alone has built up our wonderful Riverside Tire business. One Riverside must sell others.

Your Speedometer will prove they save you money.

The Driving Tread design is a decided improvement over the plain tread, as it has less surface on the road, reducing friction — saving gas. Steering is more easily accomplished. The two grooves tend to prevent side slip, and give them a much better appearance.

"Mr. —— has been in retail stores and with manufacturing concerns, selling a wide range of merchandise, to consumers in the first instance and to retailers and manufacturers in the second instance, so that his is a well rounded and exceedingly valuable diversified business experience, such as it is the privilege of few men to possess.

"His naturally keen, analytical mind is quick to grasp details of even a business new to him; and, being the seasoned, practical, energetic, resourceful, level headed, widely experienced sales executive that he is, he can find new channels of distribution for your products, can increase your sales along the most profitable lines, and secure for you a sound and healthy growth and expansion.

"This man possesses a splendid faculty for picking men, organizing a corps of salesmen and spurring them on to secure big results. Moreover, it is not necessary for him to rely entirely upon salesmen, for his sales letters are highly productive. You can gauge him well when you find men referring to him as a "master sales executive" and "an organizing genius."

"Finally, let me say that he is one of those thorough business men who makes a study of production and financing as related to the selling end of a business, so that he makes a very valuable acquisition to any concern."

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A1 SALESMEN
ARE MAKING
$25,000 TO $50,000
A YEAR WITH US.
Are You Big League Timber?

If you are a real salesman we will make YOU make good, BIG—make you earn from Twenty-five to Fifty Thousand Dollars a year.

To do this we will put you in an exclusive virgin territory and start you off by having one of our experienced men, who has made and received greatly in excess of $50,000 within the last year, and is earning better than this right now, close several of your first sales for you. One new salesman, who recently started with us, lined up seven prospects in less than two weeks, and in three days the same closer who is available to work with the salesmen who respond to this advertisement, made five sales from the seven prospects, netting the new salesman over $3,000 in commission. For another salesman he closed six sales straight. It is very seldom that less than half of your prospects will fail to be closed, and it should not require more than a week or ten days for you to secure six or more prospects. We consider this the strongest support ever given any man on a sales proposition.

The commission on a sale is seldom under $500, even where another salesman does the closing, and it averages greater than this amount. Many orders are later doubled, trebled, quadrupled, and, in some instances increased to more than ten times their original size. The salesman draws full commission on all increases.

We are an old concern, highly rated, with assets of several million dollars, doing a business that will stand the strictest investigation of any one. It is a business that knows no seasons, but is good every month in the year. Our sales are made with all the cards on the table. We sell a concrete thing, which the purchaser sees in its entirety. It is nothing in the nature of stocks, bonds, or insurance. It is a proposition that nine people out of ten are interested in the minute you mention it to them, and you are so equipped that you know who is able to buy before interviewing your prospect. All you need to do is to qualify your prospect, who is readily located, and one of our closers will do the rest until such time as you are strong enough to do your own closing.

We are doing a business of many millions of dollars in a year, and having the facilities to double our business within the next sixty days, are organizing two additional states near Chicago, so the work is necessarily out of town work, although each man is permanently located in his territory. Our men work on a strictly commission basis, and we will not consider applicants unless they have made better than $5,000 per year and expenses. This is a permanent business, and if you can make good you will never need another position, and you can make all the money you have the ability and desire to work for.

Write, giving an outline of your experience and earnings, or call 10 to 11 a. m., or 1:30 to 3 p. m., Room 301, 109 North Dearborn-st.

The applicants who will receive consideration must come from good homes, be neat in appearance, and have a desire to accomplish more than the ordinary employe. A High School education or its equivalent is essential.

Our work is intensely interesting and high grade in nature. It is carried on in a department exclusively for women. An abundance of light and fresh air is available, together with the association of other refined young ladies.

SASKATCHEWAN, DAVIDSON DISTRICT WHEAT FARMS.

Sixteen years' experience ourselves as farmers at Davidson has proven it a sure producing district with no failures. Prospects are excellent now. Improved farms are scarce, but we have put several thousand acres of prairie under cultivation this summer all ready for first wheat crop next spring. We offer them in quarter section, half section, and section farms. These farms are as good and as sure producing as the farms down here that are booming so in price now. They can be bought for a small fraction of the values here. The boom is working farther north every day. The first buyers will have a chance at these improved farms. A real opportunity confronts you. But act before it is too late. Excursion rates every Tuesday. Write us for particulars.

FARMERS' PROFITS

TWENTY BILLION DOLLARS is being paid to American farmers as their share of war profits. Since the armistice prices for farm produce instead of dropping are still increasing. Farmers will keep on reaping golden harvests for many years to come. With wages high or low, through periods of strikes or steady employment the farmers will get their profits just the same.

FARMERS have seen their plowed land increase 71% in value since 1910 because the value of land has gone up with the value of its products.

GET SOME LAND TO FARM if you want to make money. Antrim and Kalkaska counties offer an unequaled opportunity. Here you can get from 160 down to 10 acres, ideal for stockraising and good money earning crops of rye, potatoes, beans, alfalfa, clover, wheat, oats, fruit and vegetables. This being new land the prices are still low, being $15 to $30 per acre. $25 to $50 will start you on the purchase of 10 acres; $50 to $75 on 20 acres; and $100 to $150 on 40 acres, etc., with balance in convenient monthly or yearly payments. The lands are handy to good schools, churches, towns, hard roads, railroads, telephones, and R. F. D. The markets are good.

FOR 21 YEARS we have been helping men to get farm homes of their own. We give free insurance protection while paying for the land and free advice of agricultural experts. There is a Michigan law providing exemption from taxes to actual settlers for five years.

WE HAVE BUILT a new clubhouse with good accommodations for both men and women and show the lands by our own automobiles free of charge. Write today for big free booklet, excursion rates and dates.

WHY THEY BUY

In the first place, the desire of most men is to own land. If not for a home—for an investment. Those who are buying in our district in Forest and Oconto Counties, Wisconsin, do so principally to better themselves. They want to be their own boss and work in the out of doors. In the majority of cases their present positions hold out little promise besides a living and no assurance of an income when their earning capacity slackens on account of age. They see men in our district who have made themselves independent by a few years of diligent work. They see our fertile soils producing crops in abundance. They believe what the other fellow has done they can do, provided they are given an opportunity. This they realize is more than found in the Home Lands Credit System, for the other fellow was very seldom extended any credit except time to pay for his land, and at that it meant principal and interest payments every year. Furthermore, they realize the other fellow started when prices for produce were low, while today they are the highest they have ever been. These are the main reasons for buying our land.

OUR CREDIT SYSTEM

Outlined below does not mean that you have to pay for your land before you get its benefits. The three big lumber companies, of whom we are the Land Department, own the land and desire to sell it. They have no further use for it, as the saw timber is gone. They propose to sell it as quickly as possible. They know the land is good—the security for extending credits is good. Therefore they are willing that the money you pay down as well as additional capital shall be at your disposal with which to improve your land. Furthermore, in addition to extending you credits, you do not have to make any principal or interest payments for five years. The latter is important, as the beginner needs his crop returns for living expenses and further improvements during the first few years. This should convince you that we have faith in the lands we offer. That we are financially able to carry you on these liberal terms we give you as our reference any Chicago or Milwaukee Bank.

SALES PLANS

No. 1—$500 starts you on a farm with buildings, stock, tools. No payment on principal or interest for 5 years.

No. 2—$10 to $15 monthly or $120 yearly secures you benefits of Plan No. 1 when $500 is paid in.

SELECTING LAND

First secure information through the State Department of Agriculture on soil, subsoil, climate, rainfall, crops, etc. Then visit our district. We will hand you a soil auger with which to sample the soil and subsoil. With your hands you can readily detect the "velvety feel" of the silt loam soils. The gritty feel of the sand is not present, nor the compactness of the hardpan clay. Our lands are graded. Agricultural land sells at $20 to $30 per acre. Stony land, which in a great many cases is noted for its fertile soil and rich grass producing quality, is sold as grazing land at very low prices. Sand and swamp, unfit for agriculture, we do not offer for sale.

Write or call today if looking for good land. Get into a good district, where you get real financial backing.

The business possibilities are unusual. We supply the equipment immediately and the Innovation Bakery reaches its peak capacity in about six weeks. This means quick returns.

We train your baker in our training plants in every part of the operation and they make sweeter, better bread than your customers ever ate before.

The Innovation ovens are the most attractive, best baking, quickest good ovens on the market.

You get complete protection in your territory from competition by any other Innovation Daytime bakery.

The property consists of a three stories and basement stone bldg., like new throughout, woodwork, furniture, etc., although we opened in this bldg. in 1910. People ask frequently if it is just new, so well has it always been cared for. There are 36 bedrooms, parlors, consultation room, and lounge, men's clubroom, etc., admirably suited for wards for a private hospital; separate laundry building, adequately equipped, with quarters for employes on upper floor; two detached small bungalows. The basement floor of the main bldg. is at present used for giving all kinds of hydro, electro, and mechano-therapeutical treatments. MAKE YOUR HENS LAY — IT'S YOUR fault if you do not have summer eggs. Only the surplus vitality goes into eggs. If hens are sick, cure them; if sluggish, give them a tonic. Cholerine is both a remedy and a tonic. It prevents and cures Cholera, Roup, Limberneck, and White Diarrhoea in baby chicks, and gives the "pep" that means eggs. A 65c package of tablets treats 17 gallons of drinking water. We give a positive guaranty. If dissatisfied we will give your money back. Germo Lice Powder is death to mites; large can 30c. Sleuth, in Row, Breaks Ex-Auto Racer's Nose

An automobile with Andrew Le Roy, 222 East Huron street, a former auto racer, at the wheel bumped the rear of another car operated by Joseph Triner, 2828 Sheridan road, yesterday in front of 1243 North Dearborn street.

Neither car was damaged, but the jolt "riled" Triner, who is connected with the department of justice. He hopped out and started to "bawl out" Le Roy. The argument ended when Triner's fist landed on Le Roy's nose. Both were taken to the station, where it was discovered the blow had broken Le Roy's nose.

They were released when Le Roy refused to sign a complaint.

FIUME IN ITALIAN REIGN OF TERROR, SAYS CHICAGOAN

Declares Annexation Is Favored Only by a Minority.

Dr. Jurica Biankini came to Chicago yesterday out of the moil of races, hates, and complications that is Fiume and brought with him new and detailed charges against Italian authorities of occupation in that unhappy city.

The nephew of Dr. A. Biankini, 3201 Indiana avenue, and intimate of the Chicago man's brother, who escaped death at the hands of the Italian government only through allied intervention, the youthful physician, soldier, and diplomat is looked upon by the Serbian element in Chicago as a direct authority on the Fiume situation. He enlisted in the Red Cross of the Austrian army when war was declared but succeeded in deserting with comrades to the Italian lines and led a Jugo-Slav legion against the Austrians in the last six months of the war on that front.

Always in the Front.

"We were always in the front," he said, "and our appearance helped to entice many fighting men away from the Austrians. I left the Italians in November to go to Macedonia and my old home in Dalmatia, getting in direct touch again with Fiume and her troubles, then went to Paris attached to the Serbian delegation, coming to Chicago to complete my studies.

"One thing stands out above all others in the Fiume situation. All citizens of other than Italian extraction are united against the annexation of that city to Italy and are prevented from voicing their sentiments to convince the whole world only by the terror struck by Italian authorities of occupation."

The visitor brought with him the original of an appeal against annexation sent to M. Clemenceau by the Jugo-Slav national council in Fiume, a document never before made public in the United States.

Document Accuses Italy.

"The Italian national council continues to spread false news," it says, in part, under date of June 6, "referring to the true will of the population of Fiume. The Jugo-Slav population, terrorized by the local authorities, which are openly protected by Italian troops, find themselves in the impossibility of manifesting their own will and denying the false Italian affirmations for annexation.

"We declare the Italian national council, far from representing the whole of the population, does not even represent the Italian part. It is, instead, a small congregation of demagogues and political agitators which secured power by the help of Italian troops and today practice unheard of terror upon the citizens without distinction of nationality.

Alleges "Force and Arrests."

"It is an unwarranted lie that on Oct. 30 or other date the population of Fiume by means of a plebiscite or otherwise adhered to its annexation to Italy. In May this year 9,871 inhabitants sent a memorial to President Wilson requesting the annexation of Fiume to Jugo-Slavia, which number would have been far greater had not the Italian authorities hindered by force and arrests."

The appeal further states that more than 7,000 Social Democrats and 3,000 Italian citizens also protested against such annexation, and that of the 46,000 inhabitants no more than 5,000 wish the annexation.

"It is an insignificant minority which, with the aid of Italian troops, is making this play for annexation to Italy," declared Dr. Biankini. "It is only just that the United States knows the situation."

WOODMEN OF WORLD RE-ELECT OFFICERS' STAFF

Welcoming of representatives of the Canadian orders took up the greater part of yesterday's session of the sovereign convention of the Woodmen of the World and the Supreme Grove, Woodmen's Circle, in the Hotel Sherman. This convention, with hundreds of delegates, will be in session until Saturday, July 26. At the opening on Thursday the members were addressed by Mayor Thompson, a member.

All officers of the sovereign camp were reelected at a special meeting. Sovereign Commander W. A. Fraser of Omaha was reelected.

Following are the officers: B. W. Jewell, Omaha, sovereign banker; United States Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, sovereign clerk; John T. Yates, Omaha, sovereign escort; S. A. Ferrell, Johnstown, Pa., sovereign watchman; C. D. Mills, Jacksonville, Fla., sovereign sentry; S. L. Caine, Columbus, Miss., sovereign auditor.

City and Rail Officials Inspect Shore Sites

Aldermen, railroad officials, and others interested in carrying out the lake front development-electrification ordinance went over the right of way of the proposed improvement yesterday. The aldermen left the Twelfth street station in a special train and traveled as far as the Indiana line, making frequent stops for inspection. They returned via the lake, boarding the tug Carter H. Harrison at Sixty-fourth street.

Court Issues Order to Jail "Darling Dave"

"Darling Dave" O'Connor was ordered committed to the county jail yesterday by Judge Oscar E. Heard for failing to pay $350 alimony to his divorced wife, Mrs. Ethel Rose O'Connor. The order, which provides O'Connor shall remain in jail until the money is forthcoming, although not longer than six months, is to be held in abeyance until Monday, however.

RECLUSE FOUND DEAD.

An unidentified woman, said to be a recluse, was found dead in her room at 917 North Wells street yesterday by the proprietor of the rooming house in which she lived.

REAL ESTATE MARKET MAKES GOOD SHOWING DESPITE TROUBLES

$230,000 DEAL LEADS WEEK IN REALTY MARKET

Sales and Building Are Menaced by Labor Troubles.

Despite the epidemic of labor troubles from which the city is suffering, last week's real estate made a surprisingly good showing, the volume of business being large and including a number of highly important transactions. Most of the large deals closed had already been practically carried to a conclusion, so that the showing does not reflect the actual market situation as the result of the labor troubles. Unless a settlement of the pending troubles is soon reached, however, the market is certain to be seriously affected.

The same is largely due of the building situation, as the permits issued during the week were fairly well up to the preceding few weeks, but the slump will quickly come unless a settlement is soon reached.

It is to be feared, too, that some large projects will be indefinitely postponed or dropped altogether, even though a settlement is reached, owing to the lack of confidence investors and contractors have in future labor conditions. The feeling is that no prudent man will undertake any important projects so long as it appears that the agreement of today will be repudiated tomorrow by the unions.

Some Optimism Seen.

Despite the present dark outlook there are many who profess to believe that a compromise settlement will soon be reached, owing to the tremendous importance of the issues at stake, especially in their relation to the great constructive program which the greater nations of the world are endeavoring to put into effect.

There was a wide range of trading in the week's business, which included practically everything except down town property. There was little doing in the way of leases of building space in the down town district or elsewhere.

The particularly notable transactions included the $230,000 purchase by E. M. Sargent & Co. in the new north central business district, a Milwaukee avenue purchase involving the erection of a $400,000 theater building, a $300,000 apartment house sale, a purchase by Sears, Roebuck & Co., involving the erection of a $400,000 building, and a large number of fairly good sized transactions in business, flat and residence property.

$230,000 Sale

The north side deal was the sale by the American Merchants Syndicate, a Nebraska corporation, to E. H. Sargent & Co., dealers in chemical supplies, of the property at the southwest corner of Superior and St. Clair streets, for a reported consideration of $230,000. The lot fronts 109 feet on St. Clair street by 150 feet on Superior street, and is improved with a six story and basement reinforced concrete building, erected by the syndicate about five years ago. Chandler, Hildreth & Co., representel Sargent & Co., while F. M. Bowes of the Bowes Realty company represented the syndicate.

Sargent & Co. are now located at 125 West Lake street, where they now occupy the five story and basement building, they also having a warehouse in Kinzie street. They plan to move their offices, salesrooms, and equipment to the Superior street building as soon as the ordnance department of the federal government vacates the five upper floors, which it has been occupying for about two years.

A. W. Shaw to Build.

A number of years ago the property fronting 109 feet on what is now north Michigan avenue, at the southeast corner of Superior street, running through to St. Clair street, 300 feet, was purchased by the late Levi Z. Leiter for a home site. He never improved, however, and later sold to Ayres Boal. Mr. Boal later sold the west half, fronting on Michigan avenue and Superior street, to A. W. Shaw, who plans eventually to raze the present improvements and erect an office building.

In 1914 Mr. Boal sold the east half, 109x150 feet, to the syndicate, which immediately improved, as indicated, and occupied the entire building. Later, incident to the development of a catalogue business, the syndicate offered the upper floors to rent, finally offering the same to the ordnance department of the government free of charge.
